PREFACE.

THIS small work treats of that portion of the law which has solely reference to the trade of Banking. The author has endeavoured to deal fully with his subject within the limits he prescribed to himself, and hopes the pains he has bestowed may make his work of service to the profession.

A TREATISE ON BANKING LAW.

---

CHAPTER I.

BANKS OF ISSUE.

THE scope of this treatise is a statement of those points BANKS OF ISSUE. of the law which are involved in the present practice of banking. It is, therefore, out of place here to trace in detail the progress of legislation from the year 1694, the commencement of legislative interference with the trade of banking, to the present day. At the same time it is difficult without some knowledge of the history of banking to understand the reason and object of the successive Acts of Parliament, and an attempt will be made in the following pages to state enough for the comprehension of the present state of the law.

Banking, as practised in the United Kingdom, has two distinct branches—the one, that of issuing on the credit of the bank promissory notes payable to bearer; the other, that of receiving the deposits of customers with an obligation to repay them either at the place of deposit or elsewhere, and either on demand or at some longer period.

It is true that all banks of issue happen to be also banks of deposit, but the existence of the one branch is not by law dependent on the co-existence of the other;

BANKS OF

and the note issue of banks in England has been the subject of a series of Acts of Parliament from 1694 to 1844, the year of the passing of the Bank Charter Act. It will be convenient to discuss this series of Acts at once and so dispose of the law involved in the note-issue; and to turn afterwards to the various possible constitutions of banks with their respective liabilities under the law as it at present stands.

Previously to the year 1694, banking, in both its branches, had been carried on by individuals and co-partnerships, but the system of receiving deposits, which now forms the chief business of the banks of this country, formed but a small part of the business of that day, and indeed was hardly known as banking at all. The circulation and issue of notes or bills payable to bearer on demand was then thought the chief function of a bank, as it was, in fact, the source of the chief profit; and the term bank meant a bank of circulation and issue, and had no reference to what is now known as a bank of deposit. See Bank of England v. Anderson, 3 Bing. N. C. 589.

5 & 6 W.
& M. c. 20.

In the year 1694, the 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 20, empowered their Majesties to incorporate the subscribers to a loan by the name of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. A privilege was conferred on the bank (sec. 28) of making their bills obligatory and of credit under the seal of the corporation transferable by endorsement under the hand of the holder, and allowing the assignee to sue thereon in his own name. The charter of incorporation was shortly issued, and was followed by a statute passed two years afterwards (8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 20), which enacted (as was explained by 15 Geo. 2, c. 15, s. 5), that no other bank should be erected, established, or allowed by Parliament. This was followed by the statute

8 & 9 Will.
3, c. 20.

6 Anne,
c. 22.

of Anne which enacted (6 Anne, c. 22, s. 9) that no body other than the Bank of England, or co-partnership exceeding six persons in number, should "borrowe, owe or take up any sums of money on their bills or notes payable on demand, or at any less time than six months from the borrowing thereof," thus preventing competition with the Bank of England by laying a check on the issue of negotiable bills or notes having the security of a large number of co-partners, and made payable on demand, but not interfering with the issue of notes by a co-partnership not exceeding six in number, nor with the trade of a bank whose business was confined to receiving deposits.

The prohibition in the statute of Anne, against the issue of notes payable on demand, by co-partnerships of more than six persons, was repeated in succeeding Acts with little variation of form, and less of meaning, up to the year 1826. In this year the 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, was passed for (amongst other things) better regulating co-partnerships of certain bankers in England. The object of this Act was to allow the issue of notes payable on demand by co-partnerships of more than six persons, outside a radius of sixty-five miles from London, on the security of all the persons composing the co-partnership.

Under this Act many banks were formed outside the sixty-five mile radius. Their note issue, begun under this Act, is now entirely regulated as to its amount by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, but the right to issue is still conditional on their carrying on business wholly outside the sixty-five mile radius, so that banking co-partnerships of issue formed under this Act must surrender their right to issue notes if they set up a house of business or an establishment in London. See 27 & 28 Vic. c. 32, s. 1.

By a subsequent Act of 9 Geo. 4, c. 23, any persons carrying on the business of a banker or bankers in England (except within the city of London, or within three miles BANKS OF thereof), were empowered to issue notes payable on de-ISSUE. mand, if they obtained a licence and gave security.

3 & 4 Will. In the year 1833 the legislature passed a restrictive
4, c. 98. Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 2), whereby co-partnerships of more than six persons were expressly prohibited from issuing notes payable on demand, in London or within sixty-five miles thereof, but were allowed to carry on the business of banking within those limits provided they confined their issue to bills at not less than six months date (sec. 3).

Still no restrictions were imposed on the issue of notes by co-partnerships not exceeding six persons in number ; but the effect of this legislation was to enable the Bank of England to monopolise the whole issue of notes payable on demand in the metropolis.

7 & 8 Vic. In the year 1844 a new departure was made by an
c. 32. Act, which still regulates the whole note issue of England. It is entitled "an Act to regulate the issue of bank notes, and for giving the Governor and Company of the Bank of England certain privileges for a limited period," and is commonly known as the Bank Charter Act (7 & 8 Vic. c. 32).

This Act separates the banking and issue department of the Bank of England, and authorises the issue department to issue to the banking department notes payable on demand to the amount of fourteen million pounds, on the credit of securities of equivalent value ; the amount of notes may be increased and exchanged for gold coin or gold or silver bullion, and power is given under certain circumstances to increase the issue of notes.

The issue by other banks in England and Wales of bank notes for the payment of money to bearer on demand, is thus dealt with by the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, viz. :—

bank of

By sec. 10, after the 19th of July, 1844, no person, other than a banker, who, on the 6th of May, 1844, was lawfully issuing his own bank notes, shall make or issue bank notes in any part of the United Kingdom.

BANKS OF

---

And by sec. 11, after the 19th of July, 1844, it shall not be lawful for any banker to draw, accept, make or issue, in England and Wales, any bill of exchange or promissory note, or engagement for the payment of money payable to bearer on demand, or to borrow, owe or take up in England and Wales, any sum or sums of money on the bills or notes of such banker, payable to bearer on demand, save and except that it shall be lawful for any banker who was on the 6th of May, 1844, carrying on the business of a banker in England or Wales, and was then lawfully issuing in England or Wales his own bank notes under the authority of a license to that effect, to continue to issue such notes to the extent and under the conditions hereinafter mentioned, but not further or otherwise; and the right of any company or partnership to continue to issue such notes shall not be in any manner prejudiced or affected by any change which may hereafter take place in the personal composition of such company or partnership, either by the transfer of any shares or share therein, or by the admission of any new partner or member thereto, or by the retirement of any present partner or member therefrom; provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any company or partnership, now consisting of only six or less than six persons, to issue bank notes at any time after the number of partners therein shall exceed six in the whole.

Restriction
issue of
notes.

The result of these sections is that within the city of London and three miles round, the Bank of England can alone issue notes payable on demand to bearer. Beyond that limit and within sixty-five miles, such notes may be issued by banking partnerships of less than six members, who were lawfully issuing their notes under a license on May 6, 1844, and by the Bank of England; and beyond the sixty-five miles limit by the Bank of England and by partnerships of six or more or less partners who were lawfully issuing their notes under a license on May 6, 1844.

BANKS OF

Banker's
license.

The license referred to is a license charged with a duty of thirty pounds, enabling (under 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 24) bankers, or banking co-partnerships not exceeding six persons in number, to issue stamped promissory notes payable to bearer on demand for sums not exceeding one hundred pounds, or enabling (under 9 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 1) all bankers carrying on business, except within the city of London or within three miles thereof, to issue, on unstamped paper, promissory notes for five pounds and upwards payable to bearer on demand, or bills of exchange payable to order on demand, if drawn as therein prescribed. This license is to be issued by the Commissioners of Stamps (9 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 2), and (7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 22) each banker is to take out a separate license for each town where he issues notes requiring such a license, but is not to be required to take out more than four licenses.

The license has (55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 24; 9 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 4) to specify the proper names and places of abode of the persons, or the proper name and description of any body corporate to whom the same shall be granted, and the name of the town or place where, and the name of the bank, as well as the partnership name, style, or firm, under which such notes are to be issued, and where granted to persons in partnership, shall set forth the names and places of abode of all persons concerned in the partnership, but where (24 & 25 Vic. c. 91, s. 35) the partnership consists of more than six persons, it is sufficient to specify the names and places of abode of any six or more of such persons.

The number of the bankers entitled to issue notes being thus fixed by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, a method is provided for ascertaining at once the existing average issue of each banker, which, when ascertained, is to be the limit of issue for the future (sec. 13), and the penalty enacted on a bank issuing in excess is a sum equal to the amount by which any future average monthly circulation shall have exceeded the amount which such bank is authorised to issue (sec. 17).

Already, bankers issuing notes were bound (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 83, s. 1; 4 & 5 Vic. c. 50) to make returns every four weeks of the amount of their notes in circulation, and by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 18, a return of the amount of bank notes in circulation on every day during the week ending on the next preceding Saturday, and an account of the average amount of the bank notes of such banker in circulation during the same week, verified by the signature of the banker or chief cashier, are to be made weekly, on some date to be fixed by the commissioners in the form prescribed by the Act.

Bank notes payable to bearer on demand for less than five pounds were prohibited to be issued or re-issued by the Bank of England, or any banker in England, after the 5th of April, 1829 (7 Geo. 4, c. 6, s. 3).

Any society or company, or any persons in partnership, carrying on the business of banking, may draw, accept, or endorse bills of exchange not being payable to bearer on demand (7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 26).

Bank notes for the purposes of the Stamp Acts are at present defined by two Acts of Parliament, the 17 & 18 Vic. c. 98, and the 33 & 34 Vic. c. 97, but the duty is fixed by the latter Act.

The 17 & 18 Vic. c. 98, s. 11, defines a bank note in the following terms:—

That all bills, drafts, or notes (other than notes of the Bank of England), which shall be issued by any banker, or the agent of any banker for the payment of money to

CHAPTER II.

BANKS OF DEPOSIT.

BANKS OF DEPOSIT. THE constitutions of banks of deposit may best be considered in groups arranged in chronological order.

- I. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and still carrying on business under that Act, subject to a few modifications in its details introduced by later Acts.
- II. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and reconstituted under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113.
- III. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49.
- IV. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and registered under 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89.
- V. Banks formed under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98.
- VI. Banks formed under 1 & 2 Vic. c. 73.
- VII. Banks formed under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, and registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, or under 21 & 22 Vic. c. 91.
- VIII. Banks formed and registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, and 21 & 22 Vic. c. 91.
- IX. Banks formed under the Companies Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vic. c. 89).
- X. Private Banks, i.e., banks composed of any number of persons not exceeding ten.

Banks under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46.

- I. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46. These are co-partnerships of more than six persons, carrying on business prior to May 6, 1844, beyond a radius of sixty-five miles from London. For convenience sake, under this head, will be considered banks formed BANKS OF DEPOSIT. under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, for carrying on business within a radius of sixty-five miles from London, since the privileges of banks, formed under the last-mentioned Act, are, as will be seen, dependent on their making returns similar to those of banks under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46.

As we have seen, no restrictions were imposed up to 1826 on the trade of receiving deposits, either as to the number of partners or the locality of the business; but the attention of the legislature was directed to prohibiting the issue of notes by co-partnerships of more than six persons within the radius of sixty-five miles of London, and controlling the issue by like co-partnerships beyond that radius. But, under the Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, already mentioned, co-partnerships were formed outside the sixty-five miles combining the functions of issuing notes and receiving deposits; and carried on their business with considerable success. It had been long thought that within sixty-five miles of London the Bank of England was the only Joint Stock Company which could receive deposits, as well as the only company that could issue notes: but it began to be doubted whether the privileges of the Bank of England did extend beyond forbidding the issue of negotiable instruments. These doubts were set at rest by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, which enacted (sec. 3), That any body politic, or corporate, or society, or company, or partnership, although consisting of more than six persons, may carry on the trade or business of banking in London, or within sixty-five miles thereof, provided such body, &c., do not borrow, owe, or take up in England, any sum or sums of money on their bills or notes payable on demand, or at any less time than six months from the borrowing thereof during the continuance of the privileges granted by this Act to the Governor and

And (by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, s. 47) all such companies can sue and be sued in the name of a public officer, and may have judgments, decrees, and orders enforced against them, in the same manner as is provided for companies under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, provided they make out and deliver similar accounts and returns.

Vic. c. 32.

By 27 & 28 Vic. c. 32, s. 1, banks discontinuing their issue of notes and commencing to carry on their business in London, preserve their privilege of suing and being sued in the name of a public officer and their privileges as to the enforcement of judgments, decrees, and orders.

The 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, therefore, still governs the constitution and liability of all banking co-partnerships exceeding six persons in number and carrying on business on the 6th of May, 1844, who have not obtained letters patent under the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, or registered themselves under the Joint Stock Banking Companies' Act, of 1857, or under the Companies' Act of 1862, and it becomes necessary to examine the 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, in detail.

By section 1, the members of such co-partnerships are to be responsible for the payment of all bills and notes issued and all sums of money borrowed or taken up or owed by the co-partnership; and this liability attaches to every person who is a member at the date of the bills or notes, or becomes or is a member before or at the time of the bills becoming payable, or a member at the time of the borrowing of the money, or while any money remains due or at the time of its becoming due.

public officer, of the name of any person who shall have ceased to be a member, and the name of any person who shall have become a member, either in addition to or instead of any former member. These returns are to be delivered to the Commissioners of Stamps and filed by them. A copy of such return certified under the hand of one of the commissioners is, upon proof of the handwriting of the commissioner, to be evidence of the facts therein alleged. A certified copy of the return is evidence of the facts pertinently stated in it; it is not necessary to prove that the affidavit verifying it was made by the public registered officer (Bosanquet v. Woodford, 5 Q. B. 310).

BANKS OF

The fact of the return having been made, is not a condition precedent to the public officer's right to sue on behalf of the company (Bonar v. Mitchell, 5 Ex. 415).

By sec. 9, all actions, suits, petitions in bankruptcy, and all proceedings at law or in equity, by or against the co-partnership, and whether against or by members of the co-partnership, are to be commenced and instituted in the name of or against any one of the public officers (25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 205, 3rd schedule, part 2). No more than one action or suit is to be brought for the recovery of one and the same demand, in case the merits have been tried in such suit (7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 10; 1 & 2 Vic. c. 96, s. 2; 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 205).

The co-partnership may sue and be sued by any person who has been or is a member of the co-partnership (1 & 2 Vic. c. 96, s. 1; 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 205).

Members may sue and be sued.

A member's share in the capital of the co-partnership is not to be set off against any demand which such co-partnership may have against him (1 & 2 Vic. c. 96, s. 4).

Decrees and judgments made or obtained against the public officer are to take effect against the co-partnership (7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 10).

The 13th sec. (7 Geo. 4, c. 46) provides that on a judgment obtained against any public officer, execution may issue first against any member, for the time being, of the partnership (i.e., at the time of issuing the sci. fa., Bradley v. Eyre, 11 M. & W. 432), and secondarily against any person who had ceased for not more than three years to be a member, but who was a member when the contract recovered on was entered into; but the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, affords a means of escaping this personal liability for the whole amount of the judgment which will probably be adopted by members in such cases; it enacts (25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 199c), that whenever execution or other process issued on a judgment, decree, or order against a person authorised to be sued as a nominal defendant on behalf of the company is returned unsatisfied, the company may be wound up; any person (sec. 200) liable to pay or contribute to the debts of the company is deemed a contributory, on whose petition the company may be wound up, and after the order for winding up is made, no suit, action, or other legal proceeding can be commenced or proceeded with against a contributory without leave of the court (sec. 202).

The distinctive features of a co-partnership under this Act were thus summed up by Quain, J. :—

“The company is not a corporation, and has therefore no common seal. It is a co-partnership created by deed or articles of co-partnership for a particular purpose, with certain statutable privileges. It can sue and be sued only in the name of one of its public officers, and in all litigious business the company is represented by one of its public officers, who must be a member of the company, and individual members cannot be sued in respect of transactions with the company till a judgment or decree has been first obtained against the company, through one of its public officers. In Powles v. Page, 3 C. B. 16, a company established under this Act was considered a quasi corporate body, so as not to be affected by what may have been known to any individual member. The Act contains no provision as to the manner in which the company shall make or sign deeds, contracts, or documents of any description. It confers no authority on the public officer to bind the company, but makes him the representative of the bank only for litigious purposes, and although he must be a member of the company, he may have nothing to do with the management of its affairs. It seems obvious, therefore, from the nature of its constitution, as a fluctuating and numerous body, that the company cannot affix its signature to documents otherwise than by the hand of some individual or individuals who, by the articles of co-partnership, are appointed to represent the general body in such matters" (Swift v. Winterbotham, L. R. 8 Q. B. 244, 250).

This kind of bank is bound to make returns, under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21, which enacts that—Every banker in England and Wales who is carrying on, or shall hereafter carry on business as such, shall on the first of January in each year, or within fifteen days thereafter, make a return to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, at their head office in London, of his name, residence, and occupation, or in the case of a company or partnership, of the name, residence, and occupation of every person composing or being a member of such company or partnership, and also the name of the firm under which such banker, company, or partnership, carry on the business of banking, and of every place where such business is carried on. And if any such banker, company, or partnership, shall omit or refuse to make such return within fifteen days after the said 1st of January, or shall wilfully make other than a true return of the persons as herein

Banks under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113.

II. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and re-constituted under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113.

Any company of more than six persons, carrying on the trade or business of bankers in England before May 6, 1844, might, after the passing of 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, petition the Queen to grant them letters patent under that Act; and (sec. 45) if upon their compliance with the provisions contained in the Act, letters patent were granted, it then became lawful for them to carry on their trade and business of bankers according to 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, and not otherwise.

A company re-constituted under these conditions was in all respects similar to a company formed under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, whose incidents will be found below, p. 21.

Banks under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49.

III. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49.

Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, might register under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, if they consisted of seven or more persons, and had a capital of fixed amount and divided into shares of a fixed amount.

Since 1862, the provisions of the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89 apply to such companies as if they had been registered, but not formed under the last-mentioned Act, and there seems to be no difference now between the constitution of companies formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, and those registered under 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, which are considered in the next section.

IV. Banks formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and registered under 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89.

By sec. 180, a copartnership, formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, existing on November 2, 1862, may register under the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, according to the terms of its deed of copartnership, either as a limited company, or a company limited by shares, or a company limited by a guarantee, for the purpose of carrying on business, or with a view to winding up.

Sec. 181. Such a company, if it have a permanent paid up or nominal capital of a fixed amount divided into shares, also of a fixed amount, or held transferable as stock, may be registered as a company limited by shares on giving thirty days' notice of its intention to register as a limited company to its customers (sec. 188).

But (sec. 182) no banking company claiming to issue notes can limit its liability in respect of such issue.

The effect of registration (sec. 196) is to make the deed of settlement, contract of copartnership, letters patent or other instrument constituting or regulating the company, equivalent to a registered memorandum of association and articles of association under the Act; and all the provisions of the Act are to apply to such company and the members, contributories and creditors thereof, in the same manner as if it had been formed under the Act: except that—

1. The regulations for management of a company limited by shares in table A of the schedule shall not apply.
2. That the provisions of the Act relating to the numbering of shares shall not apply to any joint stock company whose shares are not numbered.
3. That no company shall have power to alter any provision in any Act of Parliament relating to the company.

4. Nor without the leave of the Board of Trade in any letters patent relating to the company.
5. In the event of the company being wound up, persons liable before registration are to continue liable to all debts and liabilities of the company contracted before registration and to the costs of winding up.
6. That a company having power to alter its constitution before registration shall possess such power after registration and not otherwise.

Changes caused by registration.

These appear to be the main changes affected by the registration of a copartnership formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46—

1. The liability of a past member to contribute to the assets of the company ceases at the expiration of one year from the time he ceased to be a member (sec. 38).
2. Public officers have not to be appointed, as the company can sue and be sued in its own name, being a body corporate (25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 18).
3. The duty of making the returns prescribed by 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, is removed, but the following returns have to be made under the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies by a company having capital divided into shares (sec. 26), an annual list of members, with names, addresses, and occupations, and the shares held by each; a summary specifying the amount of capital and number of shares into which it is divided; the amount of calls made on each share; the total amount of calls received; the total amount of calls unpaid; the total amount of shares forfeited; and the names, addresses and occupations of the persons who, since the last list was made, have ceased to be members. Returns have to be made by a company not having a capital divided into shares (sec. 45), of the names and addresses, and occupations, of its directors and managers with a notification of any change that may have taken place since the last return. This return is in addition to the one required of bankers by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21. See infra.

4. The late copartnership being after registration a corporation, either the corporation or a member may, in an action by the other of them, claim to set off any debt or cause of action; and by sec. 17, all moneys payable by any member to the company, in pursuance of the conditions or regulations of the company, are to be deemed a debt due from such member to the company.
5. The registered company must (sec. 39) have a registered office, to which all communications and notices may be addressed: it must (sec. 43) keep a register of all mortgages affecting the property of the company: and (sec. 49) hold a general meeting at least once a year.

The company is bound, under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21, to make returns yearly on the 1st of January, or within fifteen days after, to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, at their head office in London, of the names, residences, and occupation of every person composing such company, and of the name of the firm under which, and the place where, the business is carried on.

VI. Banks formed under 1 Vic. c. 73.

The Crown has power under this Act to grant by letters patent under the great seal any privileges which could be granted by a charter of incorporation to any body of persons associated together for trading and other purposes though not incorporated. The privileges may be (sec. 3) power to sue and be sued in the name of an officer of the company, and (sec. 4) a limitation of the individual liability of the members of such company.

A deed of partnership is to be executed (sec. 5), containing, amongst other things, a division of the undertaking into a number of shares, and an appointment of two or more officers to sue and be sued. Returns (sec. 10) are to be made of the changes in the members of the company, and (secs. 20 and 21) membership begins or ceases from the date of the registration of the return.

Judgments against the company are available against the members individually to the amount unpaid on their shares (sec. 24).

Such a company may register under the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, Part VII., as its deed of settlement may allow, and after registration the Act applies to it as to a partnership formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46.

These banks are bound to make yearly returns under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21. See ante.

VII. Banks formed under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, and registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, or under 21 & 22 Vic. c. 91.

This Act was the first Act to regulate joint stock banks in England. It provided that from the 6th of BANKS OF DEPOSIT. May, 1844, all banks in future should only carry on business under letters patent to be obtained in the manner pointed out in the Act. The deed of partnership of the company was to be prepared according to a form to be approved of by the Board of Trade, and to contain the specific provisions for the following purposes:—

1. For holding ordinary general meetings every year.
2. For holding extraordinary general meetings on the requisition of at least nine shareholders, holding among them, at least, twenty-one shares.
3. For the management of the affairs of the company and the election and qualification of the directors.
4. For the retirement of a certain proportion of the directors. (This clause has been repealed by 19 & 20 Vic. c. 100, s. 112.)
5. For preventing the company from purchasing any shares or making any advances to any person on the security of a share in the partnership business.
6. For the publication of assets and liabilities once at least in every calendar month.
7. For a yearly audit of the accounts by two auditors chosen at a general meeting.
8. For the yearly communication of the auditors' report and of a balance sheet and profit and loss account to each share-holder.
9. For the appointment of a manager.

It was a condition precedent to the issuing of the letters patent that the amount of each share should not be less than £100 (sec. 2). Companies formed under this Act were compelled to register under the BANKS OF DEPOSIT. Joint Stock Banking Companies Act 1857 (20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, s. 4).

This Act was repealed by 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, with the proviso that this latter Act should (sec. 176) apply to companies registered, but not formed, under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, in the same manner as to companies registered, but not formed, under 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89; and that a company registered under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, should be deemed to be registered under the Companies Act 1861 from the date of their registration under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113.

Effect of registration.

The effect of registration (sec. 196) is to make the deed of settlement under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, equivalent to the memoranda of association and articles of association under the Companies Act 1862, and to place the company generally under the provisions of the last-mentioned Act, but subject to certain provisions which have been set out above (p. 17).

It was further provided (as the regulations respecting the transmission of shares in 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, were repealed by 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 12), that any such company (sec. 178) may cause its shares to be transferred in manner hitherto in use, or in such other manner as the company may direct.

In all other respects a company formed under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, is governed by the Companies Act 1862.

Power is given to a bank registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, to register itself again as a limited company under that Act (21 & 22 Vic. c. 91), and to a company which so registered itself the Act of 1862 applies as if the company had been formed and registered under that Act.

Companies under these Acts are bound to make yearly returns under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32, s. 21. See ante.

Banks under 20 & 21

VIII. Banks formed and registered under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, and 21 & 22 Vic. c. 91.

The 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, The Joint Stock Banking Companies Act 1857, incorporating The Joint Stock Companies Acts 1856 and 1857, extended the principle of joint stock companies to banking companies by allowing (sec. 13) seven or more persons associated for the purpose of banking to register themselves under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, as a company other than limited, but subject to the condition that the shares into which the capital was divided should not be of less amount than £100.

The 21 & 22 Vic. c. 91, was passed in the next year, to enable banking companies to be formed on the principle of limited liability, and repealing the prohibition in 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, s. 13, allowed companies to register themselves under the last-mentioned Act as of limited liability. The incorporation, constitution, and government of such banks, whether of limited or unlimited liability, were regulated by the Joint Stock Companies Acts 1856 and 1857. These last two Acts, together with the 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, and the 21 & 22 Vic. c. 91, have been in terms repealed by the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, which, by sec. 176, is to apply to all companies formed and registered under the above Acts in the same manner in the case of a limited company, as if such company had been formed and registered under this Act as a company limited by shares; and in the case of a company other than a limited company, as if such company had been formed and registered as an unlimited company.

1. But the date of their registration under the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, is to be taken to be that of their registration under the 20 & 21 Vic. c. 49.
2. Such companies have the power of altering by special resolution any provisions contained in the table marked B (being the regulations for management of the company) annexed to the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856.

3. Such companies, if unlimited, have the power of altering by special resolution any regulations relating to the amount of capital or its distribution into shares, notwithstanding such regulations are contained in the memorandum of association.

In other respects, therefore, these companies are governed like other joint stock companies by the 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89.

Banking companies under these Acts have to make yearly returns in pursuance of 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21. See ante.

Banks

IX. Banks formed under the Companies Act 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89).

This Act regulates all partnerships exceeding a certain number of persons formed for the acquisition of gain from November 2, 1862; and as it is impossible in the limits of this treatise to give a useful abstract of this and subsequent Acts, those sections alone will be cited which deal exclusively with the business of banking.

Prohibi-

By sec. 4, no company, association, or partnership consisting of more than ten persons shall be formed after November 2, 1862, for the purpose of carrying on the business of banking, unless it is registered as a company under this Act, or is formed in pursuance of some other Act of Parliament or of letters patent.

Company
to publish statement.

Sec. 44 provides that every limited banking company under this Act shall, before it commences business, and also on the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August in every year during which it carries on business, publish a statement in the form marked D in the schedule, and a copy of such statement is to be put up in a conspicuous place where the business of the company is carried on, and if default is made a penalty is enacted of £5 for every day during which the default continues.

Sec. 47. A promissory note or bill of exchange shall be deemed to have been made, accepted, or endorsed on behalf of any company under this Act, if made, accepted, or endorsed in the name of the company by any person acting under the authority of the company, or if made, accepted, or endorsed by or on behalf of or on account of the company by any person acting under the authority of the company.

Promissory notes and bills.

Sec. 56 empowers the Board of Trade to appoint one or more competent inspectors to examine into the affairs of a banking company under this Act, and to report thereon, on the application of members holding not less than one third part of the whole shares of the company at the time being issued.

Examination of affairs of company by inspectors.

Sec. 182 provides that no banking company claiming to issue notes in the United Kingdom shall be entitled to limited liability in respect of such issue.

No limitation of liability for note issue.

By sec. 188, a banking company that desires to register itself with limited liability is to give thirty days' notice to each customer.

Notice of registration to be given.

Banking companies under this Act have to make yearly returns in pursuance of 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21, in the same way as private banks. See ante.

X. Private Banks. It has been lawful, ever since the year 1857, for any number of persons not exceeding ten to carry on the business of banking (20 & 21 Vic. c. 49, s. 12, re-enacted 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 4, third schedule, part 3) without being registered under the Joint Stock Acts.

void under 57 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 3, which enacts that no spiritual person, having or holding any dignity, prebend, canonry, benefice, stipendiary curacy of lectureship, shall by himself or by any other for him or to his use, engage in or carry on any trade or dealing for gain or profit, and that every bargain or contract so made by him or by any to his use in any such trade or dealing contrary to this Act shall be utterly void and of none effect. This section having been held to apply to the trade of banking (Hall v. Franklin, 3 M. & W. 259, 268), carried on by a partnership under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, in which two of the partners were spiritual persons within the Act, a subsequent statute (4 Vic. c. 14) rendered legal and valid contracts entered into by associations or copartnerships of more than six persons, though such spiritual persons were members of or interested in the copartnership, provided that it should not be lawful for a spiritual person beneficed, or performing ecclesiastical duty, to act as a director, or managing partner, or to carry on the business in person.

Private bankers, as all other bankers, are bound to make yearly returns, under the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21.

Purchase and sale of bank shares (30
Vic. c. 29).

In the year 1867, an Act (30 Vic. c. 29) was passed prescribing certain formalities in the purchase or sale of bank shares.

It enacts (sec. 1) that all contracts, agreements, and tokens of sale and purchase, for the sale or transfer of any shares, stock, or interest in any joint stock banking company, shall be void, unless such contract, &c., set forth in writing the numbers by which such shares, &c., are distinguished on the register of the banking company; or if there be no register, the contract, &c., is to set forth the person in whose name such shares, &c., shall at the time of making the contract stand as the registered owner on the books of the banking company, the person inserting a false number or name is to be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour.

CHAPTER III.

BANKER AND CUSTOMER.

RELATION
BANKER
AND

---

THE relation between a banker and his customer is that of debtor and creditor, with the obligation superadded that the banker is bound to repay his debt when called for by the draft of the customer (Foley v. Hill, 2 H. L. C. 28; Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321; Goodwin v. Roberts, L. R. 10 Ex. p. 351).

The customer, by paying in money, makes a loan to the banker: the money when paid in becomes the money of the banker.

There is nothing of a fiduciary character in the relation of banker and customer with respect to the money paid by the customer to his account; consequently, a bill in equity will not lie to recover the money so paid (Foley v. Hill, supra; Smith v. Leveau, 2 De G. J. & S. 5). The banker is not responsible to the customer for the use he may make of such money (Ex parte Waring, 36 L. J. Chanc. 151).

The relation of debtor and creditor is not altered where the account has been overdrawn, and in fact the banker is the creditor and not the debtor of his customer (Hardy v. Veasey, L. R. 3 Ex. 107).

Several accounts of one customer.

A customer may and frequently does open several accounts with different headings; all these accounts are, unless in the case of trust accounts, which are discussed below, in reality one account (In re European Bank, Agra Bank Claim, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 41), and may be so treated by the bank.

Even where the accounts are at different branches the bank may blend them if they are of the same character, and dishonour a cheque drawn against one account, if by combining the accounts a balance in favour of the customer at the branch drawn against is turned into a balance against the customer on the general account (Garnett v. McKewan, L. R. 8 Ex. 10).

BANKER

---

Banker
may blend several accounts,

But where several accounts are opened by one customer they may be kept separate, either by special agreement or by notice to the bankers of such cogent character that the banker will be inferred to have agreed to keep the accounts separate.

agreed,

As a banker need not allow his customer to open several accounts unless he pleases, it has been held that sufficient notice has been given him of the character of the account by the terms of the heading under which it was opened if the account is headed in such a way that the banker cannot fail to know it is a trust account. Thus an account opened as "Police Account" was held to be one which the banker could not fail to know was a trust account, and to be kept separate from the customer's private account (Ex parte Kingston, in re Gross, L. R. 6 Chan. Ap. 632). Again, though an executor, by transferring his testator's account to his own account as "executor," creates a personal debt between himself and the bank; the effect of the account being opened as an executorship account is to affect the bank with notice of the equities, if any, attaching to that fund (Bailey v. Finch, L. R. 7 Q. B. 34).

or account is a trust account.

Where the banker has notice that an account is a trust account, the balance standing to the credit of that account will, on the bankruptcy of the person who kept it, belong to the trust, and therefore cannot be set off by the banker against a debt due on the private account of the bankrupt (Ex parte Kingston, in re Gross, supra). And

AND

---

such a trust account is so distinct from the private account, that if a customer having overdrawn his private account asks that he may further overdraw it for the purpose of paying money into the trust account, the banker is entitled to refuse such accommodation (Ex parte Kingston, in re Gross, supra).

When
banker
held liable for breach of trust by his customer.

A banker is not bound, as a general rule, to inquire either the purpose for which a cheque is drawn upon any account (Ex parte Kingston, in re Gross, L. R. 6 Ch. Ap. 639), nor the source from which moneys have come that are paid into an account (Boddenham v. Hoskyns, 21 L. J. Chanc. 867). But where an executor or trustee has, committing thereby a breach of trust, paid a debt due from him to the banker out of money belonging to his testator's or cestui que trust estate, with the knowledge of the banker, the banker will be required to make restitution for the benefit of the estate, for being aware of the intended misappropriation or breach of trust he allowed himself to reap the benefit of it (Boddenham v. Hoskyns, supra).

If it be shown that any personal benefit to the banker himself is designed or stipulated for, that circumstance above all others will most readily establish the fact that the banker is in privity with the breach of trust about to be committed (per Ld. Cairns, C., Gray v. Johnston, L. R. 3 E&I.1).

The bare fact that money standing to the credit of the trust account was transferred to and so balanced an overdrawn account, is not a sufficient benefit within this rule (Gray v. Johnston, supra).

The benefit must be one stipulated for or designed, as in consequence of demands made for payment of an overdrawn account. Thus, where a receiver of rents who had with the bank two accounts—the one a private account which was overdrawn, and the other an account known to the bank to be a trust account and not overdrawn—transferred, in consequence of demands for payment by the bank, a sum from the trust account to balance his private account, the bank were compelled to make good to the trust account the sum so transferred (Boddenham v. Hoskyns, 21 L. J. Chan. 867; 2 De G. M. & S. 903).

BANKER
AND

A banker who is aware that such a breach of trust is to be committed by which he will benefit, is justified in refusing to honour a cheque for that purpose (Gray v. Johnston, supra), and equity will restrain an action against him for such refusal (Hunt v. Maniere, 34 Beav. 157). If trust money is deposited with a banker, and he receives notice that the trustees are about to draw out the money and apply it to their own purposes, and that a bill for an injunction is about to be filed, and thereupon refuses to pay over to the trustees, equity will restrain an action against him to obtain the benefit of a breach of trust (Hunt v. Maniere, 34 Beav. 157; 11 Jur. N. S. 28).

A banker who permits a sum of money to be lodged at his house to be applied to an illegal purpose may be indicted for a conspiracy along with those who are to apply the money to such purpose (R. v. Pollman, 2 Camp. 229).

It is the practice of bankers to present and procure payment of drafts and bills of exchange from the payees on behalf of their customers, carrying the proceeds when obtained to the customer's account. But if the customer has in fact no title to the draft or bill, the banker is liable to the rightful owner for the proceeds of the draft or bill, though he has already paid them over to his customer. For the customer having no title, the banker, his agent, can have no better title than his principal (Ogden v. Benas, L. R. 9 C. P. 513; Arnold v. The Cheque Bank, 1 C. P. D. 578).

But the 39 & 40 Vict. c. 81, sec. 12, enacts that a banker who has in good faith and without negligence received payment for a customer of a cheque crossed generally or specially to himself shall not, in case the title to the cheque proves defective, incur any liability to the true

Banker liable for neglect in collection. It has been held in America that a bank receiving bills for collection, whether payable at its counter or elsewhere, is liable for any neglect arising in its collection, by which any of the parties are discharged, whether of the officers or other agents or correspondents of the bank or notary employed by the bank (Ayrault v. The Pacific Bank, 7 The American Reports, following Allen v. The Merchant Bank of New York, 22 Wend. 215).

Who may sue for money paid to an account with a banker. As has been said, money paid in to an account opened in a man's own name is primâ facie his money, and a loan by him to the banker which the banker is bound to repay to him. But where a person lends money nominally on his own account, but really on account of and as the loan of another, the real lender may sue for the money (Sims v. Bond, 5 B. & Ad. 393). If, therefore, any person entitled to the money either jointly with the customer, or as the principal of the customer, can show that the loan though nominally that of the customer, was in reality his own, that is, made by him, he can recover the amount from the banker (Sims v. Bond). It is not sufficient for such person to show that the interest of the customer in the money paid in was in fact joint with others, or that he was an agent acting on behalf of others, for the loan may still have been made by the customer alone (Sims v. Bond). The fact that the account in the ledger and pass-book stands in the customer's name alone is not conclusive, but throws on the parties suing the obligation of showing they were the real contracting parties (Cooke v. Seely, 2 Ex. 746).

Who the banker may sue for balance of an over-drawn account. On the same principle, a banker, to recover the balance of an overdrawn account from persons other than the customer in whose name the account stands, must show the customer had authority to contract a loan on behalf of the others sued, and that the loan was in fact made not to the customer alone, but to the customer either jointly with or on behalf of the others sued (Alliance Bank v. Kearsley, L. R. 6 C. P. 433).

It is improper for a banker to disclose the state of his customer's account except on a reasonable occasion; but whether the law implies a contract to this effect by the banker, or whether from the relation between the banker and customer, a duty is implied in the former not to do anything to the damage of his customer, has yet to be decided (see Tassell v. Cooper, 9 C. B. 509, 515; Foster v. Bank of London, 3 F. & F. 214; Hardy v. Veasey, L. R. 3 Ex. 107). The distinction is one of importance, for if there be an obligation by contract the banker is liable for nominal damages on making the disclosure, though no injury whatever has resulted. In the other case special damage must be proved to make a breach of duty actionable (Hardy v. Veasey, supra).

BANKER
AND

It is for the jury to decide whether the disclosure was made on a reasonable occasion (Hardy v. Veasey, supra).

A customer is entitled to the reticence of his banker though his account is overdrawn, and he is in fact the debtor of the banker (Hardy v. Veasey).

drawn.

When the customer's assets are insufficient to meet a check presented for payment, the banker is not justified in stating the amount of the deficiency; he should not do more than say, "not sufficient assets," or "apply to the drawer" (Foster v. The Bank of England, 3 F. & F. 214).

The Statute of Limitations applies to a banking account as to any other debt. Thus if an account remain for six years without any payment of the principal or allowance of interest by the banker, the statute is a bar to the recovery of money due on the account (Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321), but money paid out to the customer pays off the earliest debt due at the time of such payment Words which pass an account with a banker.

The following terms have been held to include and pass the money standing to the testator's account with his banker, "all my ready money" (Parker v. Merchant, 1 Ph. 356, Fryer v. Ranken, 11 Sim. 55), "all debts due to me" (Carr v. Carr, 1 Mer. 541 n), "money in hand" (Vaisey v. Reynolds, 5 Russ. 12), "all my moneys" (Manning v. Purcell, 7 De G. M. & G. 55).

Overdraft is not a loan.

A customer does not by overdrawing his account alter the previously existing relations between him and his banker. An overdraft made in the ordinary course of business, and honored by the banker, is not a loan in the proper sense of the word; and therefore a company who have no power to borrow money are liable for the overdrafts of its directors if made in the ordinary course of business, and applied to the purposes of the company (Waterloo v. Sharp, L. R. 8 Eq. 501; In re Cefn Cilcen Mining Company, L. R. 7 Eq. 90; Beattie v. Lord Ebury, L. R. 7 Ch. Ap. 804, 805).

Banker entitled to commission.

A banker may receive a commission for his trouble in transacting money negotiations, as any other factor for his trouble (Curtis v. Livesey, 4 M. & S. 197), or for accepting and paying bills of exchange (Masterman v. Courie, 3 Camp. 488). The reasonableness of the charge is a question for the jury (Masterman v. Courie).

Accounts between banker and customer.

Where a banker and customer carry on business for a number of years on a certain specified system, it is to be inferred that both parties are agreed the accounts shall be kept upon that system (Morse v. Salt, 32 L. J. Ch. 761).

Acquiescence in such accounts amounts to an agreement of the system, but not to a settlement of account (Morse v. Salt, supra).

So where bankers have been in the habit of charging interest with annual rests for a number of years, the customer by acquiescence must be taken to have assented to this system of keeping accounts (Crosskell v. Bower, L. J. 32 Ch. 540). But to charge a person with compound interest a contract or promise must be shown to have been made at or subsequently to the time from which the compound interest began to run; for an antecedent contract or promise to pay compound interest is invalid (Ex parte Bevan, 9 Ves. 223; Ferguson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 140). The making of such a contract may be inferred from the course of dealing between the parties or the course of trade in which they are engaged (Morgan v. Mather, 2 Ves. 20; 2 Camp. 482; Eaton v. Bell, 5 B. & Ald. 34; Morse v. Salt, 32 L. J. Ch. 756). An agreement between banker and customer to pay compound interest is terminated by the death of the customer (Williamson v. Williamson, L. R. 7 Eq. 542); the balance at the date of the customer's death ceases to bear interest and becomes a simple contract debt due from the customer's estate, on which, in the absence of any binding contract no interest can be charged (Crosskell v. Bower, 32 L. J. Ch. 540; but see contra, Williamson v. Williamson, L. R. 7 Eq. 542). The same result appears to follow where the customer becomes bankrupt, or where the banker dies or becomes bankrupt (Crosskell v. Bower).

AND CUSTOMER.

Must be special agreement to enable banker to charge compound interest.

Death of customer terminates agreement.

Where bankers take a mortgage security for a fixed sum owing to them from their customer, the relation of banker and customer ceases as to that sum, and it cannot be included in the customer's banking account so as to entitle the bankers to charge compound interest thereupon (Morse v. Salt, supra).

Documents in the possession of the banker are held to be so far in the possession of his customer that the banker need not be served with a subpoena duces tecum, or called as a witness, but notice given to the party himself will suffice (Taylor on Evidence, p. 434).

Banker holds documents as customer's agent.

BANKER
AND
CUSTOMER. A banker as a witness is bound to answer what the balance of a party to a cause was on a given day, as the knowledge does not come to him in the nature of a privileged or confidential communication (Lloyd v. Freshfield, 2 Car. & P. 324).

Banker
may be compelled to give evidence. Under sect. 115 of "The Companies Act 1862," by which the court can summon before it any person whom the court may deem capable of giving information concerning the trade dealings, estate, or effects of the company, these decisions have been given. A summons may issue to the secretary of the bank of a person who supplied a shareholder with money calling on the secretary to attend for examination, and produce all books containing entries as to that person's affairs (In re Smith, Knight and Co., L. R. 4 Chan. Ap. 421). The managing clerk of a bank, at which a contributory had an account, was compelled to attend and state the nature of such account (Re The Financial Assurance Company, Bloxam's case, 36 L. J. Chan. 687). And a banker with whom a contributory had formerly kept an account was compelled to produce his books, and give all information in his power relating to the property of the contributory and his affairs (Re Contract Corporation, Forbes' case, 41 L. J. Chan. 467).

CHAPTER IV.

CUSTOMERS.

Agent.

No agent has implied authority as agent to borrow money on behalf of his principal, except the master of a ship or an acceptor for honour of a bill of exchange (Hawtayne v. Bourne, 7 M. & W. 599), and he has therefore no implied authority as agent to overdraw a banking account belonging to his principal, but the fact that he has overdrawn such an account with the knowledge of his principal is evidence from which a jury may infer that the agent was clothed with authority to pledge his principal's credit by overdrawing (Pott v. Bevan, 1 Car. & K. 335).

CUS-TOMERS.
Agent.

Executors and Administrators.

An executor has power to pledge a specific asset belonging to the personal estate of his testator. So where he is authorized by the will to realize the real estate he has power to pledge a specific part of such estate (Farhall v. Farhall, L. R. 7 Ch. Ap. 123). Where the pledge is valid, the person making the advance has a charge to the amount of his advance on the thing pledged, unless he has notice that the executor was committing a breach of trust and applying the money to his own purposes (Farhall v. Farhall, L. R. 7 Eq. 289). But except in the cases above put, an executor has no power to create debts against his testator's estate by borrowing money. Credit given to him can only be given to him personally, and not in his representative character, and so through him to the estate. It therefore follows that if the asset pledged by the executor turn out insufficient to repay the advance, he, and not the estate, is responsible for the difference. In other words, a person cannot by contract with the executor acquire a right to prove as a creditor against the estate, though the executor has power to give a lien on specific assets (Farhall v. Farhall, L. R. 7 Ch.Ap. 123).

One executor can bind all by his receipt.

One of several executors is not the agent of the others so as to bind them by his contracts, but he may dispose of the assets so as to bind the others (Turner v. Hardy, 9 M. & W. 771). Therefore any one of several co-executors may settle an account due from any person to the estate, and such settlement in the absence of fraud is binding on the other co-executors, though dissenting (Smith v. Everitt, 27 Beav. 454). It follows that where co-executors have an account standing in their joint names at a bank, payment of a check signed by one of them will discharge the banker as to them all.

The banker is not bound for his own safety to do more than see that the executors or administrators have primâ facie a good title; and a payment made bonâ fide of a debt due to the estate of a deceased person to the executors or administrators is a legal discharge of the debtor, though their letters of probate or administration afterwards turn out void or voidable (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, ss. 77, 78).

Companies—Railway.

Railway Companies

Joint stock companies constituted for making railways are generally incorporated by a special Act and regulated by 8 Vic. c. 16, which provides (secs. 95, 96) for the appointment of directors who, either by themselves or by committees of directors appointed by themselves, have the management and superintendence of the affairs of the company and exercise all the powers of the company subject to the provisions of that and the special Act ; and by sec. 97 that with respect to any contract which, if made between private persons, would be by law required to be in writing signed by the parties to be charged therewith then such committee of directors may make such contract on behalf of the company in writing signed by such committee, or any two of them, or any two of the directors, and in the same manner vary or discharge the same.

It will be observed that a check drawn under this Act should be signed by all the committee, since the power to draw is vested in them all, or by two of the directors of the company, and further that the check should purport on the face of it to be drawn on behalf of the company (Halford v. Cameron Coalbroke Co., 16 Q. B. 442; Sewell v. Derbyshire Railway Co., 19 L. J. C. P. 371).

But it would appear that a check purporting to be drawn by persons authorized to draw checks on behalf of the company, and known by the bank as representing the company in the operations upon the account, is a sufficient voucher for the bank as against the company for the payment of money, though the check does not on the face of it indicate that the company is the drawer (Mahony v. The East Holyford Mining Co., L. R. 7, E. & I. 869).

Joint Stock Companies.

The 47th sec. of The Companies Act 1862 prescribes that a promissory note or bill of exchange shall be deemed to have been made, accepted, or indorsed on behalf of any company under this Act if made, accepted, or endorsed in the name of the company by any person acting under the authority of the company, or if made, accepted, or endorsed by or on behalf of the company by any person acting under the authority of the company.

How far to satisfy himself as to

of drawers.

Therefore a banker should satisfy himself as to the authority of the persons pretending to act on behalf of the company. In the case of a registered joint stock company, he is taken to have notice of the general Act of Parliament, and of the special deed which has been registered pursuant to the provisions of the Act, and if there be anything to be done which can only be done by the directors under certain limited powers it lies upon him to see that these limited powers are not exceeded. If (Royal British Bank v. Turquand, 6 E. & B. 327) the directors have power and authority to bind the company, but certain preliminaries have to be gone through on the part of the company before that power can be duly exercised, the person dealing with the directors is not bound to see that all these preliminaries have been observed. He is entitled to presume that the directors are acting lawfully in what they do (Fountain v. Carmarthen Railway Company, L. R. 5 Eq. 316).

The following case (Mahony v. The East Holyford Mining Company, L. R. 7, E. & I. 869) illustrates the distinction drawn above. Money was paid into the credit of a company with a bank. The articles of association of the company provided that every sum paid on behalf of the company over £10 was to be paid by a check signed and countersigned as might be directed by the board, and that all acts done by the board or a committee of directors, notwithstanding any defect in the appointment of any director or person acting as aforesaid, should be valid, as if every person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director. The bank received a letter dated from the registered office of the company and purporting to be signed by the secretary of the company, and to enclose the copy of a resolution passed relative to the banking account of the company. The resolution requested the bank to pay all checks signed by either two of the following three directors, A., B., and C., whose signatures were supplied to the bank. A., B., and the secretary had signed the articles and memorandum of association. The bank, bonâ fide, did pay large sums on checks so signed. The three directors turned out to be directors only de facto, and not de jure: no appointment of directors having in fact been made by the shareholders and no such resolution as was communicated to the bank was passed. It was held by Lord Cairns that there having been de facto directors of the company who were permitted by the majority of those who signed the articles of association to occupy the position and act as directors, and the bankers having, in the full belief that these persons were directors, honored the checks drawn by them, the payment of these checks was a good payment as against the company.

And by Lord Penzance, that a bank having a written authority, of a de facto secretary, is not bound before it acts upon that authority to ascertain whether he is the properly constituted secretary of the company, and whether any resolution of which he forwards a copy was properly passed by the directors; but is justified in acting upon such a written authority, provided the transaction appears one which might legally have taken place, and have been legally consummated under the articles of association.

The 42nd section of the Companies Act 1862 imposes a penalty on any directors of a limited company, signing or authorizing to be signed on behalf of the company, any bill of exchange, promissory note, endorsement, check, or order for money, wherein the name of the company is mentioned, in manner directed by the Act, i.e., the name of the company, followed by the word "limited," and makes them personally liable to the holder of any such instrument, unless the same is duly paid by the company.

Form of
checks.

This section is not imperative, but simply provides a particular mode of execution (In re Norwich Yarn Company, 25 L. J. Chanc. 201); and where those who draw and those who bonâ fide honour checks intend them to operate on a certain account, no objection can afterwards be taken that that account is not specifically mentioned on the face of the check; therefore a check which purported to be drawn in accordance with directions from the board of a company by two directors and countersigned by the secretary, and intended to be drawn on the company's account, being bonâ fide paid by the bank, was held a good voucher for the payment as against the company (Mahony v. East Holyford Mining Co., L. R. 7, E. & I. 869).

Instrument
should purport to be made on behalf of the company.

Directors may be personally liable on the instruments they make if describing themselves as directors, or by any similar form of description, they do not state on the face of the document that they are acting on behalf of the company; and if the instrument does not purport on the face of it to be made on behalf of or on account of the company, the affixing thereto of the seal of the company is not equivalent to a declaration in terms on the face of the instrument that it is signed by the persons who put their name to it solely on behalf of the company (Dutton v. Marsh, L. R. 6 Q. B. 361).

direction to honor
checks drawn in a certain fashion.

A direction given by persons who are directors of a company to their bankers, when the company had a balance in the hands of the bankers, to honor checks drawn and signed in a particular manner, does not of itself impose on the directors any personal responsibility as to those checks. This direction is in no sense a misrepresentation so as to make personally liable those who gave it to those who acted upon it (Beattie v. Ld. Ebury, L. R. 7, E & I. 102).

Nor, though that direction should continue to be acted on by the bankers after the company's account has been overdrawn, will it entail on the directors who gave it any personal liability. Nor will it entail any such liability on those who, at a subsequent meeting of the board of directors, confirmed the minutes of the board meeting at which it was given, and who drew checks in accordance with it, though the account was overdrawn when these latter checks were issued and honored (Beattie v. Lord Ebury, supra).

A banker is not an officer of the company within sec. 165 of "The Companies Act 1862" (In re Imperial Land Company of Marseilles; In re National Bank, L. R. 10 Eq. 298). And therefore the court cannot when a company is being wound up make an order upon him to repay any money misappropriated by him.

A company who have no power to borrow money are liable for the overdrafts of its directors if made in the ordinary course of business and applied to the purposes of the company; for an overdraft made in the ordinary course of business is not a loan in the proper sense of the word (Waterloo v. Sharp, L. R. 8 Eq. 501; In re Cefn Cilcen Mining Co., L. R. 7 Eq. 90; Beattie v. Lord Ebury, L. R. 7 Ch. Ap. 804—805).

A company may, where money belonging to it has been paid to its account in a bank in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme between its directors and the general manager of the bank, avoid the contract and recover such money back from the bank (British American Telegraph Company v. The Albion Bank, L. R. 7 Ex. 119). But not where the money paid in to the company's account never belonged to the company, and was paid in under circumstances which made such payment merely colourable (British American Company v. Albion Bank, supra; Gray v. Lewis, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 1035, 1052, 1055).

Corporations.

Cus-TOMERS.
Corporations.

Corporations at common law can only contract by writing under their common seal, but a distinction exists between municipal and ecclesiastical corporations and trading corporations in this respect, and the settled law now appears to be that (South of Ireland Colliery Co. v. Waddle, L. R. 3 C. P. 463, 4 C. P. 617, and the cases there cited) the former are allowed to transact affairs of minor importance only, such as hiring a servant, while trading corporations may make all such contracts as are of ordinary occurrence in their trade without the formality of a seal, and by the hands and through the instrumentality of their agents and managers.

A corporation established for trading purposes is from its nature capable of drawing a bill of exchange and making the promise implied by law from making a bill, and is liable to be sued in assumpsit on the bill though a body corporate (Murray v. The East India Company, 5 B. & Ald. 204). And all such bills of exchange have in practice always been made under hand by an agent authorized to draw or accept as the case may be. There is no case in the books where a bill of exchange made under seal has been sued on (Crouch v. Credit Foncier, L. R. 8 Q. B. 374, 382; Bank of Australasia v. Bank of Australia, 12 Jur. 188).

It is presumed that as the use of banks is now universal, other corporations have like power, but this point has never yet been decided.

For his perfect discharge therefore a banker when his depositor is a common law corporation, should require a check signed by some officer of the corporation whose signature the banker has been directed to honor by some instrument under the common seal.

Husband and Wife.

Where a drawing account is opened by a husband in the name of his wife, or the husband pays money into an account opened by his wife, the banker's obligation is to honour the check of either husband or wife during their joint lives (Lloyd v. Pugh, L. R. 8 Ch. App. 88). If an account be opened by the husband in the joint names of himself and his wife, the balance standing to the credit of such account at his death becomes the absolute property of his widow, provided his intention in so opening the account was to make provision for her in that way (Williams v. Davies, 33 L. J. Prob. Ca. 127); but it does not become the property of the widow if the intention was only to provide a convenient mode of managing affairs (Marshall v. Cruttwell, L. R. 20 Eq. 328).

A married woman having a separate estate can charge and bind her estate by bills and promissory notes, and where she is living ostensibly as a femme sole, and contracts debts, the intention will be imputed to her that she intends to charge her separate estate (Johnson v. Gallagher, 3 D. F. & J. 494; McHenry v. Davies, L. R. 10 Eq. 88); and further she can bind her estate by engagements made with reference to or upon the faith and credit of that estate (see Johnson v. Gallagher).

A married woman therefore who has a separate property can keep an account and enter into contracts with a banker with reference to that separate estate, and the banker will have a remedy against her separate estate in equity. She can too charge such separate estate as by giving a lien upon it for advances or to secure an overdrawn account (The London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lemprière, L. R. 4 P. C. 572). She can exercise this power whether she has an absolute interest or a limited interest as a life estate with a power of appointment by deed or writing, but not it would appear where the power of appointment is by will only (Johnson v. Gallagher, supra; The London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lemprière, supra). Under "The Married Woman's Property Act 1870," 33 & 34 Vic. c. 93, a married woman has a complete power of disposition over her wages and earnings acquired by her in her separate trade, and may (sec. 11) bring an action in her own name to recover any property declared under the Act to be her separate property. Under this last section a married woman may maintain an action in her own name to recover damages against her bankers for dishonoring checks drawn by her in the course of a trade which she carries on separately from her husband, and for not duly presenting or not giving due notice of dishonor of a bill of exchange acquired by her in such trade (Summers v. City Bank, L. R. 9 C. P. 581).

Liquidators.

dators.

Where under a voluntary winding up of a company under the Companies Act 1862, several liquidators are appointed, it would seem checks must be signed by at least two of the liquidators (In re London and Mediterranean Bank; Ex parte Birmingham Banking Co., L. R. 3 Ch. App. 651; Ex parte Agra and Masterman's Bank, L. R. 6 Ch. 206).

Partners.

Partners.

A partner has implied authority to act for all his co-partners whether known or secret (Vere v. Ashley, 10 B. & C. 288), in all things necessary for carrying on the business of the co-partnership (Sandilands v. Marsh, 2 B. & Ald. 672), and they are therefore bound by all his acts within the scope of the partnership. Thus one partner can make the firm liable for money borrowed by him for the purposes of the partnership (Rothwell v. Humphreys, 1 Esp. 406), but not for money which he was to obtain on his individual credit and bring into the partnership (Greenslader v. Dower, 7 B. & C. 635; Fisher v. Taylor, 2 Hare 218; Emly v. Lye, 15 East 7), nor (without proof of authority) for the balance of an overdrawn account opened in his own name (Alliance Bank v. Kearsley, L. R. 6 C. P. 433). For he has no implied authority to open an account on behalf of the partnership in his own name (Alliance Bank v. Kearsley). He can as against his co-partners pledge the partnership funds which are standing to the credit of the partnership in the books of a bank (Brownrigg v. Rae, 5 Ex. 489). He can direct the bankers of the firm not to pay a check drawn by the firm, and no action will lie against the banker by the firm for obeying such direction (see Lindley on Partnership, p. 288).

He can, if the acting partner, assent to the transfer of the partnership account from one bank to another without the express assent of the others (Beale v. Cuddlock, 26 L. J. Ex. 356).

He has implied power to bind his firm with checks not post dated (Forster v. Mackreth, L. R. 2 Ex. 163), drawn on the bankers of the firm in the partnership name (Laws v. Rand, 3 C. B. N. S. 442). For as no person can be sued upon a bill or note whose name is not on the instrument (Lloyd v. Ashby, 2 B. & Ad. 23), a check to bind the firm must be drawn in the name of the partnership, by which the partners have agreed each shall bind the others, and which is the only name a partner is entitled to use for the purposes of the partnership (Kirk v. Blurton, 9 M. & W. 284). If between the style actually signed and the ordinary style of the firm there is any substantial variation which cannot be shown to be authorized by the partners, the firm will not be liable.

The question upon which the liability or non-liability of a firm depends is not, has the firm obtained the benefit of contract, but did the firm by one of its partners enter into the contract?

One partner can bind others by his receipt.

Payment of a debt to one of a firm extinguishes the claim of all (Anon. 12 Mod. 446); and each partner has power to give a discharge or receipt for a debt; but if the payment has been made collusively and in fraud of the other partners, a receipt given by the fraudulent partner will not prevent the firm from recovering the money so paid (Farrer v. Hutchinson, 9 A. & E. 641). After a dissolution, payment to any one of the partners discharges the debtor (Bristow v. Taylor, 2 Starkie 50; Porter v. Taylor, 6 M. & S. 156), unless the debtor has notice the debt has been assigned to one of the partners, in which case he can only pay the assignee (Duff v. East India Co., 15 Ves. 213). Co-adventurers in a mining concern are not liable for money borrowed by one of their number for the purposes of the mine, unless the borrower is shown to have had authority to pledge the credit of his co-adventurers (Ricketts v. Bennett, 4 C. B. 686).

Trustees.

Trustees.

Where a body of persons not partners have deposited money with a banker in their joint names, each one of the body ought in the absence of any special agreement between the body and the banker to sign the check on the joint account; and the banker is entitled to refuse to pay on any check not so signed. "For it is a part of the law merchant that bankers shall not pay one of several jointly interested without the consent of the others, except by express agreement" (Per Maule, J., Husband v. Davies, 20 L. J. C. P. 119, 10 C. B. 645).

trustee cannot bind his co-trustees by his receipt.

The 12 & 13 Vic. c. 74, § 1, entitled an Act for the Relief of Trustees, enacts that the Court of Chancery may upon the application by the majority of trustees where the concurrence of the minority cannot be had, order a banker to pay money vested in the trustees and deposited with the banker to the accountant general, and that such order shall indemnify all persons acting under such order.

CHAPTER V.

DIRECTIONS TO PAY ADDRESSED TO BANKERS.

ORDERS ON BANKERS.

THE communications of a customer to his banker, or of a banker to another banker directing the latter to pay money on account of the customer are of various forms. The forms known as checks, letters of credit, and circular notes are discussed hereafter with all their incidents; but it is convenient here to dispose of some preliminary questions by dealing with such communications generally, pointing out what are the stamp duties payable on them; what are the legal consequences of the issuing of such communications to the customer himself, to the banker, and the payee.

Stamp
duties.

First as to the stamp regulations.

The Stamp Act, 1870, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, enacts, sect. 48—

1. The term "bill of exchange" for the purposes of this Act includes also draft, order, check and letter of credit, and any document or writing (except a bank note) entitling or purporting to entitle any person, whether named therein or not, to payment by any other person of, or to draw upon any other person for any sum of money therein mentioned.
2. An order for the payment of any sum of money by a bill of exchange or promissory note, or for the delivery of any bill of exchange or promissory note in satisfaction of any sum of money, or for the payment of any sum of money out of any particular fund, which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed or happen, is to be deemed for the purposes of this Act a bill of exchange for the payment of money on demand.

STAMP
DUTIES.

---

3. An order for the payment of any sum of money weekly, monthly, or at any other stated periods, and also any order for the payment by any person at any time after the date thereof of any sum of money, and sent or delivered by the person making the same to the person by whom the payment is to be made, and not to the person to whom the payment is to be made, or to any person on his behalf, is to be deemed for the purposes of this Act a bill of exchange for the payment of money on demand.

By the Stamp Act, 1870, Schedule, Tit. Bill of Exchange, the following documents are amongst others exempted from duty:—

2. Draft or order drawn by any banker in the United Kingdom upon any other banker in United Kingdom not payable to bearer or to order, and used solely for the purpose of settling or clearing any account between such bankers.
3. Letter written by a banker in the United Kingdom to any other banker in the United Kingdom directing the payment of any sum of money, the same not being payable to bearer or to order, and such letter not being sent or delivered to the person to whom payment is to be made or to any person on his behalf.

DUTIES.

4. Letter of credit granted in the United Kingdom authorising drafts to be drawn out of the United Kingdom payable in the United Kingdom.

And the Bills of Exchange Act, 1871, 34 & 35 Vict. c. 74, sec. 2, enacts every bill of exchange or promissory note (drawn after the 14th August, 1871), and purporting to be payable at sight or on presentation, shall bear the same stamp, and shall for all purposes whatsoever be deemed a bill of exchange or promissory note payable on demand, any law or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

Bills of Exchange payable on demand have by the schedule to the Stamp Act, 1870, a duty of one penny imposed on them.

Bills of exchange of any other kind whatever have an ad valorem duty imposed on them, for which, see the chapter on Bills of Exchange, infra.

A customer who by an order to his banker, not communicated to the payee, directs the banker to pay money to a third person, incurs no liability by such an order to the payee until the order has been communicated to the latter; for a mere mandate from a principal to an agent which is capable of being revoked, gives no right or interest to the subject of it (Ex parte Heywood, 2 Rose, 353; Scott v. Porcher, 2 Mer. 652). But an order, directing a banker to pay money, communicated to the payee, is a good assignment as against the person making the order, and will create a valid effectual equitable charge on the fund in the banker's, provided the following requisites are complied with:—

1. The order must show a clear intention to charge a fund in the payee's favour (Hopkinson v. Forster, L. R. 19 Eq. 74), or an unequivocal engagement that the particular fund shall be made liable to the debt (Watson v. The Duke of Wellington, 1 R. & M. 602).

2. The order must show that the fund is to be paid to the person who claims the benefit of the assignment (Bell v. L. & N. W. Ry., 15 Beav. 548).
3. The fund itself need not be of a certain amount if it be sufficiently indicated (Riccard v. Prichard, 1 K. & J. 277).
4. Nor the amount of the debt to be paid if a limit be fixed to the sum appropriated (Hutchinson v. Heyworth, 9 A. & E. 375) to meet the debt.

It is not necessary to the validity of an equitable assignment as between assignor and assignee that notice should be given to the person from whom the debt is due (Rodick v. Gandell, 1 D. M. & G. 780).

A check is not an equitable assignment (Hopkinson v. Forster, L. R. 19 Eq. 74) of the sum named therein.

It may here be observed that where an order is given by a debtor with the consent of his creditor on a banker who is the banker of both parties, to transfer on a certain day a sum of money from the debtor's to the creditor's account, and before the day arrives and the actual transfer is made (Pedder v. Watts, 2 Chit. 619; Calley v. Short, G. Cooper, Ch. 148), or while the order is entered up as short (Brown v. Kewley, 2 B. & P. 518), the banker fails, the debtor is not discharged. But if after the money has been transferred in the books of the bank from one account to the other, the banker fails, the debtor is discharged (Eyles v. Ellis, 4 Bing. 112).

BANKER AND CUSTOMER.

Where the customer has given an order to the payee, who has presented it to the banker, and both payee and banker have treated the order as executory, and before any payment or appropriation has been made the customer has revoked the order, the banker pays the order at his own risk, and cannot charge the customer with the payment (Gibson v. Minet, 2 Bing. 7). But where the customer has ordered payment to a third person, and the banker has promised the third person to pay him, the customer is not at liberty to withdraw his order or authority (Hodgson v. Anderson, 8 B. & C. 342, 354).

Nor where the banker has received notice in writing of any absolute assignment by writing under his customer's hand of any portion of his debt to his customer, 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 25 (6).

A check is not such an assignment (Hopkinson v. Forster, L. R. 19 Eq. 74).

Where a banker pays on an order the customer may treat the payment as made by himself, so as to recover the money back in certain cases, as where there is a failure of consideration between him and the payee (Bobbett v. Pinkett, 1 Ex. D. 368).

As has been said, a banker as a general rule is bound to honor his customer's order, and he is not entitled, as between himself and his customer, to set up a justification against his customer's order, or to refuse to honor his draft on any other ground than some sufficient one arising from an act of the customer himself (Gray v. Johnston, L. R. 3 E. & I. 14, per Lord Westbury).

Therefore, though the customer may have improperly obtained the money he has paid in, the banker is bound to repay it to him on his demand (Tussell v. Cooper, 9 C. B. 509). Nor is the banker as a general rule bound to enquire for what purpose money is drawn out of the account (Bodenham v. Hoskyns, 21 L. J. Ch. 864; Ex parte Kingston, In re Gross, L. R. 6 Chan. Ap. 639).

BANKER AND CUS-

---

Thus if the banker become incidentally aware that the customer, being in a fiduciary or representative capacity, meditates a breach of trust and draws a check for that purpose, the banker not being interested in the transaction has no right to refuse the payment of the check, for if he did so, he would be making himself a party to an inquiry as between his customer and a third person (Per Lord Westbury, Gray v. Johnston, supra; Ex parte Kingston, In re Gross, L. R. 6 Chan. Ap. 632, 639, per L. J. James).

The Liability of a Banker to the Payee.

Before the passing of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, the rights of an assignee of a debt or chose in action (other than bills of exchange and like instruments), against the person liable in respect of the debt or chose in action, were different at law and in equity. Both at law and in equity the assignee was bound to derive his title from an absolute assignment (Hopkinson v. Forster, L. R. 19 Eq. 74; see ante, p. 53); but at law he could not sue the holder of the fund except he could prove an absolute contract or binding agreement with him, by the holder of the fund to pay. It was not necessary to prove any consideration moving from the holder of the fund to the assignee, but the contract, promise, or agreement to pay must have been unequivocal and absolute. Thus it was not sufficient for the assignee to prove that the banker held a sum of money in which he, with many others, was entitled to share (Pinto v. Santos, 5 Taunt. 447); nor that the banker had advised him that he would, if remittances came forward to enable him to meet the wishes of his customer, inform the assignee of their arrival (Malcolm v. Scott, 5 Ex. 601). Nor that the banker had admitted to the assignee the receipt of bills from the proceeds of which the banker had been directed by his customer to pay over the money due to the assignee from the customer (Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 592).

AND PAYEE

But in equity the rule was different. It was not necessary to the validity of an equitable assignment as between assignee and assignor that notice should be given to the person from whom the debt was due. But the debtor was bound from the time the order was shown him or notice given him (see Lord Eldon in Ex parte South, 3 Swanst. 392). And it was not necessary in equity that the debtor should enter into any contract for the application of the fund in the manner directed (Burn v. Carvalho, 4 M. & C. 690).

But now sect. 25, subs. 6, of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, gives the assignee, under an assignment by writing of a debt, power to perfect his title against the debtor, by giving notice in writing to the debtor of the assignment; no decision has yet been given on this section, but if it is read with the 11th sub-section of the same section, which enacts that in case of any conflict between the rules of equity and common law, the rules of equity shall prevail, the general result appears to be the same with the rules of equity before the Act as stated above.

Where an order is given by a man to his banker to pay over a sum to a third person to whom the order is not communicated, and, before the payment is made, the order is countermanded, the third party cannot insist on the banker paying to him the money (Morrell v. Wooton, 16 Beav. 197).

CHAPTER VI.

CHECKS.

A CHECK resembles in legal effect an inland bill of exchange (Keene v. Beard, 8 C. B. N. S. 372, 29 L. J. C. P. 287); it has, however, three distinguishing characteristics—that it is always drawn on a banker—it is payable on presentment without the allowance of days of grace, it is never presented for acceptance but only for payment. CHECKS.

No precise form is essential to the validity of a check: most bankers supply their customers with blank forms to be filled up as required; but any instrument is valid as a check which complies with the following conditions:—

- I. It must be written.
- II. It must be an order to pay.
- III. It must be addressed to a banker.
- IV. It should be dated.
- V. It must contain the sum to be paid.
- VI. It must be stamped before payment thereon.
- VII. It must be payable on demand.
- VIII. It must be payable to some specified person—to bearer or to order.
- IX. It must be signed by the party drawing it.

I. A check must of necessity be in writing (Thomas v. Bishop, Ca. Temp. Hardwick, 1); it is usually written on paper, but might legally be written on any substitute for paper and with pencil (Geary v. Physick, 1 B. & C. 234) or ink. Must be in writing.

CHECKS.

Order to pay.

II. It must contain an order to pay, i.e., it should purport to be a demand made by a party having a right to call on the other to pay (Per Lord Tenterden in Little v. Slackford, M. & M. 171).

Drawn on a banker.

III. A check being like a letter of exchange an open letter of request from the drawer to a third person it should be properly addressed to that person by the Christian and surname; or if to a firm, by the full style of that firm (Com. Dig. Merchant F.). It must be addressed to a bank or banker (Story on Prom. Notes, § 487).

Date.

IV. It should be dated, but a date is not essential to the validity of a check; if there is no date on it it will be considered as dated on the day on which it was made (Hague v. French, 3 B. & P. 173, Giles v. Bourne, 6 M. & S. 73), and parol evidence is admissible to show from what time an undated instrument is intended to operate (Davis v. Jones, 25 L. J. C. B. 9, 17 C. B. 625).

It is not illegal to post-date a check, and the post-dating has now no effect on the instrument itself.

It is established that the Stamp Acts only deal with orders for the payment of money as they appear on their face, and that the date expressed on the face of the check can only be looked at without reference to any collateral agreement or condition by which its operation can be effected (Whistler v. Forster, 14 C. B. N. S. 248, 32 L. J. C. P. 161; Bull v. O'Sullivan, L. R. 6 Q. B. 209), so that in the absence of controlling words in the body of a check it will be taken to be payable on demand from and after the date on the face of it. A check may be dated on a Sunday, though it is not presentable or payable on that day (Beglie v. Levy, 1 C. & J. 180).

drawn for any sum.

V. Formerly a check could not be drawn for any sum under five pounds; but the 26 & 27 Vic. c. 105, legalises drafts for the payment of sums over twenty shillings and less than five pounds, and the 23 & 24 Vic. c. 111, s. 19, enacts that it shall be lawful for any person to draw upon his banker, who shall bonâ fide hold money to his use, any draft or order for the payment to the bearer or order on demand of any sum less than twenty shillings. Therefore a check for under twenty shillings is good where the drawer has a balance at his bankers; but if the drawer have no balance, such a draft is void, and the drawer subjects himself to a penalty.

The relation between a banker and his customer being that of a debtor and creditor—the banker is only bound to pay his debt in the mode in which a debtor in England is bound to pay his—in English money only. The sum, therefore, demanded in a check must be expressed in English and not foreign money.

If the sum in the body of the check differs from that in the margin the sum in the body is the sum which the banker ought to pay (Sanderson v. Piper, 5 Bing. N. C. 425).

A check drawn for “twenty-five, seventeen shillings and three pence” has been held to mean twenty-five pounds, seventeen shillings, and three pence (Phipps v. Tanner, 5 Car. & P. 488).

VI. A check for the purposes of “The Stamp Act, 1870” is (by sec. 48) included in the definition of a bill of exchange, and (by the schedule) is, being payable on demand, subjected to a penny stamp, which (by sec. 50) may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, to be cancelled by the drawer. If the check be presented for payment unstamped the banker may affix a proper adhesive stamp and cancel the same, charging the drawer with the amount of the stamp (sec. 54, (2)).

VII. A check is payable immediately on presentment without any days of grace. It may be drawn in terms “payable on demand,” but it is usually made payable generally, i.e., without the addition “on demand.”

CHECKS.

Stamp Duty.Payable on demand.

CHECKS. Such a check is in contemplation of law payable on demand (Whitlock v. Underwood, 2 B. & C. 157; Hare v. Copland, 13 Irish Common Law Rep. 426).

In America a check is sometimes dated on one day and made payable on another, for instance, dated on the 1st March, and made payable on the 24th March. The question then arises whether it is payable on that very day, without any allowance of days of grace. The decisions are conflicting, but the custom is said to be to treat such an instrument as a check payable on demand on the day designated for payment (Story on Prom. Notes, 6th ed., § 490).

check.

VIII. A check may be drawn in one of the four following forms:—

Payable to a person by name as to A. B. This check is not negotiable, and can only be sued on by A. B., or in his name (Cheetham v. Butler, 5 B. & Ad. 837; Dixon v. Chambers, 1 C. M. & R. 846.)

Or to A. B. or Bearer. This check is negotiable and transferable by delivery. It may be indorsed, thereby enabling the indorsee to sue the indorser thereon (Keane v. Beard, 8 C. B. N. S. 372).

Or payable to A. B. or order. This is assignable by the endorsement of A. B., and when endorsed is negotiable, and if endorsed in blank is payable to bearer. A banker on whom such a check is drawn may, if the check on presentment purports to be endorsed by the person to whom it was drawn payable, pay the amount of it to the bearer (16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, s. 19). In other words, the banker who is bound to pay bills of exchange drawn by his customer payable to order only to persons deriving their title through genuine endorsements is relieved from this responsibility as regards checks. But this exemption does not extend beyond the banker upon whom the check is drawn (Ogden v. Benas, L. R. 9 C. P. 513). The drawer of such a check can, if any one endorsement be not genuine, recover the amount so paid by his banker from the person who received it, even where the latter, being an agent has before action brought, paid the money to his principal (Ogden v. Benas, L. R. 9 C. P. 513). And the bearer to charge the drawer must make title through the first endorsement. An endorsement of the name of the payee "per pro-curation" or as "agent," purports to be an endorsement within the Act so as to protect the banker (Charles v. Blackwell, 1 C. P. D. 548).

Or payable to bearer or order on demand, and crossed either specially or generally, and with the words "not negotiable." The manner and effect of crossing will be discussed hereafter, but it is sufficient to say here that by sect. 12 of the 39 & 40 Vic. c. 81, a person taking a crossed check bearing the words "not negotiable," cannot have or give a better title to the check than that of the person from whom he took it. This kind of check, therefore, is not negotiable, though it may be transferable by delivery or endorsement as it is drawn payable to bearer or order.

A check is payable to bearer when the name of the payee does not purport to be the name of any person, as "J. S. or bearer" (Hinton's case, 2 Show. 235), or "Ship Fortune or bearer" (Grant v. Vaughan, 3 Burr. 1516), or if a blank be left for the name of the payee (Cruchley v. Clarence, 2 M. & S. 90), any bonâ fide CHECKS. holder may insert his own name. A check drawn payable to drawer's order is payable to himself (Smith v. McClure, 5 East. 476).

Signature. IX. A banker contracts with his customers to pay (to the extent of the customer's funds in his possession) all checks drawn by him; and the usual evidence of their being so drawn is that they bear his signature, that is his name in his own handwriting or of some person authorised by him to sign for him. It is, therefore, necessary that a check be signed; and the signature is usually subscribed in the right hand corner, but it may be written in any other part of the check (Taylor v. Dobbin, 1 Stra. 399; Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 B. & P. 238), but the name must appear to be the name of the person ordering the payment.

Presentment of Check.

How to be presented. It was held that a check should be presented at the banker's counter by some person ready and authorised to receive the money; but a presentment by post has now been held to be a reasonable mode of presentment, having regard to the commercial business of the country (Prideaux v. Criddle, L. R. 4 Q. B. 455; Heywood v. Pickering, L. R. 9 Q. B. 428).

Within what Time after Issue.

A banker is not bound to pay a check before the day on which it bears date or is due, for his duty to his customer is to pay checks on and not before the day of date; and he cannot debit his customer with such a payment if it turn out to have been made to the wrong person (Da Silva v. Fuller; Chitty on Bills, cited by Parke B. in Morley v. Culverwell, 7 M. & W. 178).

A check is said to be issued when it is in the hands of a person entitled to demand cash for it (Ex parte Bignold, 1 Deac. 735). CHECKS.

The receipt of a check is in itself no satisfaction of a debt until it is honored, and the holder may present it at any time within six years from its date, and if things have continued the same and no damage has arisen from the delay in presentment, the drawer is liable on the check if it be dishonored (Robinson v. Hawksford, 9 Q. B. 52). But if before the presentment of the check, the banker on whom the check was drawn has failed (Alexander v. Burchfield, 7 M. & G. 1061; Serle v. Norton, 2 M. & Rob. 401), or has ceased to allow the drawer to overdraw his account (Hopkins v. Ware, L. R. 4 Ex. 268), or by reason of the non-presentment of the check the position of the drawer, with respect to the fund on which the check was drawn, is altered for the worse (Hopkins v. Ware), and the check is consequently dishonored, the drawer is discharged unless the holder can show that he has not been guilty of unreasonable delay; and what is unreasonable delay is a question to be decided on the facts of each case.

It may here be remarked that by delay in presentment, the holder also runs the risk of a revocation of the banker's authority to pay by the death of the drawer (Tate v. Hibbert, 2 Ves. junr. 118; Hewett v. Kay, L. R. 6 Eq. 198), or of some delay in the honoring of the check, since bankers make it a rule not to cash stale checks without inquiry (see Serle v. Norton, 2 M. & Rob. 461 in notis). It is said the holder is bound, where a check is refused for staleness, to give the drawer an opportunity of authorising his bankers to pay it (Ibid.).

The time within which presentment must be made, varies with the relation of the parties between whom the question is raised.

Must be presented within six years from date.

Drawer discharged by failure of bank.

Or alteration in his position.

Death of drawer a revocation of his check.

What is Delay as between the Drawer and the Payee.

CHECKS. The payee of a check who wishes to preserve his remedy for the original debt against the drawer is bound to present it within a reasonable time. He is not bound, leaving all other business, to present the check immediately on receiving it. But his right to sue for the original debt is unimpaired, if he present the check before the close of the banking hours of the day after he received it (Boddington v. Schlenker, 4 B. & Ad. 752, 759; Alexander v. Buckfield, 7 M. & G. 1061; Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunton 388), even though the bankers have become insolvent between the receipt and the presentment of the checks. If he receive it after banking hours, the time allowed him for presentment seems to run from the first day after the actual receipt on which presentment could have been made. Thus if he receive the check after banking hours to-day he has the whole of to-morrow and next day to present it (Bond v. Warden, 1 Collyer, 583); and if a check be given to an agent to deliver to his principal, the time begins to run against the principal from the day on which the check might reasonably reach the principal (Frith v. Brooks, 4 L. T. N. S. 467).

What is reasonable where payee and drawee live in the same place. The payee of a check does not necessarily, as between himself and the drawer, obtain any more time or any less time for presentment by sending the check to his bankers to present for him. If the payee and drawee live in the same place, the banker ought to present the check not later than the day after it was originally issued (Boddington v. Schlenker, 4 B. & Ad. 752; Alexander v. Burchfield, 7 M. & G. 1061). For in the words of Crompton, J., the law makes a difference between the same and a different place; a man need not have an agent if he be in the same town (Frith v. Brooks, CHECKS.

4 L. T. N. S. 467).

But where the payee and drawee do not live in the same place if the payee send the check to his bankers not later than by the next day's post after he received it, and the banker present it or forward it to his agent the day after, and the latter present it the day after he receives it, the presentment seems to have been made in time to charge the drawer (Heywood v. Pickering, L. R. 9 Q. B. 428; Rickford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. 537, commented on in Alexander v. Birchfield; Hare v. Henty, 30 L. J. C. P. 302; Beeching v. — Holt, 315; disputed in Frith v. Brooks, 4 L. T. N. S. 467; Bond v. Warden, 1 Collyer, 583). Where payee and drawee do not live in the same place.

What is Delay as between the Transferee, i.e., one who has received the Check from the Payee, and the Drawer.

The transferee of a check stands, it is apprehended, in the same and no better position than the payee as against the drawer; that is to say, the payee cannot enlarge the drawer's liability by transferring the check, and the transferee is bound to present the check within the time originally allowed to the payee, if he wishes to recover from the drawer. Drawer and transferee.

What is Delay as between the Transferee and Payee.

An action will only lie on a check against the payee, or holder subsequent to him, who has endorsed the check; in which case the indorser is in the nature of a new drawer, and stands in that relation to the subsequent holders of the check. But an action will in many cases lie for the money paid by the transferee to the transferor, and as in these the same point arises of the Payee and transferee.

CHECKS. diligence of the transferee, both classes of cases will be considered together.

Payee and transferee.

Where a banker discounted a check not drawn upon him for the holder, and took the first opportunity in the ordinary course to present the check, which was then dishonored, it was held that the banker could sue the late holder for the money paid by him for the check (Rickford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. 537). For the defendant by discounting his check in the country was taken to have assented to that being done which was the usual and necessary course to procure payment (per Tindal, C. J., Alexander v. Burchfield, 7 M. & G. 1066). But where a bank cashed a check not drawn upon them for the holder, and by pursuing then the course customary in that bank, of transmitting all checks cashed at their branch bank to their head office, presented a check a day later than they might have done by transmitting it direct to the drawee, and the check was then dishonored, it was held that no action by the bank would lie against the holder of the check (Moule v. Brown, 4 Bing. N. C. 266). For as explained by Patteson, J., in Robinson v. Hawksford (9 Q. B. 57), Moule v. Brown was not an action against the maker, and no one said that an action would not have lain against him. As between subsequent parties a third person passing the check had a right to expect that the person taking it from him should present it in a reasonable time.

What is Delay as between Banker and Customer.

Banker and customer.

A banker receiving a check becomes the agent for presentment of the man from whom he receives it, even where the presentment has to be made to himself as banker of the drawer (Bailey v. Boddendam, 33 L. J. C. P. 252). The payee of a check may intrust it to his banker for presentment and collection, and the banker as between himself and his customer has, generally speaking, the day after his receipt of it to present it for payment. But he may under some circumstances be bound to present the check earlier than he would be in order to preserve the rights of his customer against the drawer.

Thus, in Boddington v. Schlenker (4 B. & Ad. 752), where a debtor, the defendant, paid his creditor, the plaintiff, by a crossed check; the latter on the same day sent it his banker; the banker negligently (as it was alleged by the defendant) omitted to present it at the clearing house in time for that day (when it would have been paid), and on the next day it was dishonored, it seems to have been thought by the judges, though the point was not involved in the decision of the court, that the banker would be liable to his customer for not having so presented it, though the banker presented it in time to preserve his customer's rights against the drawer.

This point was further considered in Hare v. Henty, 30 L. J. C. P. 302, where it was held that a banker was entitled as against his customer to the full time allowed by law for presentment, "unless circumstances exist from which a contract or duty on the part of the banker to present earlier or to defer presentment to a later period can be inferred."

The banker, if he do not live in the same place as the drawee, may, if he choose, employ an agent to present the check, for the holder is not required to part with the possession of the instrument proving the right to be paid and trust it to the party who has the obligation in paying it. (See Hare v. Henty, supra.) He has the day after his receipt of it to post it to his agent, and the agent the day after his receipt of it to present it to the drawer (Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B. N. S. 65; 30 L. J. C. P. 302; Prideaux v. Criddle, L. R. 4 Q. B. 455).

CHECKS.

Banker may employ an agent.

CHECKS. Where the practice is established to send checks for payment through a clearing house, the period of time within which presentment should be made is that consumed in the ordinary course through the clearing house (Hare v. Henty, supra), but it seems immaterial through whose hands the check is sent, provided it arrives in time (Prideaux v. Criddle, supra).

What will excuse Delay in Presentment.

It is apprehended that even where delay has arisen in presenting a check and the bank has stopped before the presentment, the drawer would still be liable if it could be shown either, that at no time between the earliest period at which the check might have been presented and the stoppage of the bank were there sufficient assets to meet the check (Boehm v. Stirling, 7 T. R. 429), or that the drawer had in the meantime ordered the bankers not to pay the check (Robinson v. Hawksford, 9 Q. B. 52).

Presentment, where made.

The presentment should be made at the banking house of the bankers on whom the check is drawn.

Presentment to agents of drawee insufficient.

Presentment of a check to the London bankers of the drawee, though described on the check as agents, is insufficient to charge the drawer, for the obligation to pay a check must in general depend on the drawee's account, which the London agents may not know (Bailey v. Boddenham, 33 L. J. C. P. 252).

But the London bankers have for their mutual convenience established an institution called the clearing house (Boddington v. Schlencker, 4 B. & Ad. 752; Warwick v. Rogers, 5 M. & G. 348; Robarts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 570; Bellamy v. Marjoribanks, 7 Ex. 389), by the use of which much economy, both of time and of the circulating medium is attained.

The manner of presenting and receiving bills, notes, CHECKS. and checks at the clearing house has been proved to be as follows:—A clerk from each banking firm in London London clearing house. connected with the clearing house attends there daily bringing with him the checks, &c., on other banks that have been paid since last clearing until half-past five, when the clearing house is closed. Each banker has there a separate drawer into which all bills and checks then due and payable at such bankers are put by the other bankers' clerks respectively during the day from eleven o'clock up to four o'clock in the afternoon, but not later. At intervals during the day the clearing clerk of each bank takes or sends the contents of the drawer appropriated to his bank to his principals, in order that his principals may examine them and determine as to the payment of such bills and checks; and such bills and checks as are at the time intended to be paid are cancelled, by drawing lines along and across the names of the party for whom such payment is intended to be made. Such of the bills and checks as the bankers determine not to pay are returned by them to, and deposited in, the drawer at the clearing house of the bankers by whom the same were brought that morning to the clearing house. All bills not returned and deposited before three minutes to five are considered by the respective bankers as paid; the claims of the several bankers on each other being settled at five o'clock, and the final balance then struck.

If a check be paid in too late for presentment at the clearing house, and consequently, too late, according to custom of the London bankers, for payment on that day, it is usually sent to the bankers on whom it is drawn, who, if it is a "good" check, that is, one which they would pay if banking hours were not over, mark it as such by placing their initials on it (Boddington v. Schlencker, 2 B. & Ad. 752). Marked checks.

CHECKS.

Marked checks are paid on the next day after presentment, and are considered as entitled to a priority of payment on that day.

Presentment through clearing house sufficient.

It has been decided that presentment in the ordinary course through the clearing house is sufficient presentment (Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunton 388; Reynolds v. Chettle, 2 Camp. 596).

Country Clearing House.

Country clearing house.

Country bankers who use the country clearing house have correspondents in London whose name is printed on their checks. A check drawn on a country bank and paid to a second country bank situate at a distance from the first, is sent to the London correspondent of the second bank, who presents it at the country clearing house, to the London correspondent of the first bank.

The London correspondent does not mark the check at once, or give credit for it, but transmits it by the next post to his country banker, who should advise the London correspondent by return of post to debit his account with the same, when the London correspondent gives a draft for the amount to the banker from whom he received the check (Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B. N. S. 65; 30 L. J. C. P. 302; Bailey v. Boddendam, 33 L. J. C. P. 252).

Other instances of clearing houses established for local purposes are to be found in the following cases, Prideaux v. Criddle (L. R. 4 Q. B. 465), Pollard v. The Bank of England (L. R. 6 Q. B. 623); and in America, The National Bank of North America v. Bangs (8 Amer. Rep. 349).

Foreign checks, how presented.

By the custom of London bankers, a banker, when a foreign check is paid to him by a customer, if he have an agent at the place where the check is payable, sends the check to the agent to be presented for payment; but if he have no agent at such place, he sends the check direct to the banker on whom it is drawn, and the latter immediately either remits the money or returns the check. Checks drawn on bankers at Jersey are considered to be foreign checks (Heywood v. Pickering, L. R. 9 Q. B. 429).

When a Check should be presented.

A check should be presented within banking hours (Whittaker v. The Bank of England, 1 C. M. & R. 744), and what are the banking hours must be proved in each case (Leffley v. Mills, 4 Term. R. 171; Parker v. Gordon, 7 East. 385; Jamieson v. Swinton, 2 Taunt. 224; Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B. N. S. 65, and 30 L. J. C. P. 232). Checks drawn by the Treasury on the Bank of England are not payable after three p.m. (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 21).

Dispensation with Presentment.

The bankruptcy or notorious stoppage of a bank on which a check is drawn would seem to excuse a neglect to present for payment (Howe v. Boves, 16 East 112; 5 Taunt. 30 S. C.; Roger v. Langford, 1 C. & M. 637; Robson v. Oliver, 10 Q. B. 704).

What is an Engagement to Pay.

There is no privity between the banker on whom a check is drawn and the payee or holder of a check; therefore the lawful holder of a check, if the banker refuse to pay it, cannot sue the banker on the check unless the latter have accepted it, a practice not usual but legal (per Parke, B., Bellamy v. Majoribanks, 7 Ex. 404).

Nor in America can the holder of a check set it off

CHECKS. against his note held by the bank (Case v. Henderson, 8 Am. Rep. 590).

Engagement to pay.

But where the banker has pledged himself to the payee of the check either to pay him the money or to hold it as the money of the payee, an action will lie against him at the suit of the payee for money had and received by him to the use of the payee (Malcolm v. Scott, 5 Ex. 601; Walker v. Robson, 9 M. & W. 414). Where a check is presented across the counter for payment the bank is bound by the answer of the cashier, who has implied authority on behalf of his masters, to decide whether a check shall be paid (Chambers v. Miller, 32 L. J. C. P. 30). Where a check, too late to pass through the clearing house, is presented and "marked" by the drawee, this check is as we have seen entitled to priority of payment on the next day, and the bankers thereby become bound to each other (per L. C. J. Cockburn, Goodwin v. Robarts, L. R. 10 Ex. 351); but it is a matter of some doubt to what extent the bankers become so bound. Lord Mansfield laid down that "the effect of that marking was similar to the accepting of a bill of exchange, for the banker admits thereby assets and makes himself liable to pay" (Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388); but at the time of this decision a verbal acceptance might be binding, whereas now by the combined effect (1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 2; and 19 & 20 Vic. c. 97, s. 6) an acceptance to be binding must be written on the bill and signed by the acceptor or some person authorised by him.

good.

It is submitted that the marking is still so far similar to the acceptance of a bill of exchange, that it admits the genuineness of the signature of the drawer and the existence of assets, but not that the check is in other respects genuine, as that the amount appearing on the check is the amount for which it was originally drawn; thus giving the bank presenting the check a right of action if injured by reason of the check turning out to be forged or insufficiency of assets, but not if the amount originally named in the check had been fraudulently raised (see the decision between the two banks on the effect of the American custom of certifying checks Marine National Bank v. The National City Bank, 17 American Rep. 305).

It is always open to the banker to show that any marking, cancelling, or entering in account was by arrangement between the bankers merely provisional, and subject to revision at a later period. Thus in Fernandez v. Glynn, 1 Camp. 426, the facts were these: Plaintiff paid unto the house of Vere & Co. a check upon defendant's house. Vere's clerk took it to the clearing house to be paid, and put it into defendant's drawer. Vere's clerk received it back before five o'clock, cancelled with a memorandum written under it, "cancelled by mistake." After five he would not have taken it back. By the custom checks might be returned up to five o'clock. Lord Ellenborough held that, notwithstanding the cancelling, defendant had till five o'clock to return the check, and having so returned it, this amounted to a refusal to pay (see Pollard v. Bank of England, L. R. 6 Q. B. 623).

Money laid down on the counter by a banker's cashier in payment of a check cannot be recovered back by action, though it were handed over under a misapprehension of the drawer's account; still less can it be taken by force from the party receiving it. As soon as the money is laid down by the banker upon the counter to be taken up by the receiver the payment is complete (Chambers v. Miller, 32 L. J. C. P. 30).

The mere receipt of a check by a banker, who is at once the banker of the drawer and the payee, is not sufficient to make him liable to the payee for the amount of the check. There must be either an actual demand for sional can-recovered.

CHECKS. payment, followed by a promise to pay, or an acknowledgment with or without an actual demand for payment previously made, that the check is held by the banker as the agent of the payee and not of the drawer.

Mere receipt of check by drawee does not amount to a promise to pay.

Thus where the drawer and payee of a check had the same banker, and the check was paid in by the payee without any distinct notice, whether he presented it as a check to be paid or to be merely placed to his account, and the cashier received it without any remark, knowing at the time that the drawer's account was overdrawn, it was held that in the absence of any intimation by the payee of the character in which he wished the banker to receive it, it must be taken that the banker took it as the agent of the payee, and therefore had till the next day to inform him there were no effects, and that the check had not been paid (Boyd v. Emerson, 2 Ad. & Ellis 184).

But where the drawer and payee of a check had the same banker, and the payee paid in the check, which was received without any remark on either side, and the banker informed the payee next day that the check was not paid, but he would keep it in the hope of there being money to pay it; and afterwards a sufficient sum was paid in, but appropriated by the banker, to pay off debts owing to him by the drawer, it was held that the payee could maintain an action for money had and received against the banker, who, being his agent for the receipt of the money, could not appropriate it to the payment of the debt due to the bank, nor to the payment of checks presented subsequently to that of the payee (Kilsby v. Williams, 5 B. & Ald. 815; Pollard v. Ogden, 2 E. & B. 459).

It has been suggested in America by the Supreme Court that if it could be shown that the bank had charged the check in its books against the drawer and settled with him on that basis, the plaintiff could recover on a count for money had and received on the rule ex æquo et. bono (Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wallace's Rep. 152; and see Oddie v. The National City Bank, 6 Amer. Rep. 161). CHECKS.

By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 54 (2), if a check be presented for payment unstamped, the banker may affix a proper adhesive stamp and cancel it, then pay the check, and as he thinks fit, charge his customer with the value of the stamp, or deduct it from the sum paid.

Encashment of Checks.

The banker is only bound like any other debtor to pay his debts in what may be legal tender; and this by 33 Vict. c. 10, s. 4, is defined to be a tender of money in coins which have been issued from the mint in accordance with the provisions of that Act, and have not been called in by any proclamation made in pursuance of that Act, and have not become diminished in weight by wear, or otherwise, so as to be of less weight than the current weight (defined in the Act),—

In the case of gold coins for a payment of any amount.

In the case of silver coins for payment of an amount not exceeding 40s., but for no greater amount.

In the case of bronze coins for payment of an amount not exceeding one shilling, but for no greater amount.

And further, nothing in that Act is to prevent any paper currency which, under any Act or otherwise, is a legal tender, from being a legal tender. This last proviso has reference to 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 6, which is as follows:—

A tender of a note or notes of the Bank of England, expressed to be payable to bearer on demand shall be a legal tender to the amount expressed in such note or notes, and shall be taken to be valid as a tender to such amount for all sums above five pounds on all occasions on which any tender of money may be legally made so long as the Bank of England shall continue to pay on demand their notes in legal coin; provided always, that no such note or notes shall be deemed a legal tender of payment by the governor and company of the Bank of England, or any branch bank of the governor and company; but the governor and company are not to become liable or be required to pay and satisfy at any branch bank of the governor and company any note or notes of the governor and company not made specially payable at such branch bank; but the governor and company shall be liable to pay and satisfy at the Bank of England in London all notes of the governor and company, or of any branch bank thereof.

The notes of the Bank of England are not a legal tender in Scotland (8 & 9 Vic. c. 38, s. 15), nor in Ireland (8 & 9 Vic. c. 37, s. 6), though there is no enactment prohibiting their circulation in either country.

The result of these Acts is—

That the Bank of England and its branches must, if required, pay checks drawn on them for sums above 40s. in gold, provided that the amount of the sum required above 40s. is capable of being expressed in the gold coinage.

At any other bank a check for £100 may, if the banker choose, be cashed, and the bearer cannot refuse to accept payment in the following way: 40s. in silver, the next three pounds in gold, and the remaining £95 in Bank of England notes, “expressed to be payable to bearer on demand,” but not, it would appear, in Bank of England notes specially payable at a branch of the Bank of England.

Counterfeit Coin.

Where the banker makes in good faith a payment in base coin, and the coin is accepted without demur, no question, it would appear, as to its goodness can afterwards be raised by the payee, unless the coin can be traced, as where paid in a bag or marked for the purpose of being distinguished, and discovered within a reasonable time to be bad.

Payment in Forged Notes.

Payment in forged bank notes, whether purporting to be issued by the Bank of England or any other bank, though made in good faith, is no payment in law—that is “the party negotiating them is answerable for the notes being such as they purport to be” (Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 484, 494), and, therefore, if they turn out forged, an action will lie to recover the money paid for them (Woodland v. Fear 26 L. J. Q. B. p. 204).

Payment
in forged
notes.

In Bills of Exchange.

It is open to the drawer to agree with the banker that payment of a check should be made in any circulating medium other than that made legal tender by law. Thus he may by his check direct payment to be made in bills of exchange or promissory notes; such check it may be observed is for the purposes of the Stamp Act a bill of exchange payable on demand and requires no other stamp than an ordinary check (33 & 34 Vic. c. 97, s. 48 (2), ante, p. 50).

But the consequences of a payment in bills of exchange or in promissory notes must be considered separately with relation to the parties to whom payment is made.

1. Drawer and Banker.—If the drawer of a check payable to himself accept in return for his check a bill drawn or endorsed by the banker the bill by the statute of Anne (3 & 4 Anne, c. 9, s. 7) is a complete payment of his check as between him and the banker, if CHECKS. he do not take due steps to get the bill accepted paid or protested.

Payment
by bill.

2. Payee and Drawer.—But where the payee of a check accepts from the banker in return for the check, a bill of exchange endorsed or drawn by the banker (Strong v. Hart, 6 B. & C. 160 ; Smith v. Ferrand, 7 B. & C. 19 ; Baillie v. Moore, 8 Q. B. 489), or bank post bills (Tilney v. Courtier, 2 C. & J. 16) ; or another check drawn by the banker (Wilby v. Warren, 2 C. & J. 18 n.) ; or bankers' promissory notes commonly called country notes, though they afterwards turn out worthless, from the failure of the bank (Vernon v. Bourverie, 2 Show. 296 ; Lichfield Union v. Green, 26 L. J. Ex. 140 ; 1 H. & N. 884), the original debtor of the payee, i.e., the drawer of the check is discharged, because the payee having the option of taking cash, elected to take something else at his own peril (Camidge v. Allenby, 6 B. & C. 373), and he cannot sue the drawer for the original debt.

3. Payee and Banker.—And if the bill so taken by the payee be not met at maturity the payee can only recover the amount of the bill from the banker in cases where he has taken all due measures to get the bill accepted and paid, or protested (Comyn's Dig. Tit. Merchant, F. 17 ; 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9, s. 7). The law would appear to be the same where a promissory note indorsed by the banker is taken by the payee of a check. And it is obvious that the same rule applies to the relations between successive holders of a check.

But where the payee accepts from the banker in return for the check a banker's note, commonly called a country note, and the note turns out to be worthless from the failure of the maker, though given and accepted in perfect good faith on either side, the payee of the check, if the note be made by the banker himself, must prove against the banker's estate (Lichfield Guardians v. Green, 26 L. J. Ex. 140). If the note be made by a company, interest at £5 per cent. will be allowed from the date of the demand for payment on the liquidator (In re East of England Banking Company, L. R. 4 Ch. Ap. 14).

But if the banker be not the maker the case resembles those where payment is made by country notes at the time of purchase of goods, which are fully discussed in the chapter on bank notes.

Refusal to pay Checks.

A banker's contract is to pay checks drawn upon him by his customer whenever he has funds belonging to the customer to the amount drawn for in his possession. But unless a space of time have elapsed between the receipt of the money and the presentment of the check sufficient to allow the money to be passed to the customer's account, consistently with carrying on the business of the bank (Whitaker v. The Bank of England, 1 C. M. & R. 744; see Maule, J., Roberts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 560, 578), the banker will not be liable for refusing to pay a check, even though he have in fact money belonging to the customer in his possession. This point was raised in Marzeth v. Williams (1 B. & Ad. 415), where the facts were these: On a certain day the plaintiff had standing in his name at his banker's, a balance of £69 16s. 6d. About eleven the same day £40 was paid into his account; a little before three o'clock a check drawn by him for £87 7s. 6d. was presented for payment. The clerk after referring to a book said there was not sufficient assets, but that the check might go through the clearing house. The check was paid on the following day. The jury found that a sufficient time had elapsed between the paying in of the £40 and the presentment of the check to enable the banker and his clerks to know that the sum

CHECKS.

What will excuse a refusal by the banker to pay.

CHECKS. had been paid in, and found a verdict for the plaintiff with nominal damages. A motion was made for a new trial on the ground that the contract between the banker and customer was implied by law and not express, and that the plaintiff could not recover for the breach of such a contract without proving actual damage, of which there was in this case no evidence. The court discharged the rule, and Lord Tenterden in giving judgment, said: "This action is substantially founded on contract, and the plaintiff though he may not have sustained a damage in fact, is entitled to recover nominal damages. At the same time I cannot forbear to observe that it is a discredit to a person, and therefore injurious in fact, to have a draft refused for so small a sum, for it shows that the banker had little confidence in the customer. It is an act particularly calculated to be injurious to a person in trade. My judgment in this case, however, proceeds on the ground that the action is founded on a contract between the plaintiff and the bankers, that the latter whenever they should have money in their hands belonging to the plaintiff or within a reasonable time after they should have received such money, would pay his checks; there having been a breach of such contract the plaintiff is entitled to recover nominal damages" (1 B. & Ad. 415, 424).

Although no evidence is given that the plaintiff has sustained any special damage, the jury ought to give a reasonable compensation for the injury the plaintiff must have sustained by the dishonor of his check (Rollin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 595; 23 L. J. C. P. 148). Where a banker who had been in the habit of making advances to the plaintiff against consignments, and not debiting them to the plaintiff's current account until the sale of the consignment did, without notice to the plaintiff, debit his current account with an advance before the sale of the consignment in respect of which the advance was made, and having thus exhausted his assets, refused to pay his check, it was held that the banker was bound to give formal notice to the plaintiff of the change in the mode of conducting business before dishonoring the check (Cumming v. Shand, 29 L. J. Ex. 129; Garnett v. McEwen, L. R. 8 Ex. 10). And where bankers retained the balance of a customer to answer a future liability which might arise in respect of bills discounted for him by them to a much larger amount than the balance, and the customer brought an action against the banker for having dishonored his checks and for the amount of the balance, the court of equity, upon a bill filed by the bankers against the customer for an account and for an injunction to restrain the action at law, granted the injunction prayed for (The Agra and Masterman's Bank v. Hoffman, 34 L. J. Ch. 285).

CHECKS.

Refusal to pay.

Banker may retain funds to meet bills to be discounted for customer.

But no action will lie against the banker for dishonoring checks where the drawer's assets have been previously exhausted by the payment of bills accepted by him and made payable at the bankers, and such acceptances are sufficient authority to the banker to pay the amounts due on the bills (Kymer v. Laurie, 18 L. J. Q. B. 218).

Banker may pay bills made payable at bank.

In some cases the banker is justified in refusing to honor the check of his customer, though there be assets standing in the latter's name. If an executor draw a check as executor on his testator's funds in the banker's possession to discharge some debt due from himself personally to the banker, the banker would be justified in refusing to honor the check. For the discharge of the debt to the banker out of the testator's funds in his possession would be held abundant proof to him of the breach of trust, and he would be held to have participated in it for his own personal benefit, and to be liable therefor (Gray v. Johnston, L. R. 3 E. & I. 1).

Banker may refuse to pay check drawn in breach of trust.

CHECKS. Again he would appear to be justified in refusing to pay where he has heard of the death of the drawer before the presentment of the check. For the death of the drawer is a revocation of the banker's authority to pay (Tate v. Hibbert, 2 Ves. Jun. 118; Hewett v. Kay, L. R. 6 Eq. 198; Bromley v. Brunton, L. R. 6 Eq. 275). But a payment made by him in ignorance of the death is apparently a good payment.

Notice of Dishonor.

The drawer of a check payable to a third party is entitled to notice of dishonor, and so is each endorser. The consequence of not giving notice is that the party to whom notice should have been given is discharged from all liability, whether on the check or on the consideration for which the check was paid (Bridges v. Berry, 3 Taunt. 130; Bickerdike v. Bollman, 2 Sm. L. C. 59); the reason being, that the law presumes the check is drawn on account of the drawee's having effects of the drawer in his hands, and if the latter has notice that the bill be not accepted, or not paid, he may withdraw his funds immediately. But when a check is dishonored for want of assets, and the drawer has either no assets or not sufficient effects in the bank at the time he might reasonably expect the check to be presented for payment, and further, has no reason to expect it will be paid on presentment, the notice of dishonor is excused (Carew v. Duckworth, L. R. 4 Ex. 313). But if there are sufficient effects in the bank to meet the check, the drawer would be entitled to notice though he knew the bank would not honor the check, for he would be entitled to say the bank was bound to honor it, even though the bank had told him it would not (per Bramwell, B., ibid).

When notice of dishonour excused.

Notice by drawee.

Where a check is forwarded by post to the banker on whom it is drawn he is constituted the agent of the holder of the check for purposes of presentment and dishonor (Bailey v. Boddendam, 33 L. J. C. P. 252), and on the check being dishonored ought to give notice to the drawer with all convenient speed.

A banker with whom a check is deposited for collection is for the purpose of notice to be considered as a distinct holder, and has a day to give notice to his customer, and his customer another day to give notice to the anterior parties (Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388; Langdale v. Trimmer, 15 East, 291; Bray v. Hadwen, 5 M. & S. 68; Prideaux v. Criddle, L. R. 4 Q. B. 454). Where a bill passes through several branches of the same establishment, each branch may be considered a distinct holder, entitled to receive and transmit notice as such (Clode v. Bailey, 12 M. & W. 51), although the bills may have passed without endorsement. The notice must be given within a reasonable time after the dishonor, and generally speaking, a person has a day within which to give notice to the antecedent parties after the day of dishonor (see Byles on Bills,—Notice of Dishonor). Notice of dishonor may be given on behalf of the principal by the banker in his own name (Woodthorp v. Lawes, 2 M. & W. 109; Rowe v. Tipper, 22 L. J. C. P. 135).

In Himmelman v. Hotaling (6 American Rep. 601, see infra), it was held that where the drawer and drawee reside in the same city or town, the reasonable time for presumptive dishonor should not be fixed within more restricted limits than the close of business hours of the day succeeding that on which payment might first have been legally demanded.

Stale or Overdue Checks.

A check, in the words of Parke, B. (9 M. & W. 17, 18), is intended to be presented speedily, and though there is CHECKS. no decision laying down precisely at what period after issue a check becomes stale, or suspicious, it was at one time held that a transferee as he took it after it was due, had no better title than his transferor.

When
stale.

Thus, the owner of a check for £50 having lost it, the check was paid five days after its date to a shopkeeper who received the amount at the bank. Held that the shopkeeper was liable to refund the money to the owner of the check, for having taken it overdue, he acquired no better title than the party from whom he took it, and that it lay upon him to show that the assignor had a title (Down v. Halling, 4 B. & C. 330). But, in a later case (Rothschild v. Corney, 9 B. & C. 388), it was held, that though the taking of a check six days old is a circumstance from which the jury may infer fraud, it is not conclusive evidence so as to prevent the party taking the check from suing on it, or retaining it, or the money received on it.

So it appears, that the holder of a check, stale, but not dishonored, may recover at any time within six years on the check, or retain the money he has obtained on it, unless he have been guilty of fraud. Negligence is a circumstance from which the jury might infer fraud, but, it is not identical with fraud, unless perhaps, when it amounts to a determination to wink at anything (see Lord Denman, Willis v. The Bank of England, 4 A. & E. 32).

On this point the following American case may be cited:—

The holder of a negotiable bank check, drawn the day previous presented it for payment which was refused. On the same day he transferred it for a valuable consideration to plaintiff, who took it in good faith, and without notice of previous dishonor, and immediately on the same day, presented it to the drawee, when payment was again refused. Held, that plaintiff could recover of the drawer, a sufficient time after the check was drawn not having elapsed when plaintiff took it, to raise the presumption of dishonor, though the drawer and drawee were residents in the same city (Himmelman v. Hotaling, 6 American Rep. 601, citing O'Keefe v. Dunn, 6 Taunt. 305; Goodman v. Harvey, 4 A. & E. 870.)

Dishonored Checks.

An endorsee for value of a check after dishonor has a right to recover on the check unless there be an equity attached to the check itself amounting to a discharge, and such equities may be between the indorser and a third party, and not only between the holder and drawer (Ex parte Swan, L. R. 9 Eq. 344; In re European Bank, Ex parte Oriental Com. Bank, L. R. 5 Ch. Ap. 358).

Forged Checks.

Where the Drawer's Signature is Forged.

It is the banker's duty to know his customer's signature, and if he pay a check to which the drawer's signature has been forged, he pays it in his own wrong, and cannot charge his customer with such a payment. Not even if the customer lost his check book, and so contributed to the success of the forgery (per Parke, B., The Bank of Ireland v. Evan's Charities, 5 H. L. C. 389.)

The banker may in some cases recover the money he has paid, from the presenter, even where he was a bona fide holder for value. Possibly, where the banker discovered the forgery on the day on which he paid the CHECKS. check and at once gave notice to the presenter before any alteration in the situation of the prior parties (Wilkinson v. Johnson, 3 B. & C. 428). Notice given on the day following would appear to be too late (Cocks v. Masterman, 9 B. & C. 902), and à fortiori after a longer interval (Price v. Neale, 3 Burr. 1354; Smith v. Mercer, 6 Taunt. 76). But he will not be estopped by payment from recovering from one whose conduct, or whose agent's conduct, has been such as to mislead or to induce him to pay the check, without the usual scrutiny or other precautions against fraud (Wilkinson v. Johnson, 3 B. & C. 428), at least if the mistake is discovered before any alteration in the situation of the other parties, that is, whilst their remedies are left entire, and no one is discharged by laches.

Forged Indorsements.

Bankernot responsible for endorsement. Bankers, that is, persons carrying on the business of bankers (Halifax Union v. Wheelwright, L. R. 10 Exp. 193), are not responsible for the genuineness of the indorsement on checks drawn payable to order on demand as they would be on an ordinary bill of exchange or on a letter of credit (British Linen Co. v. Caledonian Insurance Co., 4 Macqueen 107). For 16 & 17 Vic. c. 59, s. 19, enacts that any draft or order drawn upon a banker for a sum of money payable to order on demand which shall, when presented for payment, purport to be indorsed by the person to whom the same shall be drawn payable, shall be a sufficient authority to such banker to pay the amount of such draft or order to the bearer thereof; and it shall not be incumbent on such banker to prove that such indorsement, or any subsequent indorsement was made by or under the direction or authority of the person to whom the said draft or order was or is made payable, CHECKS.

s. 19.

either by the drawer or any indorser thereof.

An indorsement "per procuracy" or "as agent" is Endorsement per proc.
within the meaning of this enactment (Charles v. Blackwell, 1 C. P. D. 548). But the enactment does not extend to protect any other person who takes the check or receives payment of a check upon the faith of an indorsement which Drawee alone protected.
turns out to be forged (Ogden v. Benas, L. R. 9 C. P. 513), and therefore money paid by the drawees to the person presenting the check is in reality the money of the lawful holder of the check, and may be recovered by him from the person so receiving it (Ogden v. Benas, supra; Arnold v. The Cheque Bank, 1 C. P. D. 578, 585).

Where the title to a bill or check is necessarily Effect of

made through a forgery, even a bonâ fide holder for value cannot recover against any party prior to the forgery by suing on the bill or check (Burchfield v. Moore, 23 L. J. Q. B. 261), or even retain it (Johnson v. Windle 3 Bing. N. C. 225), and a forgery or alteration by an indorsee not only avoids the security as against all prior parties but also extinguishes the debt due to the indorsee from the indorser (Alderson v. Langdale, 3 B. & Ad. 660); but each bonâ fide holder can recover from his predecessor in title till the forger or holder with notice is reached, for, as in the case of bank notes or navy bills, the party negotiating them is answerable for their being what they purport to be (Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488, 494).

Altered Check.

An alteration in a material part avoids a check (Davidson v. Cooper, 11 M. & W. 778; 13 M. & W. 343), like every other instrument made while it is in the custody of plaintiffs, although the alteration be by a stranger. The CHECKS. date (Vance v. Lowther, 1 Ex. D. 176), sum (Hamelin v. Burch, 9 Q. B. 306), or time of payment are all material parts.

Material alteration after issue makes check void.

Again an alteration in a material part makes the instrument void within the Stamp Laws: for after the alteration the instrument is a new instrument, and requires a new stamp.

But an alteration in a material part will not make void the instrument when the alteration is made before the check is issued or become available, where the check is altered to correct a mistake and in furtherance of the original intention of the parties (Byles on Bills—Alteration of Bill or Note).

The alteration by the drawer and payee of a check does not extinguish the debt between the parties, but an alteration by an endorsee avoids the instrument as against all parties and extinguishes the debt due to the indorsee from the indorser (Alderson v. Langdale, 3 B. & Ad. 660).

A bonâ fide transferee for value of an altered check or bill is in no better position as to his remedy on the check than his transferor (Burchfield v. Moore, 23 L. J. Q. B. 261).

Raised check.

Where an alteration has been made in the amount for which a check was originally drawn, increasing the apparent amount, and the banker has paid the larger amount, he cannot charge his customer with the excess (Hall v. Fuller, 5 B. & C. 750), unless the customer has been guilty of some neglect in the transaction itself, and the neglect has been the proximate cause of the banker being misled. Thus, the banker can charge his customer with the whole amount where the customer so negligently fills up a check as to invite forgery, or to allow forgery to be easily committed, as in a check for fifty pounds by writing fifty with a small f, and leaving a sufficient space before the "fifty," and the figures 50 at the bottom of the check to allow the insertion of another figure before the 5 (Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253; Halifax Union v. Wheelwright, L. R. 10 Ex. 183; see too as to the rule, Robarts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 579; Barker v. Union Bank, 1 Macqueen 513; Swan v. North British Australasian Cy., 32 L. J. Ex. 273; Foster v. Mackinnon, L. R. 4 C. P. 704, 712; Arnold v. The Cheque Bank, 1 C. P. D. 586—8).

No man, however, is bound to suspect that the person with whom he deals will commit forgery whenever the opportunity arises (Société Générale v. Metropolitan Bank, 27 L. T. 858), and, therefore, it is not necessary for a person drawing a check to exclude the possibility of any addition or alteration (ibid). It is apparently sufficient if he fill it up in the ordinary way.

More caution, according to Pothier, is expected of a banker from his position than from the rest of the world.

Be that as it may, it appears that though a customer had been in some degree negligent, if the check when presented and paid bore marks which might be alterations, or which might fairly rouse suspicion, the banker would pay it in his own wrong.

Banker must not be guilty of negligence.

Thus (Scholey v. Ramsbottom, 2 Camp. 485), a check which evidently had been torn in four pieces and pasted together on a sheet of paper was paid by the banker. The customer proved that after drawing it he had torn it up and thrown it away. It was held the bankers were not justified in paying it without inquiry, and having done so could not charge their customer with the payment (Ingham v. Primrose, 28 L. J. C. P. 295).

But the banker may recover from the payee or holder the amount paid by mistake on a fraudulently raised check if neither party have been in fault, as money paid without consideration; but where either party has been guilty of negligence or carelessness in the transaction by CHECKS. which the other has been injured the negligent party must bear the loss (Espy v. The Bank of Cincinnati, 18 Wallace Rep. 604).

Where an alteration appears on the face of a bill or note it lies on the plaintiff to show that it was made under such circumstances as not to vitiate the instrument (Johnson v. The Duke of Marlborough, 2 Stark 313; Henman v. Dickinson, 5 Bing. 183; Knight v. Clements, 8 Ad. & E. 215).

Lost Checks.

By 17 & 18 Vic. c. 125, s. 87, in case of any action founded upon a bill of exchange or other negotiable instrument, the court or a judge has power to order that the loss of such instrument shall not be set up, provided an indemnity be given to the satisfaction of the court or judge or a master against the claims of any other person upon such negotiable instrument.

The party suing on the lost bill should offer an indemnity to the defendants before bringing the action, or pleas setting up the loss of the bill will not be struck out, except on payment of the defendant's costs of the action (King v. Zimmerman, L. R. 6 C. P. 466).

This enactment only applies to cases where an action has been begun on the lost check, and it would seem that where, after the loss of the check and before the commencement of the action, the bankers on whom the check was drawn, fail, the drawer is not liable for the amount of the check, at least where the ordinary time for presenting the check has elapsed (Bevan v. Hill, 2 Camp. 381).

Cashed Checks.

The custom of bankers is to return checks after cashing them to the drawer; and it has been said that a banker has no more right to retain a check which he has cashed than the payee a bill of exchange which has been paid (Per Wilde, C. J., Reg. v. Watts, 2 Den. C. C. 14, 21).

CHECKS.

 To whom a cashed
 belongs.

It is, however, obvious that a cashed check is the banker's only voucher for the payment with which he has charged his customer. On the other hand, a cashed check is evidence for the customer that money has been paid on his behalf to the payee. Probably, as between the banker and customer, the customer is only entitled to retain the checks after he has settled with the banker the account to which the checks refer. But, as regards third parties, the banker is taken to be in privity with his customer, and, therefore, where the drawer is one of the parties to an action, a notice to him to produce the check, whether it be in his actual possession or the banker's is sufficient to secure its production, or, failing that, the admission of secondary evidence (Partridge v. Coals, Ry. & M. 156 ; Burton v. Payne, 2 C. & P. 520).

Bankers not unfrequently in return for a loan obtain a check drawn by the borrower on them for the amount of the loan and in such a case the bankers retain the check as a voucher for the loan (Other v. Ireson, 24 L. J. Chanc. 654), and see Checks as Evidence, infra.

Checks as Payment.

The giving and taking a negotiable check on a banker for and on account of a debt is equivalent to payment, until it has been presented for payment and refused (Pearce v. Davis, 1 M. & Rob. 365 ; Caine v. Coulson, 32 L. J. Ex. 97).

But a check is no payment where it is not honored, though it may have been taken in preference to cash (Everitt v. Collins, 2 Camp. 515). A creditor may refuse to accept a check in payment, and it would appear may sue

CHECKS. for the original debt before returning the check (Hough Payment v. May, 4 A. & E. 954; Stuart v. Cawse, 28 L. J. C. P. by check. 193). The mere receipt of a check drawn in conditional terms is no payment (Hough v. May, supra).

Where a payment has been made by a check, the drawer is entitled to stop the payment of the check, and to resist an action on the check, on any grounds which would enable him at law to recover his money if he had paid in cash and not by check (Mills v. Oddy, 6 C. & P. 728; 2 C. M. & R. 103).

If a check be given on a condition which the drawer finds to be eluded or broken he is entitled to stop the payment of the check (Wienholt v. Spitta, 3 Camp. 376; Spincer v. Spincer, 2 M. & G. 295).

But if A., by means of a false pretence or promise, or a condition which he does not fulfil, procure B. to give him a check in favour of C., to whom he pays it, and who receives it bonâ fide for value, B. remains liable on the check, and if cashed by C., cannot recover the money from him (Watson v. Russell, 31 L. J. Q. B. 304; Currie v. Misa, L. R. 10 Ex. 163; 1 App. Ca. 554).

Where the acceptor or drawee of a bill proposes to pay by check, the holder should not in strictness give up the bill till the check is paid (Ward v. Evans, 2 Ld. Ray. 928). It has been held, where a country correspondent sent up to a London banker a bill for presentment, and the banker receiving a check in payment gave up the bill, and the check was afterwards dishonored, that the banker was not guilty of negligence (Russell v. Hankey, 6 T. R. 12).

Where a buyer pays for goods by a check which he knows, or has good reason to believe, will not be honored, though the goods be delivered, no property in them passes to him, and the seller may recover them in trover (Noble v. Adams, 7 Taunt. 59; Earl of Bristol v. Willsmore, 1 B. & C. 514).

Where a creditor receives from a debtor's agent in payment of the debt the agent's own check, which is afterwards dishonored, whether the debtor is discharged or not, is more a question of fact than of law, depending on the answer to the question whether exclusive credit was given to the agent or not. Thus, where a debtor took his creditor to his agent, and the creditor, being offered by the agent either cash or the agent's check, took the check, which was afterwards dishonored, it was held that the debtor was not discharged, though the agent failed with a balance belonging to his principal in his hands to a larger amount than the amount of the check; because the agent's check was, considering all the circumstances, tantamount to the debtor's check, and no debtor is discharged by giving a check which produces nothing, though cash may have been previously tendered (Everitt v. Collins, 2 Camp. 515). But if the creditor, taking from the debtor's agent a check which is afterwards dishonored, give the agent a receipt as if the money were actually received, and the debtor, without notice of the dishonor, in consequence of such receipt deals with the agent on the footing that the debt has been satisfied, the debt will be deemed discharged as to the debtor (Wyat v. Marquis of Hertford, 3 East. 147; Story on Agency, s. 433—4).

Payment to an Agent by Check.

As a general rule, an agent authorised to receive payment has authority only to receive it in cash, therefore a debtor paying his creditor's agent in any other form than cash (as by bill) may have to pay again to the principal if the agent turn out a defaulter. But since it is the

CHECKS.
 Payment of agent by check.

custom to pay in checks, it is a question for the jury whether payment by a check which is afterwards honored is, or is not, equivalent to a cash payment as against the principal (see judgment of Blackburn, J., in Williams v Evans, L. R. 1 Q. B. 352).

And where the agent has a higher authority, as where he is not bound to hand over the sum in specie, but to pay an equivalent sum, payment to him by a check crossed to his bankers and honored by the drawees is a good payment as against the principal (Bridges v. Garrett, L. R. 5 C. P. 451).

Checks as Evidence of a Debt.

No inference can be drawn from the fact per se of a man drawing a check in favour of another. Thus a check drawn but not presented is no evidence of a previous debt due from the drawee to the payee (Pearce v. Davis, 1 M. & R. 365; Lloyd v. Sandelands, as explained by Alderson, B., in Mountford v. Harper, 16 M. & W. 825). A check drawn and delivered to the payee, and crossed in the payee's handwriting, and produced by the drawer with other papers belonging to the payee, is no evidence of a loan by the drawer without proof of the payment of the check to the payee (Bleasby v. Crossley, 3 Bing. 430). A check shown to have been in circulation is evidence of a payment having been made to the payee on behalf of the drawer (Thomson v. Pitman, 1 F. & F. 339).

A check which has been cancelled by a banker is no evidence of money lent by the banker to the customer (Fletcher v. Manning, 12 M. & W. 571), but it is prima facie evidence of a payment to the amount of the check by the banker of his debt to the customer (ibid.).

Of Payment.

To prove payment by a check it is not sufficient to prove delivery of a check by way of payment. It must be further shown that the circumstances were such as would make the check a payment by the debtor to the creditor. Therefore proof of the delivery of a check not unconditional, but drawn in these terms: Pay H. & Co. balance account railing or bearer, does not support a plea of payment (Hough v. May, 4 A. & E. 954).

A cashed check is not sufficient by itself to prove the payment of a debt to the payee of the check, but it must be further shown that a debt existed between the parties at the date of the check (Aubert v. Walsh, 4 Taunt, 293), and either the delivery of the check to the payee (Mountford v. Harper, 16 M. & W. 825; Boswell v. Smith, 6 C. & P. 60), or the receipt by the payee of the money for the check as evidenced by indorsement of the payee (Egg v. Barrett, 3 Esp. 196; Boswell v. Smith, 6 C. & P. 60). It is, therefore, prudent to cause the payee to write his name across the check or to indorse it.

In an action by A. to recover from B. a sum alleged to have been paid on B.'s behalf to C. by A., upon proof of a claim received by A. from C. of the sending of a check by A. to C., and of a receipt of a check by C., a receipt for the amount from C. to A. was held admissible in evidence against B., as a fact to prove the payment of the amount by A. without proving that the check was honored (Carmarthen Ry. v. Manchester Ry., L. R. 8 C. P. 684).

Where a bill is given under such circumstances as to raise the implication of a promise to pay the balance, and

CHECKS. so if necessary to revive the debt, the revived right of Statute of limitations. action dates from the delivery of the bill, whether it be subsequently honored or not (Turney v. Dodwell, 23 L.
 J. Q. B. 137).

The law seems to be the same where payment is made by check.

But when a loan is made by check the statute begins to run from the time of the payment of the check by the bankers on whom it is drawn (Garden v. Bruce, L. R. 3 C. P. 300).

A Check as a Gift.

A check drawn by A. in favour of B. and given to B. as a gift cannot be enforced by B. against A. (Easton v. Pratchett, 1 C. M. & R. 808).

A check drawn by the donor on his own banker and not presented before the death of the donor is not a valid donatio mortis causâ (Hewett v. Kaye, L. R. 6 Eq. 198), because the death of the donor is a revocation of the authority to pay. But where a check has been given inter vivos, and presented, but not paid on the ground that the signature differed from the usual signature of the drawer, and the drawer died before the check was paid, it was held that the gift was as complete as the donor could make it, and that the check must be paid out of the funds in the hands of the executors (Bromley v. Brunton, 6 Eq. 275); but the gift of a check and of the donor's pass-book when the donor died before presentment is not a good donatio mortis causâ (Beak v. Beak, L. R. 13 Eq. 489).

Check held by Stakeholder.

Where a stakeholder is intrusted with a check as representing the stakes, he does not necessarily commit a breach of trust by cashing the check before the occurrence of the event deciding the right to the stakes (Wilkinson v. Godefroy, 9 A. & E. 536). CHECKS.

A check is within the provision of the "Bills of Exchange Act 1855" (18 & 19 Vic. c. 67), by which a summary mode of recovery is provided (Eyre v. Waller, 29 L. J. Ex. 246).

CHAPTER VII.

CROSSED CHECKS.

CROSSED CHECKS. AS the Act of 39 & 40 Vic. c. 81, begins by repealing the two previous Acts on the same subject, it is necessary to consider the state of the law before the passing of this Act.

History of practice of crossing.

Previous to the passing of the 19 & 20 Vic. c. 25, the first Act relating to crossed checks, it had long been the practice to write across the face of a check the name of a banker. This practice began at the clearing house; the clerks of the different bankers who did business there, having been accustomed to write across the checks the names of their employers, so as to enable the clearing-house clerks to make up the accounts. It then became a common practice to cross checks, which were not intended to go through the clearing house at all, with the name of a banker, or with the words "& Co." This crossing was made indifferently by the drawer or a subsequent holder of the check. The meaning given by usage to the crossing was that of a direction to the drawees to pay only to a banker: the object was to trace for whose use the money on the check was received, and thus invalidate the payment to a wrongful holder in case of loss; but it was held that, at common law, the crossing was a mere memorandum on the face of the instrument, formed no part of the instrument itself, and did not affect its negotiability; from which it followed that the direction attempted to be given in the crossing, being in fact a mere memorandum, was not one the banker was bound to obey as between himself and his customer ; but, that the practice being where a check was crossed for a banker to refuse to pay it to anyone except a banker, a banker breaking through the practice did so at his peril ; for the circumstance of his so paying would be strong evidence of negligence in an action against him by his customer for the amount paid on the check if the person presenting it turned out to be not the lawful holder (Bellamy v. Majoribanks, 7 Ex. 389 ; Carlton v. Ireland, 25 L. J., Q. B. 113).

CROSSED
CHECKS.

Upon this state of the law the Act of 19 & 20 Vic. c. 25 was passed, giving a crossing the force of a direction to the bankers that the check should only be paid to or through some banker, thus rendering payment otherwise than through a banker invalid. But it was shortly afterwards held (Simmons v. Tuzlor, 27 L. J., C. P. 45), that the crossing was no part of the check ; that its unauthorized obliteration was no forgery of the check, and therefore, that the payment without negligence of a check, whose crossing had been obliterated, to a holder not a banker was as between the banker and his customer the drawer a good payment.

Vic. c. 25.

Thereupon 21 & 22 Vict. c. 79, ss. 1 & 3, made the crossing a part of the check, and the fraudulent obliteration or alteration of it felony ; it gave a lawful holder power to cross a check, and provided in favour of the banker, that where a crossing had been so obliterated or altered as not plainly to appear, a wrong payment in consequence, if without the fraud or negligence of the banker, should not be questioned.

21 & 22
Vic. c. 79.

It was decided in 1875 (Smith v. Union Bank of London, L. R. 10 Q. B. 291, & 1 Q. B. D. 31) that the crossing did not restrain the negotiability of a check, and that the restriction of payment of a crossed check was for the direct benefit of the drawer, and indirectly only for the benefit of a holder of a check; therefore, that a plaintiff who had ceased to be the holder of a crossed check (the check having been lost and then come into the hands of a bonâ fide holder) could not sue the bank on whom the check was drawn for paying it through a banker, other than the one with whose name the check was crossed.

CROSSED

Crossed
Checks
Act.

After this decision, "The Crossed Checks Act 1875" (39 & 40 Vic. c. 81) was passed, of which the following is the effect: It repeals all previous Acts, and after defining a check to mean a draft or order on a banker payable to bearer or to order on demand, and to include a Bank of England or Ireland dividend warrant, it creates four kinds of crossed checks.

I. A check generally crossed (sec. 4).

II. A check once specially crossed (sec. 4).

III. A check twice specially crossed (sec. 5).

IV. A check generally or specially crossed, and with the words "not negotiable" (sec. 5).

Check
"generally
crossed."

I. A check is "generally crossed" (sec. 4) which bears across its face an addition of two parallel transverse lines, or of the words "& Company," or any abbreviation thereof, between two parallel transverse lines; that addition is a crossing, and may (sec. 5) be made by a lawful holder. When made (sec. 6) it is deemed a material part of the check and may not be obliterated. Such a check is payable by the banker on whom it is drawn only to a banker (sec. 7).

A variation of the old form of crossing is here introduced, i.e., by an addition simply of two transverse parallel lines.

Check
"specially

II. A check is "specially crossed" (sec. 4) which bears across its face an addition of the name of a banker. That addition is a crossing. A lawful holder may (sec. 5) cross an uncrossed check specially, or convert a general into a special crossing. This special crossing is a material, part of the check, and may not be obliterated, added to or altered (except by a banker, see infra). The effect of a special crossing is (sec. 7) to make the check so crossed payable, by the banker on whom it is drawn, only to the banker to whom it is crossed, or his agent for collection.

CROSSED
CHECKS.

The name of the "agent for collection" may appear on the face of this class of check, as when it is specially crossed to him by his principal (see infra); but unless after "his agent for collection" are to be read some such words as "where it is so crossed," a specially crossed check appears to be payable to the banker's agent for collection, though his name does not appear on the check.

III. A check twice specially crossed (sec. 5) arises lawfully where a banker to whom a check is specially crossed, again specially crosses it, as he may do, to another banker, his agent for collection. The second crossing, like the first, is a material part of the check, and must not be obliterated or altered (sec. 6).

Check
"twice
crossed."

This is a new kind of check apparently payable only to the agent for collection with whose name it is crossed. It would appear advisable, in some way, to show on the face of the check that one of the crossings is, in fact, a crossing to an agent for collection by the banker to whom the check was firstly crossed; for as a banker is prohibited by sec. 8 from paying a check specially crossed to more than one banker, he seems bound, for his own protection from a charge of negligence (sec. 9), to satisfy himself that the bank presenting is, primâ facie at all events, the agent for collection of the bank to whom the check is crossed.

IV. A check generally and specially crossed, and with the words "not negotiable."

CROSSED CHECKS.Checks crossed generally or specially and "not negotiable."

A lawful holder may, in addition to crossing a check generally or specially, add (sec. 5) the words "not negotiable;" these words then form part of the crossing and may not be obliterated (secs. 4 & 6). The holder of such a check cannot give a better title than the person from whom he received it (sec. 12).

This is a new form of check; in some respects its incidents are like those of a forged or altered bill; that is, where there is a flaw in the title, the right of the holder for value is confined to a right to recover the consideration for the bill as between himself and the party from whom he received it. A similar remedy may be resorted to till the party is reached whose title was bad (Burchfield v. Moore, 23 L. J., Q. B. 261).

check.

A lawful holder (which expression includes the drawer) has power (sec. 5) to cross a check. The lawful holder may cross a check generally or specially, or add the words "not negotiable" to a crossing: a banker to whom a check is specially crossed may cross it specially again to his agent for collection.

Crossing
may not be obliterated, altered, or added to.

A crossing may not be (sec. 6) obliterated, nor altered, or added to, except as above mentioned. There are no express words forbidding the cancellation of a crossing. The expression "to obliterate" means, it is suggested, to erase the marks of a crossing so as to make the check look as if it never had been crossed (Simmonds v. Taylor, 27 L. J., C. P. 249, & sec. 11), while "to alter" seems to refer either to the changing of a general into a special crossing, or to the recrossing spoken of in sec. 5. The drawer can probably, as under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 79 (the repealed Act), by which the crossing does not become material till the issue of the check, cancel the crossing by writing "pay cash," or equivalent words; but it has never been decided that a lawful holder has a similar power. Alteration of a check in a material point, such as the crossing, whether by obliteration, or addition, or alteration, by persons without power, avoids the instrument and releases the drawer.

CROSSED
CHECKS.

A check cannot be a second time specially crossed, except (sec. 5) by the banker to whom it was first specially crossed, and by him only to his agent, being a banker for collection. The banker (sec. 8) to whom a check specially crossed more than once is presented for payment is commanded to refuse payment of such a check, except in the case where it is crossed to an agent for the purpose of collection.

Banker only may cross a check a second time, and only with agent's name.

The banker to whom a check bearing more than one special crossing is presented for payment must apparently satisfy himself that of the two crossings on such a check, one, the first in point of time, had been placed on the check by a lawful holder when the check was paid into the banker, whose agent now presents it; for the banker, unless he is a lawful holder, has no right to cross it, and he does not become a lawful holder, until he has given value for it. And, as to the second crossing, that it was placed on the check by the banker to whom the check was first specially crossed, as an appointment of the person who presents it, to be his agent for collection. Except when the banker on whom the check is drawn is satisfied of this (sec. 8) he pays the check at his peril.

Duty of banker to whom check bearing two crossings is presented for payment.

Section 10 provides that any banker paying a crossed check contrary to the directions of the crossing shall be liable to the true owner of the check for any loss he may sustain owing to the check having been so paid.

Banker liable to true owner for disobedience to crossing.

“The true owner” is a term as yet without interpretation. It would appear to be some one other than the person whose bankers have obtained payment on the check; and as the term “lawful holder” is already used in sec. 5, some one not necessarily the same as the lawful holder. Possibly a lawful holder who has been injured by a payment contrary to the provisions of a crossing may recover under this section.

The expression used with reference to the check is "crossed," and not "appearing to be crossed," as in sec. 11. It may be inferred that "crossed" means lawfully crossed, that is, by a lawful holder: if so, any one seeking to recover under this section must prove that the crossing was made by a lawful holder before he can make the banker liable under this section.

Provisions for protection of drawer.

It is then provided for the protection of the drawer (sec. 9), that where the banker on whom a crossed check is drawn has in good faith and without negligence paid such check, in accordance with the directions of the crossing, the drawer, in case such check has come to the hands of the payee, shall be entitled to the same rights and be placed in the same position in all respects, as if the amount of the check had been paid to and received by the true owner thereof.

The duty of the banker is considered below (p. 105), and here it is only necessary to consider what concerns the drawer himself.

The word "payee" presents some difficulty. Probably it includes not only persons named in the check (for this interpretation would limit the application of the section), but any person to whom the check is delivered in payment.

"Come to the hands of" implies necessarily only a bare receipt by the payee, irrespective of any acceptance in satisfaction. It appears sufficient for the drawer to prove a receipt of the check, followed by a payment by the drawer's bankers.

"The true owner," as has been said above, apparently is some person other than the one whose bankers have obtained payment on the check, and not necessarily the same person as the lawful holder.

The drawer appears still to have the power to decline to be charged with any payment made on a crossed check except to a banker (Smith v. The Union Bank, 1 Q. B. D. 31), or to adopt the payment and sue the person who received the money, if the latter had a bad title to the check (Bobbett v. Pinkett, 1 Ex. D. 368, 373).

It is provided on behalf of the banker presenting the check (sec. 12)—

That a banker who has, in good faith and without negligence, received payment for a customer of a check crossed generally or specially to himself shall not, in case the title to the check prove defective, incur any liability to the true owner of the check by reason only of having received such payment.

“Customer” is a word as yet without interpretation. It would appear to mean a person on whose behalf the bank has undertaken to present a check; and not necessarily a person, therefore, keeping an account with the bank.

“In good faith and without negligence.” The Act apparently casts on the banker the duty of satisfying himself that the person for whom he presents the check has a good title. It is difficult to say how far a jury might think a banker bound to push his researches. The appearance of the instrument would appear to be less a subject of consideration by the banker presenting, than by the banker who pays on the instrument.

“Check crossed generally or specially.” If, as would seem by sec. 5, a crossing can only be effectually done by a lawful holder, the banker to avail himself of this section must prove that the check was crossed by a lawful holder. The banker himself has no right to cross the check to himself, until he has given value for it, and become a lawful holder.

“True owner.” Here again the true owner is some one other than the "customer," and may not necessarily be the lawful holder (see ante, p. 103).

"By reason only of having received such payment." The protection exists where the money has been received for—but not apparently where it has been paid away to—the customer. And the liability of the banker laid down in Ogden v. Berras, L. R. 9 C. P. 513, and Arnold v. The Cheque Bank, 1 C. P. D. 578, remains unaltered. That is, a banker, though he has paid away the money he obtained on the check to his customer, is liable for that amount to the lawful holder, if his customer turn out to have no title.

It is provided on behalf of the drawer's banker—

Provisions
for pro-
of drawee.

I. (Sec. 9.) That where a banker on whom a check is drawn has, in good faith and without negligence, paid such check, if crossed generally, to a banker, and if crossed specially, to the banker to whom it is crossed, or his agent for collection, being a banker, the banker paying the check shall be entitled to the same rights and placed in the same position in all respects, as if the amount of the check had been paid to and received by the true owner thereof.

"In good faith and without negligence." The paying banker may not have to look beyond the banker presenting, or his agent for collection; but he would seem bound to consider the appearance of the instrument.

"Crossed," if it means "lawfully crossed," i. e., by a lawful holder (sec. 5), makes the banker responsible for the genuineness of the crossing (see ante, p. 104).

"The true owner" seems to mean some person other than the one whose banker had procured payment of the check who may not be the lawful owner.

II. (Sec. 11.) Where a check is presented for payment which does not at the time of presentation appear to be crossed, or to have had a crossing which has been obliterated, rated, or to have been added to or altered otherwise than as authorized by the Act, a banker paying the check in good faith and without negligence shall not be responsible or incur any liability, nor shall the payment be questioned by reason of the check having been otherwise than it appears.

This section is in effect the same as that of the repealed Act, 21 & 22 Vic. c. 79, s. 4, except that the latter Act makes it necessary that the check shall "plainly" appear to be crossed, &c.

There is no section in the 39 & 40 Vic. c. 81, making the obliteration, &c. of a crossing with intent to defraud a felony, as in the 21 & 22 Vic. c. 79.

CHAPTER VIII.

LETTERS OF CREDIT AND CIRCULAR NOTES.

CIRCULAR
NOTES.

LETTERS of credit have been more considered in America than in this country, and the result of the decisions has been summarized in the Civil Code of the State of New York, § 1573—1581, from which much of the following matter is extracted (and see Story on Bills, § 459—464).

Letters of credit.

A letter of credit is a written request addressed by one person to another, requesting the latter to give credit to the person in whose favour it is drawn. It may be addressed to several persons in succession. The writer of a letter of credit is upon default of the debtor liable to those who gave credit in compliance with its terms.

A letter of credit is either general or special. When the request for credit in a letter is addressed to specified persons by name or description, the letter is special. All other letters of credit are general.

General letter of credit.

A general letter of credit gives any person to whom it may be shown authority to comply with its request, and by his so doing it becomes as to him of the same effect as if addressed to him by name. Thus (In re Agra and Masterman's Bank; Ex parte Asiatic Banking Company, L. R. 2 Ch. Ap. 391; 36 L. J. Ch. 222), a letter of credit was in the following form. It was addressed to D. T. & Co. in these words: "No. 394. You are hereby authorized to draw upon this bank to the extent of £15,000, and such drafts I undertake duly to honor on presentation. This credit will remain in force for twelve months from its date, and parties negotiating bills under it are requested to indorse particulars on the back hereof," and signed by the general manager and chief accountant of the Agra and Masterman's Bank. The court held this letter consisted of two parts, the first containing an authority to D. T. & Co. to draw the bills; the second, though not in terms, in substance addressed to the persons who were to negotiate the bills; that when the offer contained in the second part had been accepted and acted upon, there was probably at law a valid and binding legal contract against the bank issuing the letter of credit in favour of the parties who acted on it, either on the principles laid down in cases as to the offer of rewards (Williams v. Carwardine, 1 B. & Ad. 621), or on the principle that the holder of the letter of credit is the agent of the writer for the purpose of entering into the contract. But assuming the contract to have been at law with D. T. & Co. and with no other, such a contract was in equity assignable and must be taken to have been assigned to the parties who acted on the letter (The Asiatic Banking Company); and according to the meaning and essence of the contract, free from any equities between D. T. & Co. and the bank. In a later case (Maitland v. The Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, 33 L. J. Ch. 363) it was held that the bonâ fide holder of a bill of exchange drawn under an open letter of credit, and taken by him on the faith of such letter of credit, has a right of action at law against the grantor of the letter of credit in case of the latter's refusal to accept the bill. In this case the letter of credit was of the kind known as a marginal letter of credit; that is, it was written on the margin of a draft form of bill of exchange for £2000, the date and signature to which were left to be inserted by the drawer. The letter of credit authorized certain named persons to

CIRCULAR

draw the "annexed" bill of exchange, which would be honored by G. & Co. of London; and the suit was to restrain a bonâ fide holder from dealing with the bill.

Where the marginal letter of credit is an open one an indorsee is not bound to make inquiry as to the purposes for which the letter was granted; but he will be taken to have notice of all that appears on the face of the letter, as in the case of a document letter of credit which says on the face of it that it is only to be used for the purpose of obtaining produce (Maitland v. The Chartered Bank of India, London, and China, 2 H. & M. 440).

Several persons may successively give credit upon a general letter.

credit may be in nature of a continuing guarantee.

If the parties to a credit appear by its terms to contemplate a course of future dealing between the parties it is not exhausted by giving a credit, even to the amount limited by the letter, which is subsequently reduced or satisfied by payments made by the debtor, but it is to be deemed a continuing guarantee.

The writer of a letter of credit is liable for credit given upon it without notice to him, unless its terms express or imply the necessity of giving notice.

If a letter of credit prescribes the persons by whom or the mode in which the credit is to be given, or the term of credit, or limits the amount thereof, the writer is not bound except for transactions which in these respects conform strictly to the terms of the letter.

Terms of the letter must be followed.

Nor, on the other hand, can the writer discharge himself if money has been paid in against the issue of the note, nor charge the person on whose account the letter was issued except with payments in strict conformity to the terms of the letter (British Linen Company v. The Caledonian Insurance Co., 4 Macqueen, H. L. C. 107).

Thus a letter of credit directing the payment to be made to A. B., or directing the addressee "to honor the drafts of A. B.," is not a negotiable instrument, and is only satisfied by the payment to the genuine A. B. or on his genuine order; payment on the forged order of A. B. is not a payment sufficient within the terms of the letter.

CIRCULAR
NOTES.

It is the duty of the person paying on the letter to pay to the right person; the mere possession of the letter of credit by the person demanding payment does not necessarily impart that he is the person entitled to draw for the amount mentioned in it, and the person paying is bound for his own safety to make further inquiries (Orr v. The Union Bank of Scotland, 1 Macqueen, H. L. C. 513, 523).

Payment
must be made to
person.

Therefore, where for a sum down a banker grants a letter of credit, he must show that it has been complied with or pay back the money (Orr v. The Union Bank of Scotland, supra); and in such case the banker cannot insist on the letter of credit being brought back to him as a condition precedent to the recovery of the money.

The 16 & 17 Vic. c. 59, s. 19, which absolves bankers from responsibility for the genuineness of the indorsement of a draft payable to order on demand, does not apply to a letter of credit couched in the words, "please to honor the drafts of A. B." (British Linen Company v. Caledonian Insurance Company, 4 Macqueen 107).

Where a bank has issued a letter of credit on the terms that the bills they agree to accept are to be covered by bills of lading, suspension of payment before there has been time for the letter of credit to be used is not a breach of the contract for which, under the Companies Act 1862, the holder of the letter can claim damages; for the court might have given permission to the liquidators to accept bills (Ex parte Tondeur, In re The Agra Bank, L. R. 5 Eq. 160).

A letter of credit granted in the United Kingdom authorizing drafts to be drawn out of the United Kingdom

LETTERS OF CREDIT AND CIRCULAR NOTES. payable in the United Kingdom, is exempt from stamp duty (33 & 34 Vic. c. 97, schedule, tit. Bill of Exchange).

Every letter of credit issued by a limited company under the Companies Act 1862 must contain the full name of the company (25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 42).

Circular notes.

Circular notes are somewhat in the nature of letters of credit; they are requests addressed to the correspondents of the bank issuing them to pay a certain named person the sum therein named. Each request generally refers to the letter of indication, stating that the bearer of the note should present a letter of indication in which his signature will be found.

The letter of indication is a letter addressed to the bank's correspondents, with a space for the signature of the payee of the notes, and signed by some official of the bank.

The circular notes are in general issued against a payment of money to the amount of the notes.

It is not obligatory (Conflans Quarry Co. v. Parker, L. R. 3 C. P. 1) upon the holder to cash the circular notes, though he purchases a right to do so if he thinks proper; in the event of his not requiring to use them abroad he may, after reasonable notice of his electing not to use them, require repayment at the banker's hands.

But he must present or return them to the banker, for the latter cannot be called upon to return the amount so long as the notes are outstanding and in existence, so that he may be called upon to pay a correspondent who has cashed them.

A correspondent who pays on a forged signature to a circular note cannot recover against the banker as upon a payment to the right person.

CHAPTER IX.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE PAYABLE AT A BANK.

THE bills of exchange which concern a banker in his trade of banker are those which are payable at his banking-house, whether those his customer has made payable at his banking-house, or those which he has agreed to accept for his customer.

EXCHANGE
BANK.

For where a customer employs his banker as agent for presentment the duties and liabilities of the latter do not differ from those of any other agent for a like purpose towards his principal. He is liable for any neglect of the duty he has undertaken to perform. Thus he should at once give notice to his principal of a refusal to accept or to pay, for he will be held liable for any injury to his principal arising from his neglect (Van Wart v. Woolley, 3 B. & C. 439).

when agent for

His relations, then, are twofold, towards his customer and towards the presenter or holder of the bill.

First, to deal with the relations between the banker and his customer. A customer who makes an acceptance payable at a bank in effect orders the bank to pay the bill to the person who is according to the law merchant capable of giving a good discharge for the bill (Robarts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 570, 579; Forster v. Clements, 2 Camp. 17); therefore if the bill be payable to order, it is an authority to pay the bill to any person who becomes holder by a genuine indorsement, and if the bill is originally payable to bearer, or if there is afterwards a genuine indorsement in blank, it is an authority to pay the bill to the person who seems to be the holder. It follows that the banker is responsible to his customer for the title of the person to whom he pays the bill, for he cannot charge his customers with any payment made to a person not the lawful holder, nor with the difference in amount, where the bill has been altered and a larger sum inserted than the sum for which it was made payable by the customer (Hall v. Fuller, 5 B. & C. 750).

Banker
and customer.

His duty is to pay the bill (Kymer v. Laurie, 18 L. J. Q.B. 218) on presentment during the hours of business out of funds belonging to the customer, if any have been in his hands a sufficient time to enable his clerks to know of their existence (Whittaker v. Bank of England, 1 C. M. & R. 744); and he is bound if he has received a sum of money for the express purpose of taking up a certain bill, to apply it to that purpose only (Farley v. Turner, 26 L. J. Chan. 710); and if he do not so apply it, his customer may recover the deposit, or may sue for damages for breach of his mandate to the banker (Hill v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 618; Bell v. Carey, 8 C. B. 887). He is entitled, if he has accepted bills for the accommodation of his customer, to retain a sum of money out of the customer's account sufficient to answer the outstanding bills which are due (Morse v. Kempson, 1 Camp. 12; but see Jeffryes v. Agra Bank, L. R. 2 Eq. 674), although the remedy on the bills be barred by the Statute of Limitations (Morse v. Williams, 3 Camp. 418).

Banker
under acceptance for customer.

Banker's duty to mark bills
as paid.

It is the duty of bankers to make some memorandum on bills and notes which have been paid; and if they do not, the holders of such securities cannot be affected by any payment made before they are due (per Lord Ellenborough, Burbidge v. Manners, 3 Camp. 193; Attenborough v. Mackenzie, 25 L. J. Ex. 244).

Next, as to the relations between the banker and presenter or holder.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE PAYABLE AT A BANK.

The duty of the banker towards the presenter or holder of a bill is (Warwick v. Rogers, 5 M. & G. 340) to take good care of the bill, and if he do not choose to pay it, to return it uncanceled, unless it has been cancelled by mistake, and in that case to indicate the same by writing on the bill; if he wrongfully omits to return or defaces the bill he becomes liable to an action on the case, if the holder has sustained injury through his breach of duty.

Banker's duty to presenter.

If he pay and afterwards find out the acceptance to be a forgery, it is doubtful on authority whether he can recover the money so paid from the holder. The point has come before the court in two cases (Smith v. Mercer, 6 Taunt. 76; Cox v. Masterman, 9 B. & C. 902; and see Price v. Neal, 3 Burr. 1354 & 1 W. Bl. 390); in Smith v. Mercer the majority of the court held that a banker, being bound to know his customer's signature, could not recover from the holder the money he had paid; but the court, in Cox v. Masterman, expressly refused to give an opinion on this point. In both cases a period elapsed between the payment and the discovery of the forgery—in Smith v. Mercer of seven days, and Cox v. Masterman of one day—sufficient to enable the court to decide against the banker, on the ground that by his delay in giving notice of the forgery the remedy of the holder against the antecedent parties had been lost or impaired. But a banker does not necessarily, by discounting for the indorsee a bill purporting to be accepted by his customer, warrant the signature to be genuine; he may therefore on discovering such an acceptance to be a forgery recover the money he paid on the bill (Fuller v. Smith, 1 Car. & P. 197). On the other hand, the banker may refuse to pay the presenter, either holder or not, a course which he is justified in pursuing (Robarts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 578), or he may refuse unconditionally ; in this latter case no action will lie against the banker by the holder, neither when the banker has agreed with the acceptor to apply certain moneys to the discharge of the bill, and has so appropriated them in the books of the bank (Moore v. Bushell, 27 L. J. Ex. 4 ; Hill v. Royds, L.R. 8 Eq. 290) ; nor where the banker has cancelled the signature of a bill presented to him through the clearing house by drawing lines across it in the way customary among bankers when they intend to pay a bill or check, and returned it with the statement that it was cancelled by mistake, and that he had orders not to pay (Warwick v. Rogers, 5 M. & G. 340) ; nor where the bankers having received funds to take up the bill called on the presenter in order to take it up at a period when the bill was not actually in the presenter's possession (Stewart v. Fry, 7 Taunton, 339).

banker be holder's
agent for
ment.

But under certain circumstances the acceptor's banker may be also the holder's agent for presentment, and if while he is agent for the holder the acceptor pay in a sum specifically for the discharge of the bill the holder can recover the amount of this sum from his agent the banker (De Bernales v. Fuller, 14 East, 590, 593).

Where drawer
and acceptor have same
banker.

Where a bank who have given credit in account for a bill to the drawer, their customer, receive directions from the acceptor, who is also a customer, to stop payment of the bill at the place of payment, and do so accordingly, they are not bound to give notice of this circumstance to the drawer, but may upon non-payment look to the drawer, and are not bound to apply the money of the acceptor in their hands in discharge of the bill (Crosse v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545).

Where
banker is

It sometimes happens that a banker, at whose house a bill is payable, is himself the holder of the bill when it falls due ; in such a case, to enable the banker to charge a previous indorser, it is a sufficient demand and sufficient refusal to find from his books that the customer has no effects in his hands (Sanderson v. Judge, 2 H. Bl. 509 ; Bailey v. Porter, 14 M. & W. 44). Again the banker may be the indorser of the bill ; if he pay it on presentment it is a matter of inference, from the facts of the case, whether he paid it as agent for the acceptor or on his own account as indorser (Pollard v. Ogden, 2 E. & B. 459 ; 22 L. J. Q. B. 439). "The Stamp Acts, 1870, 1871," affix the following duties on—

(2). Every person into whose hands any such bill or note comes in the United Kingdom before it is stamped, shall, before he presents for payment or indorses, transfers, or in any manner negotiates or pays such bill or note, affix thereto a proper adhesive stamp or proper adhesive stamps of sufficient amount, and cancel every stamp so affixed thereto.

(3). Provided as follows :—

(a). If at the time when any such bill or note comes into the hands of any bonâ fide holder thereof there is affixed thereto an adhesive stamp effectually obliterated, and purporting and appearing to be duly cancelled, such stamp shall, so far as relates to such holder, be deemed to be duly cancelled, although it may not appear to have been so affixed or cancelled by the proper person.

(b). If at the time when any such bill or note comes into the hands of any bonâ fide holder thereof, there is affixed thereto an adhesive stamp not duly cancelled, it shall be competent for such holder to cancel such stamp as if he were the person by whom it was affixed, and upon his so doing such bill or note shall be deemed duly stamped, and as valid and available as if the stamp had been duly cancelled by the person by whom it was affixed.

55. When a bill of exchange is drawn in a set according to the custom of merchants, and one of the set is duly stamped, the other or others of the set shall, unless issued or in some manner negotiated apart from such duly stamped bill, be exempt from duty; and upon proof of the loss or destruction of a duly stamped bill forming one of a set, any other bill of the set which has not been issued, or in any manner negotiated apart from such lost or destroyed bill, may, although unstamped, be admitted in evidence to prove the contents of such lost or destroyed bill.

Bills of exchange payable otherwise than at sight or on demand, purporting to be drawn in the United Kingdom, must be drawn on stamped paper (33 & 34 Vic. c. 97, s. 23).

Certain bankers
may issue
bills.

But bankers with a licence, carrying on business beyond three miles from the city of London, may issue unstamped bills payable to order on demand, or at any period not exceeding seven days after sight, or twenty-one days after date, provided such bills are drawn on bankers in London, Westminster, or Southwark, or are drawn at a place where the drawer is licensed to issue unstamped notes and bills (9 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 1; and see ante, pp. 6, 9).

With regard to bills which the banker is directed by his customer to accept, if he is directed to accept bills which A. B. will draw against bills of lading, he is not bound to ascertain the genuineness of the bills of lading before accepting or paying the bills of exchange; and if the banker pays the bills, although the bills of lading should afterwards turn out to be forgeries, he will be entitled to recover from his customer what he may have paid in respect of the bills of exchange (Woods v. Thiedman, 1 H. & C. 478).

CHAPTER X.

CUSTOMER'S PASS-BOOK AND BANKER'S BOOKS.

THE state of the customer's account is communicated to him, in London at least, by a book formerly known as a passage-book, and now more commonly called a pass-book. The course of dealing between banker and customer was the subject of inquiry in the Court of Chancery in the year 1816, and the master's report being still so applicable to present circumstances is set out below verbatim (Devaynes v. Noble, 1 Merivale, 530, 535).

CUS-TOMER'S
PASS-BOOK
AND BANKER'S
BOOKS.

“A book called a passage-book, is opened by the bankers, and delivered by them to the customer, in which at the head of the first folio, and there only the bankers by the name of their firm are described as the debtors, and the customer as the creditor, in the account; and on the debtor side, are entered all sums paid to or received by the bankers on account of the customer; and, on the creditor side, all sums paid by them to him, or on his account; and the said entries being summed up at the bottom of each page, the amount of each, or the balance between them, is carried over to the next folio without further mention of the names of the parties, until, from the passage-book being full, it becomes necessary to open and deliver out to the customer a new book of the same kind. For the purpose of having the passage-book made up by the bankers from their own books of account, the customer returns it to them from time to time as he thinks fit ; and, the proper entries being made by them up to the day on which it is left for that purpose, they deliver it again to the customer, who thereupon examines it, and if there appears any error or omission, brings or sends it back to be rectified, or if not, his silence is regarded as an admission that the entries are correct ; but no other settlement, statement, or delivery of accounts ; or any other transaction which can be regarded as the closing of an old, or opening of a new account, or as varying, renewing, or confirming (in respect of the persons of the parties mutually dealing) the credit given on either side takes place in the ordinary course of business, unless when the name or firm of one of the parties is altered, and a new account thereupon opened in the new name or firm. The course of business is the same between such bankers and their customers resident at a distance from the metropolis, except that, to avoid the inconvenience of sending in and returning the passage-book, accounts are, from time to time, made out by the bankers, and transmitted to the customer in the country when required by him, containing the same entries as are made in the passage-books ; but with the names of the parties, debtor and creditor, at the head and with the balance struck at the foot of each account ; on receipt of which accounts, the customer, if there appears to be any error or omission, points out the same by letter to the bankers ; but, if not, his silence after the receipt of the account, is in like manner regarded as an admission of the truth of the account, and no other adjustment, statement, or allowance thereof usually takes place."

The pass-book, beginning with the name of the banking firm, is notice to the customer of the persons with whom he is dealing ; and where dealings have taken place with a banking firm, a change in the title of that firm entered in the pass-book, and the entry therein of items, by which the customer is debited in account with the payment of interest on debts due by him to the old firm, is notice of the assignment to the new firm of the debts due by him to the old firm (Cavendish v. Geaves, 27 L. J. Ch. 314).

CUS-TOMER'S
PASS-BOOK
AND BANKER'S
BOOKS.

The entries in a pass-book are binding on the banker so far as they admit receipts of money by him on behalf of his customer; but it is open to him to show that the entries are erroneous and have been made by mistake (The Commercial Bank of Scotland v. Rhind, 3 Macqueen, H. L. C. 643).

Entries in a pass-

But he is bound by the entry where the customer has acted upon the faith of it, or altered his situation in consequence of it, as by drawing on his account and spending the money. And it is not competent to the banker, where this has taken place, to claim to set off sums subsequently received against the sums which he erroneously represented himself by the entries to have received on behalf of his customer (Skyring v. Greenwood, 4 B. & C. 281; Shaw v. Picton, 4 B. & C. 715).

The entries in a pass-book against the customer are, where the pass-book has been in custody of the customer and returned by him without remark, prima facie evidence against him (The Commercial Bank v. Rhind, 3 Macqueen, H. L. C. 643).

The books of bankers, containing details from which the course of any mercantile transaction in which their customers were engaged could be followed, were frequently called for and produced under compulsion in legal proceedings to which the banker was no party. Much inconvenience being thereby caused to bankers and the public, "The Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1876" (39 & 40 Vic. c. 48), was passed to remedy the general inconvenience caused by removing books from banks for the purpose of being produced in legal proceedings; and to facilitate the proof of the transactions recorded in such books ; it enacts—

Sec. 3, that the entries in the account-books of any bank are to be admissible in all legal proceedings as primâ facie evidence of the matters therein recorded, on proof—First, that the persons carrying on the business in which the books are used are a bank, by (sec. 9) producing a copy of the return made by them under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 21, verified by affidavit or by the production of a copy of a newspaper purporting to contain a copy of such return published therein by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue; and on proof, Secondly (sec. 3), by affidavit that the books are the ordinary books of the bank, and the entries made in the usual course of business, and the books are in the custody of the bank.

By sec. 4, the originals need not be produced in any legal proceedings, but the entries may be proved by copies certified by affidavit of the person examining.

But (sec. 3) the above-mentioned enactments are not to apply in any legal proceedings to which a bank, whose books may be required to be produced in evidence, is a party.

Litigants (sec. 5) intending to avail themselves of this Act must give five days' notice in writing, or such other notice as may be ordered by the court of their intention. The notice must contain a copy of the entries proposed to be adduced, an expression of the intention to adduce the entries in evidence, and of permission to the opposite side to inspect the original entries.

Upon the receipt of such a notice (sec. 6), the other party may, under an order of court, inspect and copy any pertinent entries on giving the bank notice of the order three days before copies are required.

A judge (sec. 7) has power to order that copies shall not be admissible.

A special (sec. 8) order by a judge is necessary to compel a bank to produce their books in any legal proceeding.

CHAPTER XI.

APPROPRIATION OF PAYMENTS.

THE appropriation of payments is governed by three rules (Clayton's case, Mer. 585).

1. The debtor has the option at the time of making the payment to appropriate it to any of the debts due from him to the creditor.
2. If the debtor do not make this appropriation, the creditor may do so at any time before action (Mills v. Fowkes, 5 Bing. N. C. 455).
3. Where neither party makes the appropriation, the law will appropriate the payment to the earlier debt.

It is this last rule which regulates ordinary banking accounts. All the sums paid in to the account form one blended fund, the parts of which have no longer any distinct existence. The presumption, therefore, is, that the sum first paid in is the sum first paid out, so that the first item of the debit side of the account is presumed to be discharged by the first item of the credit side (Clayton's case, 1 Mer. 608).

From this rule it follows that where an account, opened between a firm of bankers and a customer, has been continued through a change in the members of the firm, and the balances have been carried forward after each rest as before the change, payments made to or by the customer without specific appropriation by or to the new firm may affect the old firm alone. For where a balance in favour of the customer has been brought forward, of which the earlier items are of moneys received by the old firm, payments made by the new firm are applied under the above rule to those items, and discharge the debt of the old firm, leaving the new firm liable for moneys received by them since they were constituted (Clayton's case; Brook v. Enderby, 2 Brod. & Bing. 70; Copland v. Toulmin, 7 Cl. & F. 349; Bank of Scotland v. Christie, 8 Cl. & F. 214; Hooper v. Keay, 1 Q. B. D. 178).

In the same way if the balance on such an account is against the customer, a payment by him after the change of firm, being pro tanto a discharge of the earliest items of the balance against him, is a discharge of his debt to the old firm (Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & Ald. 39), and not of any liabilities he may have come under to the new firm. And this rule is strictly applied even as against third parties, who have not been privy to the account, such as sureties (Williams v. Rawlinson, 3 Bing. 71). Similarly, where trust moneys have been paid into a bank by a trustee, together with his own moneys, to a general account, and checks have been drawn by him upon his account generally, the payments made by the bank will be attributed to the earlier items (Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372; Brown v. Adams, L. R. 4 Ch. Ap. 764).

But if money has been paid in with a specific appropriation by the payor as to meet a bill, the direction must be obeyed (Hill v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 618; Farley v. Turner, 26 L. J. Chanc. 710). So, again, if there have been a stipulation between the parties, either express (Henniker v. Wigg, 4 Q. B. 792), or to be implied from a particular course of dealing (Lysaght v. Walker, 3 Bligh. N. R. 1; City Discount Coy. v. Maclean, L. R. 9 C. P. 693), as where within a reasonable time after a change in the partners of a firm two accounts, one showing the position of the old firm, and the other the transactions of the new firm since the change, are communicated to the customer and received by him without objection, the payments he has made will be taken to be appropriated, as shown in the accounts (Simson v. Ingham, 2 B. & C. 65); and the bankers will be bound by the accounts communicated to their customer, and not by the entries made in their books and not so communicated (ibid.).

CHAPTER XII.

BANK NOTES.

BANK notes are of two sorts: bank notes issued by the Bank of England, and bank notes issued by other banks or bankers entitled to issue them, as pointed out in Chap. I., where the statutory definitions of bank notes and the stamp duties imposed on them will be found. BANK NOTES.

As has before been stated, the notes of the Bank of England are by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 6, made legal tender so long as the Bank of England continue to pay on demand their notes in legal coin. Legal tender Country bank notes are also a legal tender, unless at the time of the tender an objection is made to receiving them on the ground of their being notes, not cash. If no objection is raised, country notes are treated as cash (Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64; Polglass v. Oliver, 2 C. & J. 15). A banker's own notes are not a legal tender to himself: that is, proof of a tender to a banker of his own notes will not support a plea of tender, for a banker stands in the same position towards his own notes as any other person (Forster v. Wilson, 12 M. & W. p. 201). If after a transfer of a note the note turns out worthless by reason of the failure of the maker, though given and accepted in perfect good faith on either side, the transferer is not liable on the instrument to the transferee because the transfer has been one by mere delivery, and not by indorsement and delivery (Byles on Bills, p. 159). Country notes when legal tender.

note.Note delivered in debt.Time for

ment.

Nor is the transferor liable to refund the consideration.

Because, in the first place, there is no guarantee implied by law in the party passing a note payable on demand to bearer that the maker of the note is solvent at the time it was so passed (per Littledale, J., in Camidge v. Allenby, 6 B. & C. 373). Of course, if the transferee could show any fraud or knowledge of the insolvency of the maker by the transferor, the transferor would be liable to refund (see Anonymous, 12 Mod. 517; judgment of Bayley, J., in Camidge v. Allenby).

In the second place, it has long been held that on the sale of a bill or note the party purchasing takes it with all risks and without any remedy against the party selling the note (Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 759).

A sale of a note is presumed to take place where, at the time of the transaction, it is delivered without indorsement, by way of exchange for goods or money transferred to the party delivering the note, for the transferee elects to take the note instead of cash, and does so at his peril and without recourse to the transferor (see Camidge v. Allenby, supra). But where a note is delivered without indorsement for a pre-existing debt, it is only a conditional payment to become absolute if, upon due presentment, it is paid (Clark v. Mindall, 1 Salk. 124; Ex parte Blackburne, 10 Ves. 206; Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191, 22 L. J. C. P. 24).

Where goods were bought at 10 a.m., a payment by notes for the goods at 3 p.m. on the same day was held to be a payment of an existing debt (Camidge v. Allenby, 6 B. & C. 373; but see Campbell, C. J., in Timmins v. Gibbins, 21 L. J. Q. B. 403, 18 Q. B. 722).

The transferee is allowed a reasonable time (of at least one day) within which he may present the note to the bank, or circulate it. If the bank fail within that time, the transferee should at once redemand his money from the transferor, at the same time tendering him back the note (Camidge v. Allenby, 6 B. & C. 373; Henderson v. Appleton, 1 C. & M. 642; Rogers v. Langford, 1 C. & M. 637; Litchfield Board of Guardians v. Greene, 26 L. J. Ex. 140). It is not necessary, to give a right of action against the transferor, where the bank has actually stopped, to present the notes for payment, before having any recourse to the transferor (Rogers v. Langford, 1 C. & M. 637; Sands v. Clarke, 19 L. J. C. P. 84; Byles on Bills, p. 203, k). But in any case short of actual stoppage presentment is necessary to give a right against the makers, but as between the transferor and transferee notice that the notes have turned out valueless, with an offer to return them, seems to dispense with actual presentment (Robson v. Oliver, 10 Q. B. p. 717).

BANK
holder of

It is not apparently unreasonable where notes have to be presented at a distance to cut them in half, and send the two sets of halves by different channels, and even though the presentment be made later in consequence (Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & Ald. 496).

Notice of dishonor must be given with reasonable diligence, and this would seem to be before the departure of the post on the day after that on which the holder after exercising reasonable diligence is in a position to give the notice (per Martin, B., Gladwell v. Turner, L. R. 5 Ex. 61).

Notice of dishonor.

The inference that a transfer of a note was a sale of the note without recourse to the transferor in case of dishonor may be rebutted. Thus, a person asking as a favour to receive change for a note would be bound to refund it, if the note were duly presented and dishonored and due notice given (Rogers v. Langford, 1 C. & M. 637, 641; Woodland v. Fear, 7 E. & B. p. 522, 26 L. J. Q. B. p. 202).

Need not be a sale of note.

And it has been held that if a customer pay to his account with his bankers the notes of a bank that has failed, and the banker has not been guilty of laches, the BANK NOTES. loss falls on the customer (Timmins v. Gibbons, 18 Q. B. 722).

Remedy against maker.

If the transferor be the maker of the note the remedy of the holder is to prove against his estate (Litchfield Guardians v. Greene, L. J. 26 Ex. 140).

Where the payment by note has been only conditional, and the note is not paid with no laches by the holder, the remedy on the antecedent debt revives (Ward v. Evans, 2 Lord Ray. 928; Moore v. Warren, 1 Stra. 415).

Lost or Stolen Notes.

Bank notes, whether of the Bank of England or of other banks, being notes payable to bearer, are negotiable instruments (Solomon v. Bank of England, 13 East, 135; Miller v. Race, 1 Sm. L. C. 526), and the title to them rests in any person taking them for value and bonâ fide, i.e., without knowledge of the loss or robbery, (Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161), whatever may be the defects in the title of the person transferring them.

In an action by the loser of a note against the holder to recover the value, the loser on proving the loss puts the holder to prove that he has given value for the note. If the latter is a holder for value, the presumption is that he took it bonâ fide, and his title is good, unless he can be fixed with knowledge, or the means of knowledge wilfully disregarded, of the loss or robbery (Goodman v. Harvey, 4 A. & E. 870; Uther v. Rich, 10 A. & E. 784; Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161); and the existence of gross negligence is unimportant, except so far as it may be evidence of mala fides (Goodman v. Harvey, supra).

Action on Lost Note.

It is both reasonable and customary for the bank to stop payment of the note on receiving an indemnity from the loser (Miller v. Race, 1 Burr. 460); and 17 & 18

Vic. c. 125, s. 7, which enacts that, in case of any action founded on a negotiable instrument, it shall be lawful for the court or judge to order that the loss of such instrument shall not be set up, providing an indemnity is given to the satisfaction of the court or judge, or master, against the claims of any other person upon such negotiable instrument, in effect enables the loser to recover the value of the note subject to the rights of any innocent holder.

BANK
NOTES.

It was held that where a note had been cut in half, no action could be maintained against the maker by the bonâ fide holder of one half, on the ground that there might be a bonâ fide holder of the other half, and the maker could not be liable to both parties (Mayor v. Johnson, 3 Camp. 324). See as to cutting notes in half for purposes of transmission, Redmayne v. Burton, 2 L. T., N. S. 324.

Note cut in half.

It has been said that as any person taking a half note must take with notice, the bankers would be bound to pay without any indemnity (per Willes, J., Redmayne v. Burton, 2 L. T., N. S. 324); but it is submitted that in any case the loser of half a note could avail himself of the above statute.

The finder of bank notes which have been lost is entitled to them as against all the world (Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Stra. 504), (notwithstanding he may find them on property belonging to some one else, as in a shop, Bridges v. Hawkesworth, 21 L. J. Q. B. 75) except the lawful owner.

lost note.

Forged Notes.

Payment in forged bank notes, whether purporting to be issued by the Bank of England or any other bank, though made in good faith, is no payment in law; that is, "the party negotiating them is answerable for the notes being such as they purport to be," and therefore, if they turn out to be forged, an action will lie to recover the money paid for them as money paid under a mistake of fact (Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488, 494; Woodland v. Fear, 26 L. J. Q. B. 204).

Bankruptcy of Banker Issuing Notes.

Stopping payment is not itself an act of bankruptcy by a banker; therefore a person may, on knowing a banker has stopped, industriously buy up that banker's notes, and set them off against a debt of his to the banker (Hawkins v. Whitten, 10 B. & C. 217); but notes taken with a knowledge of an act of bankruptcy committed by the banker, or by one of the partners of a firm of bankers, cannot be set off (Dickson v. Cass, 1 B. & Ad. 343), unless the holders of the notes at the time of the bankruptcy could have set them off (Ex parte Rogers, Buck, 490; and see Forster v. Wilson, 12 M. & W. 191).

Where a company issuing notes has gone into liquidation or become bankrupt, the holders of its notes will be allowed interest at the rate of £5 per cent. from the date on which they demand payment from the liquidator (In re East of England Banking Company, L. R. 4 Ch. Ap. 14).

CHAPTER XIII.

BANKER AS BAILEE OF DEPOSITS.

IT is customary, as has been said, for bankers to take charge of property of certain kinds for safe custody.

BANKER
DEPOSITS.

If the property is lost or destroyed while in the banker's hands his liability depends upon his contract. If he has been in the position of a gratuitous bailee, that is, if the deposit of the securities has been a mere naked bailment for the accommodation of the depositor without any advantage to the banker (Foster v. The Essex Bank, 17 Mass. Reports, 479), the banker is bound not to be guilty of gross negligence, but to exercise ordinary care, that is, such care as a reasonably prudent and careful man not being a banker might be expected to take of his own property. It is not necessarily sufficient for him to show that he keeps property deposited with him in the same manner as he keeps his own (Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 A. & E. 256).

Gratuitous bailee.

If the banker makes a charge for safe custody, he puts himself in the position of a bailee for hire, and is held liable for loss or injury occurring from a less degree of negligence.

Bailee for hire.

The difference between the care expected from a gratuitous bailee and a bailee for hire has been defined as follows. From the former is reasonably expected such care and diligence as persons ordinarily use in their own affairs, and such skill he has; from the latter is reasonably expected care and diligence such as are exercised in the Care required of each class of bailee.

BANKER AS BAILEE OF DEPOSITS. ordinary and proper course of similar business, and such skill as he ought to have, namely, the skill usual and requisite in the business for which he receives payment (Beal v. South Devon Railway, 3 H. & C. 337). The jury must decide whether the banker has brought himself within the rule applicable to the facts of each case.

When banker bailee for hire.

The profit gained by keeping the account of the depositor appears not to be sufficient by itself to make the banker a bailee for hire (Giblin v. McMullen, L. R. 2 P. C. 318), but receiving a commission for custody and realization apparently is (In re United Service Company, Johnson's claim, L. R. 6 Ch. Ap. 217; as to costs, ibid.).

Deposit must be restored to depositor.

The banker who has received property for safe custody must restore or account for it to him from whom he received it (Buddle v. Bond, 6 B. & S. 225), and it is not enough to excuse him from redelivery that he has become aware of the title of a third person, or that an adverse claim is made upon him so that he may be entitled to an interpleader (Leese v. Martin, L. R. 17 Eq. 224, 234).

A banker is a person known to have the goods of others in his possession, and therefore his trustee has no claim on his bankruptcy to property entrusted to him for safe custody (Horn v. Baker, 2 Sm. L. C. 205, 235, and notes).

CHAPTER XIV.

BANKER'S LIEN.

BANKERS have a general lien on all securities deposited in their hands by their customers for their general balance, unless there be evidence to show that any particular security was received under special circumstances, which would take it out of the common rule (per Lord Kenyon, Davis v. Bowsher, 5 T. R. p. 491; Brandao v. Barnett, 12 Cl. & F. 787; Bock v. Gorrison, 30 L. J. Ch. 39, 2 De G. F. & J. 434).

LIEN.

This right of bankers is part of the law merchant, and is to be judicially noticed like the negotiability of bills of exchange (Brandao v. Barnett, supra; Bock v. Gorrison, supra).

The right, though described as a lien, is more accurately described as a right similar to that of a pawnee over a pawn (Donald v. Suckling, L. R. 1 Q. B. 585, 604).

For a lien is strictly only a right to retain the subject matter of the lien until the demand is satisfied (Hammond v. Barclay, 2 East, p. 235). But the banker may realize the security over which his so-called lien exists: he may sue on it (Holland v. Bygrave, R. & M. 271, 6 M. & G. 653; Bosanquet v. Dudman, 1 Starkey 1), and recover so much as will cover the balance due to him from the customer (Scott v. Franklin, 15 East, 428); and it is said he may sell the security upon non-payment of the debt when a day has been fixed for the payment, but only after a BANKER'S LIEN. proper demand and notice where no day has been fixed (Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. sen. 278; Martin v. Reid, 31 L. J. C. P. 127, 11 Com. B. N. S. 730; Piggott v. Cubley, 15 Com. B. N. S. 701, 33 L. J. C. P. 134).

Lien arises when account overdrawn, The right only arises where the customer is in debt to his banker, as on an overdrawn account (Brandao v. Barnett, supra); and whatever number of accounts are kept in the books the whole being really one account (In re European Bank, Agra Bank claim, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 44), even where the accounts are kept at two different branches (Garnett v. McKewan, L. R. 8 Ex. 10), the right cannot arise except the balance on the general account is against the customer.

or banker under acceptance. The right also arises if the customer be in the banker's debt on bills accepted by the banker for the accommodation of his customer and already due (Madden v. Kempster, 1 Camp. 12; Morse v. Williams, 3 Camp. 418).

It may be doubted whether any right accrues before the bills are due (see Jeffryes v. Agra and Masterman's Bank, L. R. 2 Eq. 674, and contra; Holland v. Bygrave, 1 Ry. & M. 271, 6 M. & G. 653, 654).

Lien is on all securities. The lien is on all securities in the banker's hands, so that no person can take any paper securities out of his banker's hands without paying him his general balance (Davis v. Bowsher, 5 T. R. p. 492).

What are securities. The securities must be instruments for the payment of money or paper securities (Davis v. Bowsher, 5 T. R. 488), and have been said to include promissory notes, bills of exchange indorsed in blank or payable to bearer, exchequer bills (Brandao v. Barnett, supra), coupons, bonds of foreign governments (Jones v. Peppercorne, 28 L. J. Ch. 158; Wylde v. Radford, 33 L. J. Ch. 51, 53), certificates of shares (In re United Service Company, Johnson's claim, L. R. 6 Ch. Ap. 212), checks (Scott and others v. Franklin, 15 East, 428), marginal receipt notes (Jeffryes v.

Agra and Masterman's Bank, L. R. 2 Eq. 674), an order to purchaser of bills to pay the purchase money to a banker (Currie v. Misa, 1 App. Ca. 564).

The banker must further show that the securities came into his possession in the course of his trade of a banker, that is, a money factor, that he might perform some office which it is his duty as a banker to perform to such securities.

Securities must be in possession of banker in the course of his trade.

Thus one of the duties of a banker is to obtain acceptance of bills of exchange (Brandao v. Barnett, 6 M. & G. 630, 655), and the lien attaches on bills given him for that purpose.

On the other hand, some offices, such as taking care of plate of their customers, or receiving interest on exchequer bills for their customers, and exchanging the exchequer bills when such interest is paid, though customarily performed by bankers, are not part of their duty as bankers, and therefore no lien attaches to plate or bills entrusted to them under such circumstances. An office, for the performance of which remuneration is charged, is primâ facie one not within the duty of bankers to perform (Brandao v. Barnett, 12 Cl. & F. 809).

Thus it becomes a matter of importance in each case to determine in what character a banker has received a given bill from his customer, since each character is attended with different consequences. If the banker receives a bill as a purchase or takes it for value, and the property in the bill has once passed to him, the customer having no more interest in the bill, no question of lien or title to the note or its proceeds can arise between him and the banker.

If the banker receive it as a money factor to present for acceptance or payment, and to keep safely in the meanwhile, the banker has a lien on it for his general balance, and the customer can only claim the surplus remaining BANKER'S LIEN. after the banker is satisfied. Lastly, if the banker receive it for safe custody solely, he has no title to the proceeds, and no lien on it except for his reasonable charges for his care in keeping it safely, even though he has obtained judgment against the bailor for the balance of an account due to him from the bailor (see Leese v. Martin, L. R. 17 Eq. 224).

When property in bills has been held to pass to banker.

The courts have often had to decide the conflicting claims of the banker or his customer in cases arising generally on the bankruptcy of one of them, and the following, it is submitted, is the result of the decisions :

Bills paid in to a banker before they are due are primâ facie the property of the person paying them in (Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12). Where such bills are indorsed, the legal property in them passes to the banker, but they may be clothed with a trust in favour of the customer (Ex parte Bond, 1 M. D. & De G. 10 ; Ex parte Brown, 3 Deac. 91).

Bills which have been remitted to a banker are, on the bankruptcy of the banker, recoverable by the remitter, subject to the banker's right to lien, if they have been remitted to the banker for a special purpose which has not been fulfilled (Ex parte Dumas, 1 Atk. 232 ; Zinck v. Walker, 2 W. Bl. 1154 ; Tooke v. Hollingworth, 5 T. R. 215, 2 H. Bl. 501 ; Bent v. Puller, 5 T. R. 494 ; Park v. Eliason, 1 East, 544, 550 ; Buchanan v. Findlay, 9 B. & C. 738 ; Ex parte Twogood, 19 Vesey, 231) ; or to meet a contingency which might have arisen, but has not arisen, before the failure of the banker, as to discount when the customer's debit balance reached a certain figure (Ex parte Wakefield, 1 Rose, 243, 253) ; or to meet other bills which have not yet become due (Jombart v. Woollett, 2 My. & Cr. 389) ; or to be kept by the banker until they fall due, and in the meantime to be drawn against (Ex parte Edwards, 2 M. D. & De G. 625) ; or on deposit (Ex parte Twogood, 19 Vesey, 231).

If a bill be paid in to be discounted for the customer, the banker, until the bill is discounted, holds it as a deposit (Ex parte Twogood, 19 Vesey, 231). BANKER'S LIEN.

If the banker discounts the bill he becomes the purchaser of the bill, and is entitled to sue upon it if necessary (Carstairs v. Bates, 3 Camp. 301; Atwood v. Crowdie, 1 Stark. 483). Indorsement on a bill is primâ facie evidence that it has been discounted (Ex parte Twogood). The taking of a banker's acceptance in exchange for another bill indorsed to the banker is equivalent to a discounting of a bill, and though the banker's acceptance be dishonored the bill will pass to his assignee (Hornblower v. Proud, 2 B. & Ald. 327).

If a bill has not been paid in expressly for immediate discount, it is in the absence of any special agreement to be inferred from the conduct of the parties what was the intention with which the bill was paid in.

Thus, bills sent up by a correspondent to his London banker "for account" were held to be received by the banker "for the floating account," and to be subject to the banker's lien as often as the balance of account turned against the correspondent (Atwood v. Crowdie, 1 Stark. 483).

It lies upon the banker who seeks to retain the bill against the customer to prove with what intention the bill has been paid in (Ex parte Sargeant, 1 Rose, 153; Ex parte Barkworth, 27 L. J. Bank. 5). And the entries in his books not communicated and assented to by his customer are not evidence in his favour, but may be evidence against him (Ex parte Pease, 1 Rose, 232, 239).

But it is against the inference that the property in the bills passed to the banker even where the bills are indorsed,—

If he entered the bills as short in his books (Zinck v. Walker, 2 W. Black. 1154); if he fail to prove the assent

BANKER'S LIEN. of his customer to the bills being considered and entered as cash if so indorsed (Ex parte Sargeant, 1 Rose, 153; Thompson v. Giles, 2 B. & C. p. 430; Ex parte Barkworth, 27 L. J. Bank. 5); if in accounts sent by him to his customer the undue bills were described as property of the customer (Ex parte Pease, 1 Rose, 238); or if he have express permission given him by the customer to discount in some specified cases, as when the balance of the customer is unfavourable to a certain amount, since if the contract be that he is not to discount without the customer's permission, express or implied, the general contract applies where there is no such permission (Ex parte Wakefield, 1 Rose, 243, 253).

But it has been held (on the authority of Ex parte Sargeant) in Ex parte Thomson, (1 Mount. & Mac. 113), that the property in the bills did pass to the banker where the fund in the bank, against which the customer was in the habit of drawing, consisted almost wholly of bills paid in by him, and thus he gave the banker of necessity a right to deal with the bills as cash. Here, in an account of four years, there were but three entries of cash paid, the remaining entries being of bills.

In another case (Thompson v. Giles, 2 B. & C. 422), the banker had entered indorsed bills, paid in by the customer before they were due, as bills, but carried the full account into the cash column, and the customer was allowed to draw checks against that amount. This was held evidence of an undertaking by the banker to answer drafts in advance to the amount of the bills so entered, but not of a bargain that the bills were to be considered the property of the banker; and the customer's balance being in his favour at the time of the banker's failure, he was held entitled to recover such of the bills as remained in the banker's hands (Ex parte Barkworth, 27 L. J. Bank. 5, s. c. 2 De G. & J. 104).

The right to reclaim extends not only to the specific bills or securities deposited, but to the substitutes for, or proceeds of, them so long as they continue in the same hands and are ascertainable (Vulliamy v. Noble, 3 Mer. 593).

The banker can negotiate indorsed bills paid into him and give a good title to third parties who have obtained them bonâ fide and for value, although negotiated by the banker against good faith (Ex parte Pease, 1 Rose, 232; Collins v. Martin, 1 Bos. & Pull. 648; and Bolton v. Puller, 1 Bos. & Pull. p. 546; Jones v. Peppercorne, 28 L. J. Chan. 138). In the same way a banker can maintain his lien on negotiable instruments deposited by his customer, though the instruments should turn out to be the property of a stranger, provided the banker received the deposit in good faith (Brandao v. Barnetto, 12 Cl. & F.; Wookey v. Pole, 4 B. & Ald. 1).

Bankers have no lien on the deposit of a partner on his separate account for a balance due to the bank from a firm (Watts v. Christie, 11 Beav. 546; Ex parte McKenna, 30 L. J. Bank. p. 30).

Nor has a banker a lien on securities left by mistake or casually at the bank (Lucas v. Dorrien, 7 Taunt. 279).

Bankers are often said to have a lien where securities have been specifically pledged to secure the repayment of advances. The extent of such a lien depends on the terms of the agreement of pledge and the construction to be placed on the document, if any, containing the terms of such an agreement.

CHAPTER XV.

BRANCH BANKS.

BRANCH
BANKS.

THE head office of a bank having branches stands towards the branches in the relation of principal to agent, and on the rule that notice given to a principal is notice given to the agent, it was held (Willis v. The Bank of England, 4 A. & E. 21) that notice of an act of bankruptcy given to the Bank of England in London was as against the bank notice to the branches; at any rate, from the expiration of a reasonable time for the head office to communicate with the branches.

But the different branches as between themselves are considered distinct for several purposes: thus, payment by one branch of a check drawn on another branch is primâ facie a payment on the credit of the presenter of the check, and not on account of the drawer (Woodland v. Fear, 26 L. J. Q. B. 202). Again, the different branches of a bank may be indorsees of a bill of exchange one from the other, and are therefore each entitled to the usual notice of dishonor due to an indorser (Clode v. Bayley, 12 M. & W. 51).

As between a bank with branches and a customer having accounts at two or more branches, the accounts of the customer in the same right may, at the banker's discretion, be blended and treated by him as one account; and if the general result should be a balance against the customer, the banker may refuse to honor the customer's check drawn on a branch which holds a balance in favour of the customer; for a banker is not bound, apart from usage and contract, to honor checks drawn on one branch at that branch, because the customer has a credit there, if at another branch there is a countervailing debit (per Bramwell, B., L. R. 8 Ex. 10).

BRANCH
BANKS.

A limited banking company having branches must put up in a conspicuous part of the branches a copy of the statement of its capital, assets, and liabilities, as required by 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, s. 44.

The stoppage of payment by a branch bank, if caused by the stoppage of the head office, dates from the receipt of the notice of the stoppage of the head office. From that date the branch ceased all functions; therefore, where a branch bank has received for the purpose of presentment a check drawn on another bank, at a time, in fact after the stoppage of the head office, but before notice of the stoppage reached the branch bank, the check, unless it has been cashed before the receipt of the notice of the stoppage, remains the property of the person who paid it in (In re Agra and Masterman's Bank; Ex parte Waring, 36 L. J. Ch. 151).

CHAPTER XVI.

BANKER AND CORRESPONDENT.

BANKER
AND CORRE-SPONDENT.

---

BANKERS are often employed by their customers to transmit for collection, or to procure payment of, bills payable in different parts of the world, and are for this purpose obliged to employ agents or other bankers to act for them.

In case a loss arises from the conduct of the agents, Who is to bear the loss, the customer or the banker?

An agent, as a rule, has no right to delegate his authority to a sub-agent, without the assent of his principal (in which case the sub-agent becomes directly liable to the principal); but when from the nature of the agency or the course of business a sub-agent or sub-agents must necessarily be employed, the assent of the principal is implied, and if the agent in good faith chooses suitable agents for the purpose, he is not liable for the neglect or default of the sub-agent in the extension of the commission entrusted to him, but the sub-agent will be directly responsible to the principal (Paley on Agency, 17, 20; Story on Agency, § 201).

Thus it has been laid down in America (Allen v. Merchant Bank, 15 Wend. 482; Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Peters, 25; Fabens v. Mercantile Bank, 23 Pick. 330; Dorchester and Milton Bank v. New England Bank, 1 Cush. 177; Story on Agency, § 14, n. 3; see Daly v. The Butchers' and Drovers' Bank, 17 The Am.

Rep. 663), that, where a bill is deposited with a bank for collection which is payable at another place, the whole duty of the bank so receiving the bill is seasonably to transmit the same to a suitable bank or other agent in the place of payment, and having transmitted the note to a bank or agent of good standing, the first bank is not responsible for the misfeasance or neglect of the corresponding bank or agent.

SPONDENT.

Duty of bank undertaking collection.

But where a bank receives a bill or draft for collection against a drawer or maker resident at the place of the bank, or where the bank undertakes collection by their own officers, it will be liable for any loss that may occur from neglect (Daly v. The Butchers' and Drovers' Bank, supra).

Where a bill has been transmitted to an agent to procure acceptance and payment, the duty of the agent is to obtain acceptance of the bill if possible, but not to press unduly for acceptance in such a way as to lead to a refusal, provided that the steps for obtaining acceptance or refusal are taken within that limit of time which will preserve the right of his principal against the drawer (The Bank of Van Diemen's Land v. The Bank of Victoria, L. R. 3 P. C. 526, 542).

collection.

If the sub-agent employed to procure the payment of the bill does receive payment, the banker must answer to his customer for that amount; even though the sub-agent has failed or absconded after receiving the money and before remitting it. Thus, where bankers in England undertook for reward to procure payment of a bill payable in India, and their sub-agent, to whom the bill was transmitted for presentment, received the money from the acceptor, and credited the bankers with it in account, but failed shortly afterwards, so that the money never actually reached the bankers, the bankers were held bound to account to their customer for the amount, on the ground that the receipt of the money by the sub-agent was in law a receipt by the sub-agent's principal, the bankers (Mackersy v. Ramsays, 9 Cl. & F. 818).

Remit-
tance.

Where a banker receives a sum of money to be transmitted by him to his correspondent for the purpose of meeting an acceptance payable in another place, and the money is debited and so transmitted in the customer's account, but before the acceptance falls due, the bank making the remittance stops payment, the amount transmitted belongs to the customer and not to the creditors of the bank (Farley v. Turner, 26 L. J. Ch. 710).

Bankruptcy of banker making remit-

But if, before the money is transmitted, the bank fails, the payor cannot recover the money paid, but has merely a right of proof as a general creditor (In re BARNED'S Banking Company, Massey's case, 39 L. J. Eq. 635; see, too, Ex parte Waring, 36 L. J. Ch. 151).

Where the banker receives an allowance for commission, or commission for transacting business for his correspondent, his relation to his correspondent is that of factor, and bills sent to him by his correspondent are presumably remitted to him in the first place for collection, and on payment to be carried to account as cash. On the bankruptcy of the banker, those of such bills as remain in specie, or their proceeds, if realized by the assignees, can be recovered by the correspondent. The property also remains in the correspondent, where the banker in accounts sent by him to the correspondent has entered the bills as property of the correspondent, thus raising an express declaration of trust in his favour (Ex parte Pease, 1 Rose, 232; and see chapter on Banker's Lien).

There is no privity between a banker and the customer of his correspondent. Thus, a banker who receives bills from his correspondent receives them subject to the instructions given him by his correspondent, and not to the instructions given to his correspondent by the person paying them in (Johnson v. Roberts, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 505), and equity will not declare the banker a trustee for the customer on the instructions given by the latter to the correspondent (ibid.).

BANKER
AND
SPONDENT.

Where money in pursuance of the creditor's order is paid by the debtor to a bank with directions to place it to the creditor's account with the bank's correspondent, no action will lie against the bank at the suit of the creditor after the money has been once carried by the bank to the account between it and its correspondent (Williams v. Deacon, 4 Ex. 397).

CHAPTER XVII.

PUBLIC OFFICER AND MANAGER.

PUBLIC
AND MANAGER.

THE 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 4, authorized banking copartnerships, established under that Act, to appoint "two or more persons being members of such copartnership, and being resident in England, to be public officers of such copartnership, in the name of any one of whom such copartnership should sue and be sued." The names of these persons, "together with the title of office or other description of every such public officer," were to be included in the preliminary return to be made to the Stamp Office in London.

Banking companies established under 3 & 4 Wm. 4, c. 98, within a radius of sixty-five miles of London, have by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, s. 47 (re-enacted by 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, Third Sched. Part III.), the privilege of suing or being sued by a public officer, provided they were established before May 6, 1844, on condition of their making out and delivering to the Stamp Commissioners similar accounts and returns to those delivered by banks under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46. Banking copartnerships discontinuing their issue of notes, commencing to carry on their business in London, preserve their privileges of suing and being sued by a public officer, and as to enforcement of decrees, orders, and judgments (27 & 28 Vic. c. 32, s. 1).

The duty of the public officer is to make out, verify on oath, and deliver the annual returns in the form prescribed by 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, as pointed out in Chap. II.

The appointment of a public officer may be proved by a copy of the return to the Stamp Office or by parol evidence.

PUBLIC
AND MANAGER.

The public officer can alone sue on behalf of a banking company under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46; even where the company has stopped payment, and continues for the sole purpose of winding up (Davidson v. Cooper, 11 M. & W. 778).

The public officer is the only person to be sued; it is not competent for creditors to waive that mode, and sue the individual members at common law (Steward v. Greaves, 10 M. & W. 711).

He is the proper person to sue and be sued on behalf of the company so long as they treat him and hold him out as their public registered officer (Steward v. Dunn, 12 M. & W. 655).

The public officer is the person to sue on a guarantee given to the copartnership, though the copartnership has gone through a partial change of members and total change of name since the guarantee was given (Wilson v. Craven, 8 M. & W. 584).

In suing a public officer under this Act, the statement should allege that the plaintiff at the time of the commencement of the suit (Esdaile v. Maclean, 15 M. & W. 277) had been named, and appointed nominal plaintiff (Spiller v. Johnson, 6 M. & W. 570; Christie v. Peart, 7 M. & W. 491), and that the copartnership was then carrying on business (Fletcher v. Crosbie, 9 M. & W. 252).

The public officer will not be allowed to plead that he has become bankrupt, as well as pleas to the merits (Steward v. Dunn, 11 M. & W. 63).

The public officer being a member of the company is personally liable on a judgment obtained against him, and therefore execution may be had against him without suing out a sci. fa. (Harwood v. Law, 7 M. & W. 203).

When a warrant of attorney is given to three trustees of a bank to secure a debt due to the copartnership, the judgment thereon is properly entered up in the name of the public officer for the time being (Bell v. Fisk, 12 C. B. 493).

7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 9, enacts that the death, resignation, removal, or any act of a public officer shall not abate or prejudice any action, suit, indictment, information, prosecution, or other proceeding commenced against, or by or on behalf of a copartnership, but the same may be continued, prosecuted, and carried on in the name of any other of the public officers of such copartnership.

The name of the new public officer should be entered by suggestion on the record (Barnewall v. Sutherland, 19 L. J. C. P. 292).

The public officer in whose name any suit or action has been commenced, prosecuted, or defended, or against whom execution has been issued, is entitled to be indemnified and reimbursed by the other members of the copartnership (7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 14).

Manager.

Banking companies formed under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, are directed by that Act (sec. 4) to insert in their deed of partnership specific provisions for the appointment of a manager or other officer to perform the duties of manager. The duties and liabilities of this person were further regulated by the same Act. But the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, was repealed by 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, and the general result appears to be that banking companies formed under 7 & 8 Vic. c. 113, are still bound to appoint a manager, but his duties are prescribed by 25 & 26 Vic. c. 89, and are the same as the duties of a manager when appointed by any company formed under that Act.

Speaking generally, the manager or directors of a company are subjected to penalties whenever the company of which he or they may be manager or directors omit to fulfil the statutory requirements. Thus penalties are imposed (sec. 25) for omitting to keep a register of members ; for (sec. 27) not making out an annual list of shareholders, and forwarding a copy thereof to the registrar ; for (sec. 32) not allowing inspection of the register ; for (sec. 34) not giving notice of increase of capital to the registrar ; for (sec. 42) omitting or neglecting, in the case of a limited company, the name of the company on the outside of its place of business ; for (sec. 42) omitting to use the full name of the company, on the seal of the company, and on bills of exchange, promissory notes, checks, or orders for money or goods to which the company is a party. The manager is further made personally liable to the holder of any such bill of exchange, promissory note, check, or order for money or goods for the amount thereof, unless the same is duly paid by the company.

PUBLIC
AND

---

Under this section where a joint-stock company being duly registered with limited liability, a bill of exchange was addressed to the company as drawees by their name, omitting "limited," and the defendant, the secretary of the company, who had authority to accept bills for the company, accepted the bill in his own name, adding "secretary" to the said company, it was held that the acceptance was intended as the acceptance of the company, and the defendant, therefore, was personally liable to the holder of the bill under this section by reason of the omission of the word limited (Penrose v. Martyn, 28 L. J. Q. B. 28).

Penalties are also inflicted on every director or manager for (sec. 43) omitting to keep a register of mortgages, and to allow inspection thereof ; for (sec. 44) omitting, in the case of a limited banking company, to publish a statement of account in the statutory form on the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August, or to put it up in a conspicuous place in the registered office of the company; for (sec. 45), in the case of a company not having a capital divided into shares, omitting to send a list of the directors to the registrar; for (sec. 54) omitting, where articles of association have been registered, to annex a copy of any special resolution which may have been passed to every copy of the articles subsequently issued, or omitting to forward a copy of such resolution to any members demanding it; for (secs. 58 and 60) omitting to produce any book or document required to be produced, by or refusing to answer any of the questions of inspection appointed by the Board of Trade or by the company.

AND MANAGER.

manager.

The manager of a bank is in the position towards his principals of a general agent for business. His principals are bound by, and are responsible for all his acts in the course of his business: that is, all acts which come within the scope of his employment; and his position being that of a general agent for business, he must be taken to be authorized to do all such acts which are necessary and proper for the carrying on the business of a bank (Thompson v. Bell, 10 Ex. 10), and his principals are bound by the results of such acts. Thus, where a manager who had received money from a depositor, in order that he, as manager, might dispose of it in a way within the scope of his authority, did not so dispose of it, but absconded, taking the money with him, the bank were held responsible for the money, because the money having been received by their agent for a purpose which was unfulfilled must be taken to be still in the bank's possession (Thompson v. Bell, supra; and Melville v. Doidge, 6 C. B. 450).

When bank responsible for his acts

It is a question of fact whether a particular act is or is not within the scope of a manager's authority.

On the same principle the bank is responsible for every wrong committed by their manager which is committed in the course of the service and for the bank's benefit, though no express command or privity of the master be proved (Barwick v. The English Joint-Stock Bank, L. R. 2 Ex. 259), because, though a master may not have authorized a particular act, he has put the agent in his place to do that class of acts, and he must be answerable for the manner in which the agent has conducted himself in doing the business which it was the act of his master to place him in (per Willes, J., Barwick v. The English Joint-Stock Bank).

Thus, if a manager, to enable a debtor of a bank to obtain advances, gives on his behalf to a third party a guarantee apparently good (but which the manager knows and intends to be unavailing), and thereby obtains for his principals payment of part of the debtor's debt to the bank, his principals are liable for such fraudulent representation by their agent (Barwick v. The English Joint-Stock Bank, supra). An action of deceit may be maintained against a company, whether incorporated or unincorporated, in respect of the fraud of its agent. Where an officer of a banking corporation, whose duty it was to obtain the acceptance of bills of exchange in which the bank was interested, fraudulently, but without the knowledge of the president or directors of the bank, made a representation to A, which, by omitting a material fact, misled A and induced him to accept a bill in which the bank was interested, and A was compelled to pay the bill, it was held A could recover from the bank the amount so paid (Mackay v. The Commercial Bank of New Brunswick, L. R. 5 P. C. 394).

But the act, for which the principals are sought to be made liable, must be done while the agent is acting within the scope of the agency, or if without the scope, must have been expressly authorized by the principal. The following case is an instance where principals were held not responsible for the act of their agent, on the ground that the agent in doing what he did was not acting as agent, but as a private person.

The defendant was surety for the payment of a debt due by a firm, A, B and C, to a company (the plaintiffs). The firm of A, B and C, besides being debtors to the plaintiffs, were debtors to the plaintiffs' manager, Christie, in his private capacity. Money, which the surety contended, ought, as between him and the firm, A, B and C, to the knowledge of the plaintiffs, to have been applied to the debt due from the firm to the company, was paid to Christie by B and C, and applied by him in payment of his own debt. The defendant claimed that under the circumstances it was inequitable in Christie to receive payment of his own debt out of the money which should have been applied to the debt due to the company, and claimed to set the payment up as one in effect to the company. But it was held that there was no reason for holding the company responsible for the manner in which Christie received payment of his own private debt, though he happened to be also their managing director; for that what he did was in his private capacity receiving payment of his own individual debt, and extensive as his authority was as manager, that act did not come within it (McGowan v. Dyer, L. R. 8 Q. B. 141).

A further distinction may be drawn after an act is decided to be within the scope of the authority of a manager, viz., has he merely the permission to do the act, or is it his duty as manager to do it? If the former, his principal will not, if the latter, his principals will be responsible.

Thus, it is the custom among bankers to answer inquiries made as to the solvency of third parties by other bankers; and it is within the scope of a manager's authority to give the information asked for; and if the manager were to refuse to give it he would be doing a wrong to the bank which employed him, because he would be refusing a courtesy which it was their habit to show, in order that a corresponding courtesy might be shown to them; but in no other sense is it the duty of the manager, or within the scope of his authority, to do it. Therefore, where such inquiries are made, it is the duty of the manager towards his employers to answer them, but if he answers them falsely in a writing signed by himself, he alone is responsible thereon in an action against him (under 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 6), for making a false representation as to the credit of another person, and his signature is not the signature of the bank, so as to make them responsible (Swift v. Winterbotham, L. R. 9 Q. B. 301, 315).

PUBLIC
AND MANAGER.

Though a principal is liable for the wrongful acts of his agent committed in the course of his service and for his benefit, he cannot benefit by the fraud of his agent on the ground that he was not privy to the committal of the fraud.

Principal cannot benefit by fraud of his agent.

Therefore, where a manager (Collinson v. Lister, 7 De G. Mac. & G. 634) of a banking company advances money of the banking company by way of loan, knowing at the time facts which render the loan an improper transaction, and would prevent the agent from sustaining it, were the transaction and the money his own—as in the instance of a trustee borrowing money in that character, who by the very act of so borrowing commits a breach of trust, having sought and obtained the money for the sole purpose of misapplying it, and the circumstances being all known at the time to the agent lending—the banking company acquire no better title than the agent would have done had the case been his own.

Again, in Foster v. Green, 31 L. J. Ex. 158, the plaintiff was a banker whose cashier was a debtor of one C. C applied to the cashier for payment, and the cashier paid him out of the plaintiff's money, taking from him a document which the creditor believed to be a receipt, but which was, in fact, a check. The plaintiff brought an action on the check against C, and the jury found in effect, that the check was taken by the cashier to cover his fraud: the court held the plaintiff could not recover, because he could not relieve himself from the act of his agent.

Third parties dealing with the manager of a bank should always consider whether he is acting within his authority; if he draws, accepts, or indorses bills with the words per procuracionem, he thereby gives an express intimation of a special and limited authority, and any person taking such bills is bound to inquire into the extent of the authority (Alexander v. Mackenzie, 6 C. B. 766; Stagg v. Elliott, 31 L. J. C. P. 260).

A note given "to the manager of" a banking company vests at law with the person who fills that office when the note is given, and the person filling that office can sue on it in his own name (Robertson v. Sheward, 1 M. & G. 511).

The manager, like any other bonâ fide holder, may sue in his own name on any bills indorsed in blank belonging to a banking company (Law v. Parnell, 29 L. J. C. P. 17).

It remains now to consider the relation of a manager to his employers.

Banking company
and their manager.

A manager of a banking copartnership has no right to grant himself accommodation out of the funds of the bank without the consent of the directors, given with a full knowledge of the circumstances, and he will have to refund advances otherwise made (Gwatkin v. Campbell, 1 Jur. N. S. 131).

A manager who has in the legitimate course of banking business, and therefore within the scope of his authority, made advances, cannot be made liable for such advances by his principals unless bad faith or fraud is proved against him; he is not necessarily liable because the advances were made to an incorporate company, of which he was a shareholder and director; for a manager is appointed to manage the business of a bank in the midst of a community, consisting of individuals and of incorporated trading companies, in which it is always possible the manager may hold shares (The Bank of Upper Canada v. Bradshaw, L. R. 1 P. C. 479).

CRIMINAL LAW.

CRIMINAL BANKERS are made criminally liable for improper con-

 by the 24 & 25 Vic. c. 96, which enacts :

75. Whosoever, having been entrusted, either solely or jointly with any other person, as a banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or other agent, with any money or security for the payment of money, with any direction in writing to apply, pay, or deliver such money or security, or any part thereof respectively, or the proceeds or any part of the proceeds of such security, for any purpose, or to any person specified in such direction, shall, in violation of good faith, and contrary to the terms of such direction, in anywise convert to his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he shall have been so entrusted, such money, security, or proceeds, or any part thereof respectively, and whosoever, having been entrusted either solely or jointly with any other person, as a banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or other agent, with any chattel or valuable security, or any power of attorney for the sale or transfer of any share or interest in any public stock or fund, whether of the United Kingdom, or any part thereof, or of any foreign state, or in any stock or fund of any body corporate, company or society, for safe custody, or for any special purpose, without any authority to sell, negotiate, transfer, or pledge, shall, in violation of good faith, and contrary to the object or purpose for which such chattel, security, or power of attorney shall have been entrusted to him, sell, negotiate, transfer, pledge, or in any manner convert to his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he shall have been so entrusted, such chattel, or security, or the proceeds of the same, or any part thereof, or in the share or interest in the stock or fund to which such power of attorney shall relate, or any part thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years, and not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement; but nothing in this section contained relating to agents shall affect any trustee in or under any instrument whatsoever, or any mortgagee of any property, real or personal, in respect of any act done by such trustee or mortgagee in relating to the property comprised in, or affected by, any such trust or mortgage, nor shall restrain any banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or other agent from receiving any money which shall be or become actually due and payable, or by virtue of any valuable security according to the tenor and effect thereof, in such manner as he might have done if this Act had not been passed ; nor from selling, transferring, or otherwise disposing of any securities or effects in his possession upon which he shall have any lien, claim, or demand entitling him by law so to do, unless such sale, transfer, or other disposal shall extend to a greater number or part of such securities or effects than shall be requisite for satisfying such lien, claim, or demand.

76. Whosoever, being a banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or agent, and being entrusted either solely or jointly with any other person with the property of any other person for safe custody, shall, with intent to defraud, sell, negotiate, transfer, pledge, or in any manner convert, or appropriate the same, or any part thereof, to, or for his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he was so entrusted, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to any of the punishments which the court may award as hereinbefore last mentioned.

The 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 23, enacts that whosoever shall forge or alter, or shall offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any undertaking, warrant, order, authority, or request for the payment of money, or for the delivery or transfer of any goods or chattels, or of any note, bill, or other security for the payment of money, or for procuring or giving credit, or any indorsement on, or assignment of, any such undertaking, warrant, order, authority, request, or any accountable receipt, acquittance, or receipt for money, or for goods, or for any note, bill, or other security, for the payment of money, or any indorsement on, or assignment of any such accountable receipt, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to defraud, shall be guilty of felony, &c.

Pass-book.

If a person with intent to defraud, and to cause it to be supposed contrary to the fact, that he has paid a certain sum into the bank, make in a book, purporting to be a pass-book of the bank, a false entry which denotes that the bank has received the sum, he is guilty of forging an accountable receipt for money (R. v. Moody, 31 L. J. M. C. 156; R. v. Smith, 31 L. J. M. C. 154).

Letter of Credit.

Where the defendant in England forged on a letter of credit, whereby a bank in Australia was required to "honor the draft of" R. T. for £50, an indorsement of R. T.'s name, this was held not to be the forging of an order for the payment of money, payment of the money on such an indorsement not being within the original mandate (R. v. Wilton, 1 F. & F. 391).

Check.

A forged draft on a banker in a fictitious name, or in the name of a person who never kept cash with the banker, is a warrant or order within the meaning of the Act (R. v. Lockett, 1 Leach, 94).

So a forged draft in the name of a person who does keep cash with the banker is an order within the Act,

CRIMINAL
LAW. whatever be the state of his account at the time (R. v. Carter, 1 Den. C. C. 65).

Where a man obtains goods upon his own draft on a banker with whom he does not keep cash, the proper method of proceeding against him is by indictment for false pretences.

Thus obtaining goods from another upon giving him in payment his check upon a banker with whom, in fact, he has no account, is a false pretence within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88 (R. v. Jackson, 3 Camp. 370; R. v. Parker, 7 C. & P. 825).

To give a check on a bank for an amount exceeding the balance, after various checks have been refused, and with the knowledge that overdrawing will not be allowed, is a false pretence that the drawer has power to draw for the amount (R. v. Hazelton, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 134).

Stealing a check is felony, for 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 27, enacts, that to steal, or for any fraudulent purpose, to destroy, cancel, or obliterate the whole or any part of any valuable security, is felony.

So also is embezzling a check by any clerk or servant (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68).

To alter or obliterate the crossing on a check is felony (24 & 25 Vict. c. 28, s. 25).

Bank Notes.

It is felony (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 6) to forge or utter forged bank notes, or (s. 13) to purchase or receive forged bank notes, or (s. 16) to engrave or possess any plate or paper for making forged bank notes.

CHAPTER XIX.

SCOTCH BANKS.

THE first notice of banking in Scotland which occurs in the statute book, is Will. 3, Parl. 1, sec. 5, passed in 1695, SCOTCH BANKS. under which the Bank of Scotland was established with an exclusive privilege of banking for twenty-one years. This privilege was not renewed at the expiration of that period. The Bank of Scotland issued promissory notes first in the year 1704, and continued to be the only bank until the year 1727. In that year the Royal Bank was incorporated by charter.

It is convenient to deal first with the history of the History of note issue. note issue.

In the year 1765, 5 Geo. 3, c. 49, was passed, being the 5 Geo. 3, c. 49. first Act which regulated the issue of promissory notes in Scotland. It appears from the preamble that a practice had prevailed in Scotland of issuing notes which circulated as specie, and which were made payable to the bearer on demand, or payable at the option of the issuer at the end of six months with a sum equal to the legal interest, from the demand to that time.

The Act prohibits the issue of such notes and requires that all notes, in the nature of a bank note and circulating like specie, should be paid on demand, and prohibits the issue of any promissory note of a sum less than twenty shillings.

But this Act does not interfere with or restrain the SCOTCH BANKS. issue by any person of promissory notes payable to the bearer on demand.

55 Geo. 3, c. 184. In the year 1815, the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, allowed (sec. 14) bankers and others who had issued stamped promissory notes payable to bearer on demand to reissue them without further duty, but (sec. 24) compelled all such bankers and others to take out a licence to issue stamped promissory notes. It was provided on behalf of the Scotch bankers that (sec. 25) no banker was to be obliged to take out more than four licences for any number of towns in Scotland. The Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the British Linen Company were (sec. 23) authorized to issue small notes on unstamped paper, accounting for the duties.

8 & 9 Vic. c. 38. In the year 1845, the 8 & 9 Vic. c. 38 was passed, which now regulates the note issue in Scotland. After reciting that by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 32, s. 10 (supra, p. 4), no person, from the passing of the last-mentioned Act, other than a banker, who on May 6, 1844, was lawfully issuing his own bank notes, should make or issue bank notes in any part of the United Kingdom; the 8 & 9 Vic. c. 38 provides a means for ascertaining what bankers in Scotland were, on May 6, 1844, lawfully issuing notes and the amount of the issue; it then enacts that it shall be lawful for every such banker to continue to issue his own bank notes to the extent of that ascertained amount, and to the amount of the gold and silver coin held by such banker at the head office or principal place of issue of such banker.

Bank notes. All bank notes (sec. 5) are to be expressed for payment of a sum in pounds sterling without any fractional parts of a pound.

Weekly accounts. Accounts are (sec. 7) to be rendered weekly by such bankers to the Commissioners of Stamps of the amount of their respective note circulation and of the amount of the gold and silver in possession of each banker. (This return had already been, as to part, compulsory on bankers in Scotland under 4 & 5 Vic. c. 50, s. 1.) The commissioners are to make (sec. 9) monthly returns of the average amount of note circulation, and of the average amount of all the gold and silver coin held by each banker.

SCOTCH
BANKS.

Notes for less than twenty shillings (sec. 16) are made void and of no effect.

Certain forms are (sec. 17) prescribed for notes of twenty shillings and less than 5*l.*; and persons other than bankers authorized by the Act are (sec. 19) forbidden to utter notes or bills for the payment of twenty shillings or less than 5*l.*; but this does not prohibit (sec. 20) checks on bankers.

Form of
notes.

The term "bank note" is defined (sec. 22) to extend and apply to all bills or notes for the payment of money to the bearer on demand other than bills or notes of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

Bank note deferred.

By a subsequent Act, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 63, s. 7, power is given to the Treasury to compound with bankers in Scotland for the stamp duties on their promissory notes and bills of exchange on such terms and conditions as the Treasury shall think fit and proper; and upon such composition being entered into such bankers may issue and reissue such notes, and may draw all such bills on unstamped paper.

Power to compound.

The licences to bankers in Scotland are regulated by 55 Geo. 3, c. 184 (above cited), and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 91, s. 35. This last Act requires licences issued to joint stock companies to specify the names of not more than six persons.

Other sections provide for the method of procedure by and against the officer thus appointed to sue and be sued.

By the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 75, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 3, the Crown is enabled to grant letters patent of incorporation in perpetuity to any company of bankers in Scotland carrying on business before August 9, 1845. But by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 73, no clause in any charter granted under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 75, was to take away the common law right of a company in Scotland of lien over the shares of its partners, and the provision made as to signing bills of exchange and promissory notes in 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, was not to apply to any Scotch banks.

In 1857, banking companies formed under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 75, were compelled to register themselves under the Joint Stock Banking Companies Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 49, s. 4), and from that time banking companies in Scotland have been subject to the same regulations as those in England. These have been already discussed in Chapter II.

Bank of England notes are not a legal tender in Scotland, but their circulation is not prohibited (8 & 9 Vict. c. 38, s. 15).

CHAPTER XX.

IRISH BANKS.

THE first Act regulating or restricting the issue of promissory notes in Ireland was passed in the year 1799. Up to the year 1781 no restriction at all seems to have been placed upon their issue; but in that year the 21 & 22 Geo. 3, c. 16 (Irish), was passed constituting the Bank of Ireland.

By this Act power was given to the Crown to incorporate the subscribers to a loan of £620,000 as a body politic and corporate. The bills (sec. 19) obligatory, and of credit under the seal of the corporation, were made assignable by indorsement, and the assignee was empowered to sue thereon in his or her own name. From the passing of the Act it became unlawful (sec. 14) "for any body, politic or corporate, erected or to be erected, other than the corporation created by the Act, or for any other persons whatever, united or to be united in covenants or partnership, exceeding the number of six persons, to borrow, owe, or take up any sum or sums of money on their bills or notes, payable at demand, or at any less time than six months from the borrowing thereof."

In this way the issue of bank notes on the credit of a partnership of more than six persons was put an end to.

In the year 1799, during the suspension of cash payments by the Bank of Ireland, the issue of promissory notes under certain regulations was allowed. In the year 1805, the last-mentioned Act and some others, which had been passed in the interim, were repealed, and notes under twenty shillings which had been previously permitted under certain regulations by the Act of 1799 were declared void.

6 Geo. 4,
c. 42.

In the year 1825, by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 42, it was made lawful for any number of persons in copartnership, having houses of business at any place not less than fifty miles from Dublin, to carry on the business of bankers in like manner as copartnerships of not more than six persons might then lawfully do; and to borrow, owe, or take up any sums of money on their bills or notes payable on demand, or at any time after date, and to make and issue such bills or notes at any place in Ireland exceeding fifty miles from Dublin, on the liability of all the persons composing the partnership.

Accounts were to be rendered yearly (sec. 6) of the names of the firm, the several partners therein, and the public officers thereof. The partnership was to sue and be sued in the name of the public officer. In this and many other points the terms of this Act were followed by the Act passed the following year (7 Geo. 4, c. 46), for the regulation of banking copartnerships in England, and which has been already dealt with.

& 1 Will.
4, c. 32.

In 1830, by the 11 Geo. 4, and 1 Will. 4, c. 32, sec. 1, banking copartnerships of more than six persons, not having houses of business at any place less than fifty miles from Dublin, were allowed to pay their notes in Dublin for the purpose of withdrawing them from circulation; but (sec. 3) were not allowed to reissue them in Dublin.

In 1845, in consequence of the passing of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32 (supra, Chapter II.), in the previous year, enacting that no person other than a banker, who on May 6, 1844, was lawfully issuing his own bank notes should make or issue bank notes in any part of the United Kingdom, the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 37 was passed, which now regulates the note issue of Ireland.

IRISH
BANKS.

Banks (sec. 8) claiming to be entitled to issue notes in Ireland are to give notice to the commissioners, and similar methods to those provided in England and Scotland are provided for ascertaining the average amount of the issue of each bank, and settling the amount of such issue for the future upon the average so obtained.

8 & 9 Vict.
c. 37.

All bankers (sec. 22) in Ireland are to return their names, &c., once a year to the stamp office in Dublin.

Banking companies (sec. 30) within fifty miles of Dublin may sue and be sued in the names of their public officers in manner provided as to companies beyond that distance by 6 Geo. 4, c. 42.

Public
officers.

The following are the Acts regulating the constitution of banks in Ireland in addition to those above cited (the 21 & 22 Geo. 3, c. 16 (Irish Act), and the 6 Geo. 4, c. 42).

Constitution of Irish
banks.

The provisions of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, enabling the Crown to incorporate English joint stock banks were extended by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 75, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 3, to Irish banks.

In 1857, banks which had been formed under these Acts were compelled to register under the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 49, and since that time banks in Ireland have been subject to the same laws as the banks in England.

With the object of giving greater security for the payment of the promissory notes issued by bankers carrying on business in Ireland, special Acts were passed, regulating, in case of bankruptcy, the estates of bankers unable to pay their debts, viz., 8 Geo. 1, c. 14 (Irish); 33 Geo. 2, c. 14 (Irish); 40 Geo. 3, c. 22 (Irish). It has been held (Copeland v. Davies, L. R. 5 E. & I. 358) that these Acts apply to all bankers, and not only to those issuing notes in Ireland.

but their circulation is not prohibited (8 & 9 Vict. c. 37, s. 6).

Banker's
licences.

The licences to bankers in Ireland are now regulated by the following statutes: the 6 Geo. 4, c. 42 (supra, p. 176), compels banking copartnerships of more than six persons in number carrying on business more than fifty miles from Dublin, and issuing notes, to take out a certificate from the stamp office, chargeable with a duty of thirty pounds. The 9 Geo. 4, c. 80, s. 16, enacts that no such copartnership shall be obliged to take out more than four certificates. The same Act (9 Geo. 4, c. 80, s. 1) allows bankers to issue unstamped notes on obtaining a licence and giving security for the payment of the composition. The licence duty (sec. 2) is £30. The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 82, s. 2, enacts that the same composition is to be paid in respect of promissory notes on unstamped paper issued by any licensed banker in Ireland, or the notes of such banker in circulation as is payable by bankers in England under 9 Geo. 4, c. 23.

X. And be it further enacted, That if any alteration shall be made in any copartnership of persons who shall have given any such security by bond as by this Act is directed, whether such alteration shall be caused by the death or retirement of one or more of the partners of the firm, or by the accession of any additional or new partner or partners, a fresh bond shall, within one calendar month after any such alteration, be given by the remaining partner or partners, or the persons composing the new copartnership, as the case may be, which bond shall be taken as a security for the duties which may be due and owing or may become due and owing in respect of the unstamped promissory notes which shall have been issued by the persons composing the old copartnership, and which shall be in circulation at the time of such alteration, as well as for duties which shall or may be or become due or owing in respect of the unstamped promissory notes issued or to be issued by the persons composing the new copartnership: Provided that no such fresh bond shall be rendered necessary by any such alteration as aforesaid in any copartnership of persons exceeding six in number, but that the bonds to be given by such last-mentioned copartnerships shall be taken as securities for all the duties they may incur so long as they shall exist, or the persons composing the same or any of them shall carry on business in copartnership together, or with any other person or persons, notwithstanding any alteration in such copartnership; saving always the power of the said Commissioners of Stamps to require a new bond in any case where they shall deem it necessary for better securing the payment of the said duties.

Penalty on bankers
refusing to renew their bonds.

XI. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons, who shall have given security by bond to His Majesty in the manner hereinbefore directed, shall refuse or neglect, for the space of one calendar month, to renew such bond when forfeited, and as often as XIII. And be it further enacted, That all pecuniary forfeitures and penalties which may be incurred under any of the provisions of this Act, shall be recovered for the use of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, in any of His Majesty's courts of record, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in the name of His Majesty's Attorney or Solicitor General in Ireland.

Not to affect the privileges of the Bank of Ireland.

XV. And whereas it may happen that bankers who may be desirous to issue unstamped promissory notes payable to bearer on demand, under the provisions of this Act, may have provided themselves with stamps for such notes, which may not have been issued, and which may by this Act be rendered useless or unnecessary, and it is expedient to enable the Commissioners of Stamps and their officers to cancel and allow such stamps in manner hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted, That where any banker or bankers who shall take out a licence under the authority of this Act shall have in his or their possession stamps for reissuable promissory notes payable to the bearer on demand, which shall be rendered useless or unnecessary in consequence of such banker or bankers electing to issue such notes on unstamped paper, under the provisions of this Act, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners of Stamps or their officers, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to cancel and allow such stamps so as aforesaid rendered useless or unnecessary, and to repay the amount or value thereof in money, deducting therefrom the sum of one pound ten shillings for every one hundred pounds, and so in proportion for any greater or less sum than one hundred pounds of such amount or value, provided proof be made, by affidavit or affirmation, to the satisfaction of the said commissioners, that such stamps have not been issued, and provided application be made for such allowance within six calendar months next after the passing of this Act.

Act may be altered.

XVIII. And be it further enacted, That this Act may be altered, amended, or repealed by any Act or Acts to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

4, c. 98.

Bank of England to enjoy an exclusive privilege of

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate the issue of bills or notes payable on demand: And whereas an Act was passed in the fourth year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled An Act for giving to the Corporation of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England certain Privileges for a limited Period, under certain Conditions; and it is expedient that the privileges of exclusive banking therein mentioned should be continued to the said Governor and Company of the Bank of England, with such alterations as are herein contained, upon certain conditions: May it therefore please your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That from and after the thirty-first day of August one thousand eight hundred and forty-four the issue of promissory notes of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, payable on demand, shall be separated and thenceforth kept wholly distinct from the general banking business of the said governor and company; and the business of and relating to such issue shall be thenceforth conducted and carried on by the said governor and company in a separate department, to be called "The Issue Department of the Bank of England," subject to the rules and regulations hereinafter contained; and it shall be lawful for the court of directors of the said governor and company, if they shall think fit, to appoint a committee or committees of directors for the conduct and management of such Issue Department of the Bank of England, and from time to time to remove the members, and define, alter, and regulate the constitution and powers of such committee, as they shall think fit, subject to any bye-laws, rules, or regulations which may be made for that purpose: Provided nevertheless, that the said issue department shall always be kept separate and distinct from the banking department of the said governor and company.

II. And be it enacted, That upon the thirty-first day of August one thousand eight hundred and forty-four there shall be transferred, appropriated, and set apart by the said governor and company to the Issue Department of the Bank of England securities to the value of fourteen million pounds, whereof the debt due by the public to the said governor and company shall be and be deemed a part; and there shall also at the same time be transferred, appropriated, and set apart by the said governor and company to the said issue department so much of the gold coin and gold and silver bullion then held by the Bank of England as shall not be required by the banking department thereof; and thereupon there shall be delivered out of the said issue department into the said banking department of the Bank of England such an amount of Bank of England notes as, together with the bank of England notes then in circulation, shall be equal to the aggregate amount of the securities, coin, and bullion so transferred to the said Issue Department of the Bank of England; and the whole amount of Bank of England notes then in circulation, including those delivered to the banking department of the Bank of England as aforesaid, shall be deemed to be issued on the credit of such securities, coin, and bullion so appropriated and set apart to the said issue department; and from thenceforth it shall not be lawful for the said governor and company to increase the amount of securities for the time being in the said issue department, save as hereinafter is mentioned, but it shall be lawful for the said governor and company to diminish the amount of such securities, and again to increase the same to any sum not exceeding in the whole the sum of fourteen million pounds, and so from time to time as they shall see occasion; and from and after such transfer and appropriation to the said issue department as aforesaid it shall not be lawful for the said governor and company to issue Bank of England notes, either into the banking department of the Bank of England, or to any persons or person whatsoever, save in exchange for other Bank of England notes, or for gold coin or for gold or silver bullion received or purchased for the said issue department under the provisions of this Act, or in exchange for securities acquired and taken in the issue department under the provisions

III. And whereas it is necessary to limit the amount of silver bullion on which it shall be lawful for the issue department of the Bank of England to issue Bank of England notes; be it therefore enacted, That it shall not be lawful for the Bank of England to retain in the issue department of the said bank at any one time an amount of silver bullion exceeding one fourth part of the gold coin and bullion at such time held by the Bank of England in the issue department.

forfeited share be more than sufficient to pay all arrears of calls, and interest thereon, due at the time of such sale, and the expenses attending the declaration of forfeiture and sale thereof, the surplus shall, on demand, be paid to the defaulter.

7 & 8 Vict.
c. 113.

"At present this is by far the best book upon the Law of Contract possessed by the Profession, and it is a thoroughly practical book."—Law Times.

"We cannot speak too highly of the great amount of well-arranged information which is to be found in this second book. It is a magazine of learning which the legal practitioner will find of very great value."—Solicitors' Journal, March 20, 1875.

"Mr. Cave's edition of Addison must prove a great acquisition to every lawyer's library."—Law Times, April 3, 1875.

Pollock's Principles of Contract at Law and in Equity; being a Treatise on the General Principles relating to the Validity of Agreements, with a special view to the comparison of Law and Equity, and with references to the Indian Contract Act, and occasionally to American and Foreign Law. By FREDERICK POLLOCK, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 8vo. 1876. 1l. 4s.

The Lord Chief Justice in his judgment in Mitropolitan Railway Company v. Brogden and others, said, "The Law is well put by Mr. Frederick Pollock in his very able and learned work on Contracts."—The Times, February 19, 1877.

"He has succeeded in writing a book on Contracts which the working lawyer will find as useful for reference as any of its predecessors, and which at the same time will give the student what he will seek for in vain elsewhere, a complete rationale of the law."—Law Magazine and Review, August, 1876.

"Mr. Pollock's work ought, in our opinion, to take a high place among treatises of its class. The 'fusion of law and equity' so far as that fusion is possible, is in his pages an accomplished fact."—Pall Mall Gazette, March 3, 1876.

"This is a work of undoubted merit. . . . We can only regret that there is not more of such teaching about, bearing fruit similar to the book now before us. A prominent characteristic especially valuable at the present time is that the principles of equity are read in with what used to be common law principles, and we have, therefore, in this one volume, the law relating to Contracts as administered by the Supreme Court of Judicature under the Judicature Acts."—Law Times, Feb. 12, 1876.

"A work which, in our opinion, shows great ability, a discerning intellect, a comprehensive mind, and painstaking industry. The book ought to be a success."—Law Journal, March 18, 1876.

"There is no part of the work that does not please us by the freshness of the style and the ingenuity of the treatment. The author may be congratulated on having achieved a marked success in a field where others before him have written well."—Solicitors' Journal, April 8, 1876.

CAPEL, B.A., I.L.B., Solicitor. Demy 8vo. 1877. 15s.

"The information under these heads is just of that ordinary practical kind which is learned from experience and is not to be gathered from treatises. . . . A careful study of these pages would probably arm a diligent clerk with as much useful knowledge as he might otherwise take years of desultory questioning and observing to acquire."—Solicitors' Journal.

"We believe that the present edition will be found by articulated clerks and young solicitors a trustworthy guide to the present practice relating to the daily routine of conveyancing in solicitors' offices."—Law Magazine and Review, August, 1876.

"Prideaux has become an indispensable part of the Conveyancer's library. . . . The new edition has been edited with a care and accuracy of which we can hardly speak too highly. . . . The care and completeness with which the dissertation has been revised leaves us hardly any room for criticisms."—Solicitors' Journal, Oct 14, 1876.

"We really can hardly imagine a conveyancer being required to prepare any instrument which he will not find sketched out in the work under notice. . . . We may also be allowed to add our tribute of praise to these Precedents for their conciseness, perspicuity, precision, and perfection of drafting."—Law Journal, Sept. 23, 1876.

"As a work of reference for the library, the handsome and elaborate edition of 'Wharton's Law Lexicon' which Mr. Shiress Will has produced, must supersede all former issues of that well-known work."—Law Magazine and Review, August, 1876.

"No law library is complete without a law dictionary or law lexicon. To the practitioner it is always useful to have at hand a book where, in a small compass, he can find an explanation of terms of infrequent occurrence, or obtain a reference to statutes on most subjects, or to books wherein particular subjects are treated of at full length. To the student it is almost indispensable." [Continued.]

M.A., LL.D. Lond., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Published by permission of the late M. Ortolan. Post 8vo. 1876. 12s. 6d.

"By far the most valuable part of the work, however, was that contained in the two later volumes, which, while merely purporting to be a commentary on the Institutes of Justinian, are in reality an exhaustive treatise on the whole Roman Law, and practically contain all the learning on the subject. Dr. Mears presents the public with an admirable analysis of the first volume, and what we have pointed out above is, as a matter of fact, a translation of the other two."—Law Times, October 7, 1876.

Theobald's Concise Treatise on the Construction of Wills.—With Table of Cases and Full Index. By H. S. THEOBALD, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 8vo. 1876. 1l.

"Mr. Theobald has certainly given evidence of extensive investigation, conscientious labour, and clear exposition."—Law Magazine, May, 1877.

"This book has a wider scope than its title might imply; it deals with rules of administration as well as rules of construction, and also with the several general rules of law which, from their constant application in reference to the terms of testamentary dispositions, are conveniently treated of in a text book on wills. In this respect the extended plan of Mr. Theobald's work gives it, for practical purposes, an advantage over that of Mr. Hawkins. . . . The substance of the law is summarized by Mr. Theobald with considerable skill, and generally with accuracy. . . . We desire to record our decided impression, after a somewhat careful examination, that this is a book of great ability and value. It bears on every page traces of care and sound judgment. It is certain to prove of great practical usefulness, for it supplies a want which was beginning to be distinctly felt."—Solicitors' Journal, February 24, 1877.

"His arrangement being good, and his statement of the effect of the decisions being clear, his work cannot fail to be of practical utility, and as such we can commend it to the attention of the profession."—Law Times, Dec. 23, 1877.

"We have not space to make quotations from Mr. Theobald's book; but we may say that it is remarkably well arranged, and its contents embrace all the principal heads on the subject."—Law Journal, February 3, 1877.
