FOREWORD

To the Scout Executives of the country and others interested in the welfare of boys and their training in practical citizenship:

The Manual for Scout Executives represents the combined experience of our most successful and earnest leaders, covering over ten years of Scouting all over the country. In giving it to the field the Editorial Board hopes and believes that the book will be of real value and help to solve some of the many common problems which beset scout workers everywhere.

The Scout Executive's biggest task is to bring his community and its Boy Scouts into the closest relations of sympathy and co-operation and for this reason the present volume has been written from the angle of community leadership as its title implies.

Grateful acknowledgment is hereby made to Dr. H. W. Hurt, former Scout Executive of Chicago, for his splendid work for the Editorial Department in assembling and editing the contents of the Manual and to all the scout leaders throughout the field who have made such generous contribution of time and thought and made available for our use the invaluable records of their own experience in community Scouting.

With the best of wishes and sincere hope that COMMUNITY BOY LEADERSHIP may be of real help to one and all concerned, we make it yours to adapt to your use in the service of boyhood.

(Signed)

CHAPTER I

WHAT AWAITS THE EXECUTIVE'S LEADERSHIP

Foreword

The Scout movement is a program of character-building, citizenship-developing, leisure-time activities for boys.

It is educational as well as recreational. It is vocationally purposeful. Its tasks are within a lad's reach and its progress at once challenges him though going at his own rate of speed. It is concerned with a lad's health and it prepares him to be resourceful in the out-of-doors. It trains the lad to accept responsibility not only for the assigned task but for the unexpected emergency. It brings the spirit of the Good Turn.

Its service and success are largely due to its recognition that lofty adult ideals can be tied to boy-interests only through a high type of adult Companionship with boys while doing things which appeal to boys. It is a national program of activities for local use, run by local men for the benefit of local boys. This companionship is given and largely supervised by volunteer leaders. Of the 110,000 adult Scout workers in the U. S. less than 500 are paid workers and these only to help the volunteers better serve the boy.

Nationally, as a movement, scouting is as democratic in structure as it is democratic in action in the local community, where it knows no distinction of creed or class or race in its service to all boys. The "National Council", which under Federal Charter (with an annual report and accounting to Congress) is the controlling body of the movement, is largely made up of representatives from the Local Councils themselves, plus certain members whom these have elected. Nationally, Scouting then is the summation of its local units—fundamentally democratic.

It is to participation in such a nation-wide service, and to local leadership in enriching the lives and purposes of local boys that the Scout Executive comes. His is not only to train boys to serve their Community but to bring the Community into a Consciousness of its boy resources and probable wastage and to help the Community serve its boys.

What Awaits His Leadership

The welfare of the boy through the community's men, is the business of the Scout Executive.

The community, with all of its rich, oft-unmined spiritual and man-power resources awaits awakening to a consciousness of boy-need. It then awaits mobilization to begin better meeting that need. The Scoutmasters expect the Scout Executive's help and ever sympathetic counsel in their vital task of enriching boy life through purposeful companionship.

All these await his vision, the exhilarating influence of his fine character and manhood, the skill of his informed, trained leadership, his recurrent inspiration to cooperate in boy service, and his inspiring example of an effective mastery of self, of job, of the use of time.

The Community

The community is fundamental in Scouting. 20% of its population are boys—boys with all the mysterious impulses and contradictions which real boys exhibit. Very, very few of them are necessarily bad boys—but the impulse to action, to adventure makes it imperative that there be leadership in providing activities for them. Boys will do things if left entirely alone, be it in the country or on the crowded, socially-diseased streets of the city. But what things will they do? Who can predict? Even the boys cannot foretell.

What they do, fixes their habits and habits are the woof and warp of character. The welfare of the community demands certain definite standards of ideals and conduct. Such standards rest ultimately on habits. To expect such habits to be the by-product of accident or unweighted chance is to expect the unnatural. Only as the community can provide selected, purposeful, and intrinsically attractive things for its boys to do can it with a measure of confidence look for results worthy of the term social education.

Surveys of various communities indicate that seven to ten per cent of the population are between the ages of 12 and 18 or 20. The Tenth Annual Report of the Boy Scouts of America indicates that various community councils are reaching from 3% to 50% of these boys.

In New York State a careful study revealed that of 300,000 boys amenable to the Military Training Act, less than 30,000 were being reached by the school. Meanwhile the urban home finds increased difficulty in holding its boys while the number of those touched and gripped by various religious bodies is in no sense enough to satisfy their own spiritual standards. Probably more than  $\frac{1}{4}$  of the time of the average school boy is leisure time.

While vocationally purposeful activities must be gradually introduced no careful, informed analyst of boy-nature and of the physiology and psychology of play would have it otherwise.

That leisure time, however, must be filled with activities which shall socially educate the boys — prepare them to take their place in the Community life not only as self-supporting but as socially-motivated members. Experience has shown that the Scout program supplementing and used by the church, the home, the school does provide a very definite and effective means for the formation of socially essential and desirable habits.

Experience has also shown that the Scout Oath and Law—the heart and life of the Scout spirit—and the spirit of social service, the “Good Turn” and indeed the whole new attitude of alertness carry over into the boys’ daily affairs in the church, the home, and the school—thus reacting at once upon the community.

The Scout Executive, therefore comes to the community not alone as its skilled servant, not alone as a modest, yet ready, member of the community to participate in its life, but he comes to help this community discover its boys—underprivileged, overprivileged and average—who, where and how they are and in the light of such facts to bring the community to make maximal provision to meet its opportunity and its obligation to its boys.

The Local Council

The local Council is the community organization through which community interest in scouting becomes articulate. It represents the transition from volunteer supervision to paid supervision of the general scouting activities of the community. It presupposes numerous boys to be served and a number of troops actual or potential.

Article National Council Constitution.

Clause 1—Purpose. In order to relieve the National Council to the fullest extent practicable of the responsibility for leadership and supervision of troops of scouts, and the extension of the Boy Scout Movement, it shall be the policy of the National Council, through its Field Department, to encourage the organization of local councils in towns, cities, and counties throughout the country, in accordance with the organization policy herein set forth, when such local councils provide an adequate budget for the maintenance of the local headquarters, the conduct of a boy scout camp, and the employment of one or more men one of whom shall act as Scout Executive and devote his entire time to the promotion and supervision of the program of the Boy Scouts of America. Councils thus organized and chartered shall be known and designated as councils of the first class.

It must be “a group of citizens representative of the institutions in which scout troops are organized, and of the independent troops, and of the business, civic, educational and religious interests of the territory” involved.

NOTE—While the Scout Executive is from the nature of things concerned with the First Class Councils, (i. e. those who have Executives) yet he should not forget that half of the Scouts in the Country are not yet under his type of organization.

This group organizes, (see P. 74 Constitution and By Laws) elects its officers, registers at the office of the National Council formal evidence as required under Federal Charter of having met the requirement set by the National Constitution for those who would bear the name of the Boy Scouts of America, effects financial plans, selects an executive (in First Class Councils) who under their direction, is executively responsible for furthering the community's boy service. This group approves and directs, and under the inspiration of a real executive may be made and kept active and hence interested in the performance of worth while work for boys.

The local council has a very definite responsibility to the boys and to the Nation to see to it that evidences are presented to it from time to time that real scout training and life is being experienced by their boys.

They must see to it that their executive sees to it that mere entertainment or amusement of scouts (important as these are) does not pass for the real thing. Scouting is a balanced program of pleasurable activities and of outdoor and life craft, but character building and citizenship habits through doing and living these in companionship with high-minded adults are the real heart of the Movement. The Local Council must guard against counterfeit service to boys as the eternal values involved are too priceless to subject to chance.

The Local Council is not an organization in and of itself, but is rather a body which exists to represent the citizenship of the entire community. The Executive therefore, though employed by the Executive Board of the Council, is in reality working for, and through his council is responsible to the community as a whole.

The Parent Institution

A church, a school, a Y. M. H. A., a Y. M. C. A., a Board of Trade, a grange, a club—some relatively permanent form of community life will have a number of boys in the families it represents.

This social group becomes the "Parent Institution" when it provides its boys with scouting privileges. It has been the policy of the Scout Movement to thus be used by local agencies already in the community.

The Parent Institution gives a definite guaranty of troop permanence for the year to which it binds itself through its troop committee to—

- (a) Provide the necessary facilities for meetings of the Troop.
- (b) Provide adequate leadership, including the supervision of a man, 21 years of age or over to be commissioned as Scoutmaster and of a committee of adults who will visit the Troop and cooperate in its direction and supervision.
- (c) Endeavor to provide an opportunity for the members of the Troop to spend a week or more in a summer camp.
- (d) Conduct the Troop in accordance with the Rules and Regulations of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America."

Indeed it gives promise of permanence beyond that period to serve the following generations of boys who will come on—needing companionship.

The place and purpose of the Parent Institution may be further indicated by the following article by H. W. Hurt which appeared in Scouting, Feb. 26, 1920:

"Boys—A Scoutmaster—A 'Parent Institution'—

These are the three elements, but one's sober second thought reverses the order.

Should the Scoutmaster move or die or tire, what then.

To be fair to the boys and to give them some guaranty of an unbroken chance to secure and enjoy Scout training—the organization of the troop must structurally begin with some relatively permanent group in the community.

The Moving Spirit*<sup>1</sup>

There must be one or more citizens of vision to start the community to think about and do for its boys. Indeed one such citizen of vision can almost single-handed bring a community to a consciousness of boy need and to a readiness to meet such need.

The Parent Institution

A church, a school, a club—some relatively permanent form of community life is the real starting point. This group must guarantee the meeting place, leadership and general local oversight for a period of at least one year.*<sup>2</sup>

In a church for example, the real starting point is the pastor, priest, or rabbi and his Board of Trustees or Vestry, if such there be.

When this group is convinced that they would like to make their church a focal point in the life of a group of boys—then it is sound policy to take time for this official group to enlist the sympathy and support of the congregation. The “troops” will then be the congregation’s own and will be viewed and judged accordingly.

TROOP COMMITTEE

This "Institution" appoints a Troop Committee, or Boys' Work Committee, composed of not less than three adult male citizens, 21 years of age or over.

"The Troop Committee shall be responsible for:

"1. The selection of a scoutmaster and one or more assistant scoutmasters.

"2. Providing proper facilities for meetings.

"3. Advising with the scoutmaster from time to time on questions of policy affecting the proper interpretation of scouting and the requirements of the institution with which the troop is connected.

"4. The observance of the rules and regulations of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

"5. Encouraging the scoutmaster and his assistants and the members of the troop in carrying out the Boy Scout Program.

"6. The operation of the troop in such a way as to insure its permanency.

"7. The finances, including the securing of adequate support and the proper disbursements of funds.

"8. The troop property.

"9. Securing suitable opportunity for the members of the troop to spend one or more weeks in camp, with adequate facilities and supervision.

"10. Assuming active direction of the troop in case of the inability of the scoutmaster to serve, until his successor has been appointed and commissioned." By-Laws, Art. XI, Sec. 1, Clause 5.

The Troop Committee is the vital spot in organizing scout work in a community—indeed the committee marks the end of the Executive troubles and which end is determined by whether the committee functions or not. A paper committee means potential danger to serving those boys—an active, hence interested committee means that the program is being used as intended by the community group and is therefore—working from within, operating on the only sound basis for such social service—getting people to do for themselves.

The significance of the above relationship for churches is obvious as it enables them to organize a homogeneous church group to maintain its program of distinctively religious education. Testimony on this point recently published by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America* indicates clearly that the Churches value the opportunity scouting thus affords.

The Scoutmasters

The scoutmasters are the keystones in the arch of scouting service to boyhood.

They and the Assistant Scoutmasters give their time and their companionship as volunteers. This is, in fact, a guaranty that the vital contacts with the boy shall not be a matter of salaried routine but shall be done by men who continue to serve because they see the need, because they love boys, because of the usually overlooked reflex benefits in their own lives, because of their patriotic motives. These scoutmasters and assistants are as busy as any of the community's citizens but they elect to find part of their recreation in giving needed companionship to the boyhood of the community. Too large a measure of appreciation can not be given to them for their work.

The National By Laws of the Boy Scouts of America says:

Article XII. Section 2. By Laws. Scoutmasters. The success of the boy scout program is dependent upon the scoutmaster. His conception of the rules, spirit and purpose of scouting and the quality of his leadership control the possibilities for practical results in the work of the boys. For this reason, the greatest care should be exercised by all concerned in recommending men for such commissions. A scoutmaster shall be at least twenty-one years of age and shall be chosen because of good moral character and his interest in work for boys. He need not be an expert in all of the scout activities but should be able to command the respect of boys in the management of his troop. He should attend all meetings and outings of the troop, delegate as much of his duties as possible to assistants and patrol leaders and make use of different experts in the various activities included in the scouting program. He with the troop committee, is responsible for the general program and supervision of the work of the troop. All recommendations for commissions for men to serve as scoutmaster shall originate with the troop committee and be submitted on blanks provided for that purpose. In communities supervised by local councils, the recommendation of the troop committee shall be approved by the local council.

Section 3.—Assistant Scoutmasters. Each troop should have one or more assistant scoutmasters. Assistant scoutmasters shall be at least eighteen years of age and may be selected and promoted because of their experience as members in a troop and efficiency in Scouting. An assistant scoutmaster performs such duties as may be assigned by the scoutmaster. All recommendations for commissions as assistant scoutmasters originate with the troop committee and require the approval of the local council if there be such, having jurisdiction of the troop for which the scoutmaster is commissioned.

As the vehicle through which he may influence the scouts, as the point of his efforts toward improvement in methods, as a volunteer group which must somehow be found, interested, trained, supervised and helped, in the best democratic sense of those words and kept interested, active, growing in the work—they constitute the outstanding problem for the Scout Executive's leadership.

His task is quite clearly outlined. Scoutmasters must first be men of sterling character. Such men must be found and interested and selected, must be trained, must be supervised and sustained and helped, must be kept. Scoutmasters can only be kept as they are helped to meet their troop and boy problems as these arise in the one or two weekly meetings.

The Executive will have most of his contacts with the boys through the scoutmaster whose lofty privilege it is to directly raise the level of boy life.

The Scouts

The Boy Scouts whose lives are to be enriched through Scouting are local boys who have filed or registered formal evidence at the National Council office, that they have met the following conditions fixed by the National Council By Laws under Federal Charter:

ARTICLE II—PURPOSE

The purpose of this corporation is as set forth in the original certificate of incorporation under the laws of the District of Columbia, dated February 8, 1910, and restated in Section 3 of the Charter granted by Congress June 15, 1916, as follows—"That the purpose of this corporation shall be to promote, through organization, and cooperation with other agencies, the ability of boys to do things for themselves and others, to train them in scoutcraft, and to teach them patriotism, courage, self-reliance, and kindred virtues, using the methods which are now in common use by boy scouts," by placing emphasis upon the Scout Oath and Law for character development, citizenship training and physical fitness.

ARTICLE VI—PROGRAM

Section 1—The program of the Boy Scouts of America shall be carried out through the organization of boys into groups consisting of at least one and not more than four patrols of eight boys each, under the leadership of a man, of clean, virile, and high moral character, to be known as the scoutmaster. Only boys who have passed their twelfth birthday shall be eligible to membership. Authority for enrolling more than thirty-two boys in a troop may be secured from the chartered local council having jurisdiction, or in case the troop is not under the supervision of a council from the National Council.

Section 2—All scouts must know and subscribe to the Scout Oath and Law as follows:

THE SCOUT OATH

2. To help other people at all times;
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need, and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or good turns.

10. A scout is brave.

He has the courage to face danger in spite of fear, and to stand up for the right against the coaxings of friends or the jeers or threats of enemies, and defeat does not down him.

11. A scout is clean.

He keeps clean in body and thought, stands for clean speech, clean sport, clean habits, and travels with a clean crowd.

Scouting offers these boys the mysteries of companionship with other boys and with worthy men with all the incident opportunities for team-play, initiative and leadership. It offers them the long-deferred opportunity for "helpful" participation in the adult life of the community,—a chance for community service. It offers them attractive interest-gripping, individually-useful and socially-purposeful things to do—things within their reach, to be done at their own gait, yet with degrees of progress challenging their abilities and providing suitable recognitions.

It affords them opportunities for health of body and of spirit, for self-mastery; it reveals to them hitherto unknown abilities; it makes them intimate with stars and trees, with animals and flowers, and it enables them to "Be Prepared" to meet any emergencies as well as routine life. Its merit badge work opens doors of trial into over sixty vocations helping the Scout to find his place in life.* Its Oath and Law provide the lads a dynamic, a working code of morals,—reverent, tolerant of others. This Oath and Law operates from within their group—it is the code of the boy group—not imposed from without. Its "Good Turn" puts the real social spirit into practice.

The fundamental tone of its mental growth is activity—learning through doing, citizenship through service—readiness for emergencies through "being prepared" in advance. In a word Scouting teaches boys to live by living and by living with them.

CHAPTER II

THE EXECUTIVE HIMSELF

Scouting As a Profession

Is Scouting a Profession?

There were in 1920 over 350 Scout Executives with the number increasing at the rate of about one hundred annually. Paralleling this growth there has been the growing introduction of scout courses in Normal Schools, Colleges and Universities. Do these make scouting a profession? Webster says a profession is—

“A calling in which one professes to have acquired some special knowledge used by way either of instructing, guiding or advising others, or of serving them in some art.”

Scouting is a profession for the Scout Executive, because of the vital social quality of the work of servng the community, through the art of character building, companionship and leadership of its boyhood.

Scouting is fundamentally concerned, as are home, or church or school, (indeed is used by them) in that socially greatest task of creating in boys right ideals and habits. Habits must be builded through exercise, through doing.

The experience of the race, its ideals, its relationships, its literature, its science, its worship, its faith—all of the socially determining things of civilization must be transmitted to the boys by adults. This may be called social heredity. No child inherits from its parents by physical heredity, the ability to read—no, he must learn it.

Experiments by Mitchell* and Kidd† indicate even that among animals and birds—many of the fears and social habits hitherto regarded as instinctive are in reality taught by the furred or feathered parents.

NOTE *“The Childhood of Animals.”—Mitchell.
†“The Science of Power.”—Kidd.

Among men, the gains of civilization, of higher ideals, of social progress can alone be transmitted to a child by some one's help.

How vital this is is indicated by the following quotation († P. 19)—

“Since man became a social creature, the winning variations upon which power has rested in his evolution have been to an ever-increasing degree neither variations in the structure of his body, nor in the size of his brain, but variations in the type of social culture to which he is being submitted.”

Japan and Germany are the two outstanding examples of how a nation collectively submitting to a certain type of training and ideals can in a single generation achieve almost any desired end, be it worthy or unworthy.

Character development and citizenship in the boyhood of America, then can only be realized as a social inheritance which must somehow, somewhere, by someone be transmitted to the boy. The work of the Scout Executive and of the scoutmasters therefore, potentially take rank in that supreme task of passing to the lad the race's social inheritance.

While potentially a profession, in its vital relation to our associate life, yet it remains for the individual Scout Executive by his doing, to determine whether he shall and can bring his work up to a real professional level.

At the very outset the Executive will be clearly conscious of the fact that he is engaged in no transient job of social service, but in an expert, vital task of leadership whose values and outcomes are eternal and whose men and boy problems demand consecration and professional fitness as well as exceptional vision and tact.

No man should assume such serious responsibilities without the most careful inquiry both by himself and by others to determine whether he possesses the qualities needed. No man merits consideration who does not have a positive religious tone and recognizedly high moral quality on which the other needed qualities of leadership are to be builded. Only he can hope to train a child in the way to go—who goes that way himself.

The moral quality of the profession is therefore basic and imperative.

Leading Volunteers

The Supreme task of the Scout Executive is to serve boyhood and enrich its life, through a volunteer leadership.

The operation of a technical program,—the maintenance of standards,—the checking of results, and—the grave responsibilities of a character building program—involve, with a volunteer leadership, unique obligations for the Scout Executive which sharply distinguish him from executives in other fields. The Executive in a factory or in a retail establishment has under him workers, responsible to him for their wage; the Scout Executive, however seeks to head a group of busy men who are giving some of their leisure time because of the altruistic motive of serving boys.

Important as is morale in industry and commerce, it is so much more important in the Scout Executive's work that it actually conditions his ability to do anything.

Leadership

“Morale-inducing” leadership therefore is not merely desirable but is absolutely essential. All leadership is basically a problem of Human Relations. It is a problem of dealing with others.

A) Leadership of Volunteers, therefore must be based upon Consent, upon the willing cooperation and enthusiasm of those led. The Scout Executive is not a leader ex-officio—he is a leader by acceptance. While he must be an affirmative, a strong personality, yet here as elsewhere real strength involves consideration and is not attempted domination and dictation. These blight the volunteer's morale like a hoar frost.

To gain the consent of an associate takes more time than to wave the hand and say "It shall be so," but it conserves human spirit than which human life has no more precious nor fragile element. The invoking of authority, therefore, is a confession of weakness; it means authority temporarily gone. Leadership in a word, then, must be real not artificial, internal not external; it grows up from below not down from above.

B) Leadership of Volunteers must be based on tact. Probably more leadership fails through the way things were done than through what was done. These mature men, many of them executives in other fields, must be dealt with most considerately. The relation of executive, or of superior officer should be lost in a relation of helpfulness in aiding the volunteer to do his part. Suggestions toward readjustments must be carefully made as few normal individuals relish "interference" in what they are doing. Also there are very few normal individuals, very few indeed, who are not amenable to help and reason and counsel if considerately and consistently approached.

When a man has indicated his readiness to hear constructively critical suggestion—then absolute frankness is the rule. The finest diplomacy is courteous and considerate truth.

C) Leadership of Volunteers must be based on respect. A true leader is quiet and calm and controlled. No petulant, irritable person can maintain his influence, even as Scoutmasters who "lose their temper" lose therewith the full respect of their boys. In fact one's control over others is conditioned by one's control over himself. Leadership is modest and does not assume that all of the wisdom or vision or experience inheres in the leader, indeed the genius of real leadership is to surround one's self with the strongest possible men.

Real leadership will, through human qualities of sympathy, consideration, appreciation and unselfish helpfulness cement a firm, warm relationship which, if capped by large ability, will give the organization great power to achieve.

“To be” is the foundation of respect. A life which keeps lofty things first alone can merit the needed respect. Then too reality, sincerity, depth are surprisingly contagious from a leader.

D) Leadership of Volunteers must be based upon Recognition.

EXECUTIVE ABILITY

Executive ability has been variously defined, but the following from an executive with a sense of humor seems to cover the whole subject. He said “Executive ability is the ability to hire someone to do work for which you will get the credit, and, if there is a slip-up, having someone at whose door to lay the blame.”

—New York Evening Post.

Unfortunately the above statement contains more of truth than of poetry. Technically, of course, the executive should be credited with the achievements of his organization, but his smug personal acceptance of credit is sure to work him harm with his own men who have done the work.

The honest, courteous executive insists on passing the credit on to his staff of helpers. The far visioned executive is one who keeps out of the center of the spot-light himself—but has therein his helpers. The Scout Executive who can thus use his Commissioner, the Chairman of his Local Council, his Assistant Executives, his Scoutmasters is one certainly who loses nothing in public respect, while the enhanced morale of those concerned can probably be secured in no other way.

Eight Necessary Principles for the Scout Executive

The Scout Executive is primarily a man's man, whose work it is to mobilize men and forces in the community to serve and train boyhood. Accurate knowledge and skill in boys work and outdoor craft will, however, be a source of strength to him—provided that the appeal of personally working with boys does not lure him from the task of mobilizing his larger community forces. In smaller cities the Scout Executive will doubtless be drawn into closer contact with active troop life, but even there it seems safe counsel for him to function largely through his scoutmasters.

Assuming a man already trained for and suited to the tasks of the Scout Executive, a careful analysis of the scientific management of his work reveals eight outstanding “izes” facing him.

The Eight “IZE”

The Scout Executive Must

- 1) Scrutinize—look into and inventory his situation.
- 2) Advise—with those familiar with the situation.
- 3) Organize—to accomplish certain definite objectives.
- 4) Deputize—others to carry part of the load.
- 5) Energize—with enthusiasm and vision of service.
- 6) Supervise—the work of others and help them achieve results.
- 7) Realize—on the program started—must audit results.
- 8) Recognize—the part others have played.

From Technique to Service

As the above diagram indicates the Scout Executive is the instrumentality through whom policies and methods are to give harmonious fruitage in service.

Every executive should clearly recognize his intermediary responsibility for effecting that combination. Day after day he must make decisions which reach in any or all of these 3 directions. In judging propositions he must accurately forecast the results of his judgment and to that end will find certain criteria or tests of propositions to be of great value in avoiding needless difficulty.

The following “Ten Criteria by which the Scout Executive may judge propositions” will at least prove suggestive:

1. What does it mean?
2. Will it benefit the Boy?
3. Is it fair?—Just?
4. Will it antagonize any group?
5. Will it work under average or poor leadership?
6. Will it duplicate any other effort?
7. Will it push aside other more important work?
8. What will it cost? Is it worth it?
9. What are its dangers?
  - a—Scrutinize source.
  - b—Test by past experience.
10. Will it run counter to local or National Council policy?

Analysis of Scout Executive's Task

Analysis of the main groups with whom the Scout Executive necessarily has dealings, the purpose involved and the general method of accomplishing that purpose is shown by the following outline:

The Scout Executive's Dealings with	To Accomplish What?	How? Through
1) His Job	To know his job (Indoor) (Outdoor) Survey Conditions Make and further plans Maintain morale Secure and check results Live a normal civic life	Study and Experience " " " Plans and Organization Personal Leadership Study and Experience Being A Man
2) The Community (and its Institutions)	To Impart Knowledge " Arouse Interest " Secure Leaders " Secure Financial Support	Publicity Personal Leadership Organization
3) National and Local Councils	To properly interpret policies " give cooperation " maintain and help create standards " help render service " be personally accountable as officer and employee	Study and Experience Spirit of cooperation Organization and Study Personal Leadership Faithful doing of tasks for which commissioned and selected
4) Local Leaders  Scoutmasters Instructors Committeemen, etc.	To Find them " Train them " standardize their work (i. e. bring it above a certain minimum) " Enthuse and help and thus keep them	Publicity Active Contacts Organization Knowledge of training methods Study of standards-measuring of Results Personal Leadership
5) Scouts	To provide camp " ensure real scouting character and citizenship through Scoutmasters (City wide activities, service, rallies, etc.) To be recognized as leader	Organization (Study standards) (supervise activities) (measure results)  Organization Be A Man
6) Parents	To secure confidence " maintain interest " ensure cooperation	Publicity Personal contacts Results

A careful examination of the above methods of accomplishing the purposes of the Scout Executive's work yields the following few but vital items:

1) Study and Experience (Preparation and continued growth).

2) Personal Leadership (based on many personal qualities).

3) Planning and checking Results.

4) Organization (ability to create and work it).

5) Team play (loyal and helpful).

6) Educative ability (For Training Courses. For publicity, which is educating the public).

Ten "Must-s" for the Scout Executive Expanding these items and setting them down as "musts" for the Scout Executive, the following 10 things he should do seem to be essential.

The Scout Executive

1) Must have keen, alert, analytic, tactful, careful mind.

2) Must be cheerful, affirmative, consistent, tolerant, "good-listener," "give-and-take," good fellow with spirit of humility and of reverence; must be actively religious and be animated by a deep love for boys.

3) Must know Scouting—its ideals, national and local policies and objectives.

4) Must have advance training for and knowledge of his job. It is unfair to ask the community to let him experiment on them to gain his experience.

5) Must be able to see need and situations in his community. (Easiest done as survey followed by careful counsel.)

6) Must be able to continuously educate his community through broad program of careful publicity.

7) Must be able to attract, secure, organize, train, supervise, and help men to do work with boys.

8) Must be able to plan a definite program of possible and needed service including the finances therefor.

9) Must be able to organize others to secure scheduled results; must maintain high community and staff morale; as an executive must therefore be a good "team-man" nationally and locally.

10) Must be able to check results.

What Qualities Should a Scout Executive Possess?

In his book entitled "Leadership," Major A. H. Miller, enumerates 16 points of leadership as follows:

Simplicity	Earnestness	Self Control
Assiduity	Common Sense	Judgment
Justice	Enthusiasm	Perserverance
Tact	Courage	Faith (in self, in man, in cause)
Loyalty	Acumen
Honor		Truthfulness

In A. W. Shaw Company's book "Executive Control," a number of executives were scored and the attempt made to indicate what part of the 100% executive each of the following ten qualities represented:

Good Health	— — — —	10%
Character	— — — —	10%
Disposition	— — — —	5%
Originality	— — — —	10%
Determination	— — — —	15%
Good observation	— — — —	10%
Retentiveness of mind	— — — —	5%
Initiative	— — — —	15%
Training	— — — —	5%
Experience	— — — —	15%

Study of this list from the Scout viewpoint, make one immediately conscious of the high rating of Initiative, determination and experience and the low rating of training and disposition while character and health hobble along in between.

These two lists with three other analyses are combined in the following table:

Major Miller	A. W. Shaw	Katherine Blackford	William Kent	F. W. Taylor
	Health		Health	Health
Tact		Tact	Tact	Tact
Honor Truthfulness Loyalty Justice Faith Courage	Character	Dependableness Courage Justice	Personality	Honesty
Earnestness Perseverance Assiduity Enthusiasm	Initiative Determination Originality		Energy Initiative Aggressiveness Industry A degree of laziness	Energy Grit
Acumen	Observation Retentiveness			Brains
Self-Control	Disposition	Courtesy Sympathy
Common Sense Judgment Simplicity				Common Sense Judgment
	Training	Teachableness Understanding	Education Special Knowledge	Education Special Knowledge

Desirable Qualifications for Successful Scout Executives

National Field Scout Executive R. N. Berry has submitted the following interesting statement of "Desirable Qualifications for Successful Scout Executives."

1. Unquestionable character.
  2. Proven executive ability.
  3. Contagious enthusiasm.
  4. Tireless energy.
  5. Cheerful personality.
  6. Constructive imagination.
  7. Co-operative spirit.
  8. Ability to grow with the work.
  9. Faculty of putting himself in another's place.
  10. Thorough knowledge of and loyal support for the National and local Council Constitution and By-Laws, Principles and Policies of the Movement.

Study of these typical lists makes it perfectly clear that the aims of scouting are such that we must build our own statement. While the list might be expanded indefinitely these seem to naturally group themselves into four essential natural divisions shown on the next page.

While each group is essential in the make-up of the successful executive and while weakness in one creates a problem for him which must be balanced by special strength elsewhere—yet the careful thinker will distinguish differences in the importance rank of the groups. Ratings of these by 100 scout leaders revealed the following averages:

Qualities of Character	42.4 %
“ “ Mind	24.9 %
“ “ Relationships	16.04%
“ “ Energy	16 %

While recognizing the value of this mass judgment, the editor herewith includes his own analysis:

Qualities of Character	30%
“ “ Mind	28%
“ “ Relationships	24%
“ “ Energy	18%

There seems to be substantial agreement that the groups rank in the order of their mention—which is the only and the very significant fact which the figures reveal. Character is fundamental.

The Scout Executive's Time

"Dost thou value life? Then guard well thy time—for time's the stuff life's made of."

—Benjamin Franklin.

Time is the most democratic thing in the world. Everyone has potentially the same amount of it every 24 hours. People differ in the uses they make of this daily, weekly, monthly, yearly stipend of time.

While everyone lives in time, too few on time, most having little time, yet very few of us know anything definite about our time. If asked how much time we had devoted to various purposes in the past week—few could respond with more than a guess. The Business Training Corporation of New York City has prepared the following suggestive time study card:

Every man who is interested in his own personal growth and his achievement or service must study his time. As recommended in the Handbook for Scoutmasters, intelligent "Being Thrifty with Time" involves the following steps (which are the same as the steps toward financial thrift):

Being Thrifty With Time

1. Keep a record of how you spent your time for a number of days.

2. Study the facts and begin making an advance plan for tomorrow, seeking to correct bad elements in the use of yesterday's time.

3. This will lead to a careful advance scheduling of one's time by days or by weeks or months.

The careful user of time will analyze out how he spends his business time, recreation time, study or growth time, etc., so as to know the facts and be able to correct poor balance or actual wastage of time.

It seems fair to insist that the life of every man should contain time provision for the following items:

- I Sleep time.
- II Meal Time.
- III Business Time.
- IV Family Time.
- V Recreation Time.
- VI Study or Growth Time.
- VII Citizenship or Service Time (including church time).

In addition to these it is probable that most lives include

A—Wasted Time—due to poor planning

B—Waste Time—or unplanned time

Time to Live

The man who values long life and good health will attempt to put his life on a regularly ordered time schedule. If it be true that a good watch should be wound at the same time each day, it is certainly more important for that more delicate nervous machine, the human organism, to sleep, eat and have recreation on a regular time schedule.

TEST OF UTILIZATION OF SLEEP TIME

Mark yourself 20 per cent for each question that you can answer with an unconditional Yes. Grade lower according to your judgment.

1. Have you a regular time for retiring each night? .....
2. Have you a regular time for arising each morning? .....
3. Do you keep the windows of your sleeping room open, winter as well as summer? .....
4. Do you "sleep while you sleep," effectually shutting out thoughts of business and other interests? .....
5. Do you feel alert and thoroughly fit as you go out to your work each morning? (Drowsiness, dullness, indifference, the "sleepy feeling"—these are unmistakable evidences of insufficient sleep) .....

Time for Home

Every man should set aside time for his wife and family, and home. Because a man is engaged in social service is no justification for his neglect of his home. There is something wrong with the scheme of management of the man. Neglect is neglect whether caused by social service or dissipation. The Scout Executive is urged to plan a normal home life in his time schedule. The two following quotations are pertinent and may be effectively used by the Executive in other connections:

"E. Mitchell Hodges tells this story in the North American, in which he said he was travelling on a railroad train and he came in contact with one of the most prosperous business men of the town. This business man in the course of the conversation said: "Would you like to know what I am going to give my boy for Christmas?" Hodges said, "Yes," and he thought what a fat check that father could give to that boy and as the gentleman pulled out his wallet, he took from it a piece of paper, and handed it to Hodges. This is what Hodges read.

"To my dear son: I give to you one hour of each week-day and two hours of my Sunday, to be yours, to be used as you want it without interference of any kind whatsoever."

Hodges thought, "I wonder what that boy would feel and think when on Christmas morning he looks at that slip of paper. If he is the average boy he will be very much disappointed. If he is the unusual boy he will realize that his father has given him something that he can never repay."

"How did you happen to reach the decision to give that present," Hodges asked. He said, "One day I was seated in my office and a human derelict came in to see me, and when he mentioned his name, I said, Lad, to see you like this—and with such a father."

"Well, I have often heard said that he was a fine man," the boy replied, "All his friends have said so. I never knew him. He was so much occupied with his business and with his associations that I only saw him occasionally at meals. I never knew him."

"That made me think, and so I am going to concentrate my time on having my boy know me."

THE PRICE

"They say my boy is bad," she said to me,
 A tired old woman, thin and very frail;
 "They caught him robbing railroad cars an' he Must spend from five to seven years in jail.
 His pa an' I had hoped so much for him,
 He was so pretty as a little boy,"
 Her eyes with tears grew very wet an' dim,
 "Now nothing that we've got can give us joy."

"What is that you own?" I questioned then,
 "The house we live in," slowly she replied,
 "Two other houses worked and slaved for, when
 The boy was but a youngster at my side,
 Some bonds we took the time he went to war;
 I've spent my strength against the want of age,
 We've always had some end to struggle for—
 Now shame and ruin smear the final page.

"His paw has been a steady-goin's man,
 Worked day an' night an' overtime as well;
 He's lived and dreamed an' sweated to his plan
 To own the house an' profit should we sell:
 He never drank nor played much cards at night,
 He's been a worker since our wedding day,
 He's lived his life to what he knows is right,
 An' why should son of his now go astray?"

"I've rubbed my years away on scrubbing boards, Washed floors for women that owned less than we,
 An' while they played, the ladies an' the lords,
 We smiled and dreamed of happiness to be."
 "An' all this time where was the boy?" said I,
 "Out somewhere playing"—Like a rifle shot
 The thought went home—"My God!" she gave a cry,
 "We paid too big a price for what we've got."

—Edgar A. Guest.

Time for Citizenship and Service

'Tis quite unfair for a citizen to try to live his life in his own egocentric shell and not make his normal service contribution as a citizen in civic affairs, as a man of deep, active convictions in church relationships, as a broad visioned man, ever ready to help worthy social objects.

While Scouting recognizes no distinction between Catholic, Jew and Protestant, it demands respect for each,—this does not mean that the Executive should live a neutral colorless life religiously. On the contrary, he is strengthened if he is living an active religious life as a broad, tolerant, worthy member of the church of his choice. All the thinking world respects firm, honest, moral convictions, even if it does not agree with them. It was clearly the judgment of the First National Conference of Scout Executives that the Executive should be an active church member. He dare not be a bigoted partisan, but must live the twelfth Scout Law—with the other eleven!

Time for Recreation

Rest, recreation, re-creation are physiologic necessities. They are natural laws which can be disregarded only with danger and with penalty.

TEST OF UTILIZATION OF RECREATION TIME

Mark yourself 20 percent for each question that you can answer with an unconditional Yes. Grade lower according to your judgment.

1. Do you definitely plan in advance how you shall utilize your evenings, your Sundays and Holidays? .....
2. Prior to your taking up the present Course, have you during the past twelve months followed any systematic plan of weekly reading? .....
3. Do you regularly devote a portion of your spare time to some form of physical exercise—such as walking, tennis, or some other outdoor game, swimming, bowling, or gymnastic exercises? .....
4. Look back upon last week. Was every evening utilized completely, or were there vacant spaces between events that were idle away? If the latter is the case for as many as six evenings of the week, mark yourself 0 on this question. ....
5. Do you definitely plan your vacation activities in advance, never leaving details to "luck" or to last minute decisions? .....

Recreation, however, to be really re-creative, should leave the individual physically, mentally, morally refreshed. The "morning after the night before" results are not recreative—they are costly burners of one's energy. Recreation should be "plus" not "minus" in its after affects.

Time for Growth

Closely akin to recreation is Growth. The man who is not growing is in reality going backward, because the world is not standing still, but is constantly surging forward. Lectures, reading, regular courses, some such forms should clearly have place in every well ordered life. Then too, time for thought, for meditation, is necessary for any growing life. Harrington Emerson recently said, "James Chattick says the average American Executive is busy every minute of the day. He has not lost a minute anywhere. But he has not thought for fifteen seconds. He has not put in any thought at all—activity but no thought."

A regular program of horizon-widening reading will stimulate thought toward action toward growth. For the Scout Executive, meeting as he does a wide range of community interests—an equally wide mental range of interests is of value. However, his work is such that he should be an intimate friend of the Public Library as well as of his own books. Education, Sociology, Personal Efficiency, trends of public thought, religious and scientific literature can open to him the doors of Personal Growth. Mental and spiritual life must have food for thought.

While no bibliography of desirable reading in these fields is included here, as even the best books change and are replaced, yet from time to time these will be recommended to individuals as desired through the Department of Education.

Time for His Work

The efficient worker concentrates on his task—he works while he works and plays while he plays. Following a fairly definite working time schedule makes maximal concentration possible. It invokes the aid of all the tides of habit. By having a schedule, work is assured of a place in the days work and a piece of work is less likely to be pushed aside.

As already implied, time economy involves two elements:

1. Studying how you did spend it, then
2. Advance planning how you will spend it.

To accomplish this, one must from time to time keep records of his time even as a personal expense account is kept. The waste will astonish one.

Recently the writer sent a time-study blank to each Scout Executive for a record of the ways in which each used the time of a week. The blanks, though sent at the camping and vacation summer period and hence at a time difficult to fill out, had a twofold purpose.

1—To start the Executives to thinking about and studying their own time.

2—To secure such facts as their return would reveal.

A summary of their returns is given below for study and personal comparisons.

4. Do you work against time—that is, do you keep time on your work and see how long it requires to do each task? .....
5. Is it your practise to set yourself given tasks—that is, do you fix time periods within which certain jobs are to be completed, and drive yourself to do the work within the set time? .....
6. Is your desk or work-bench arranged according to a carefully planned system designed to prevent disorder and eliminate waste motion? .....
7. Have you been able to increase the speed of your work during the past year, so that now you are producing more service within a given time than you were before? .....
8. When spare time develops in your business day, do you utilize it in productive work? .....
9. Do you habitually finish your day's work on time, rarely having to stay overtime? .....
10. At the end of each week do you make up a schedule of the work to be done in the coming week? .....

Total rating .....

TEST OF UTILIZATION OF MISCELLANEOUS TIME

Mark yourself 20 per cent for each question that you can answer with an unconditional Yes. Grade lower according to your judgment.

1. Do you hold yourself strictly to a regular schedule of hours for meals? .....
2. Have you any plan for utilizing the time spent in going to and from your work? .....
3. Have you a definitely planned schedule of toilet operations, so that you can count approximately on the time cost of your morning bath, shave, dressing, etc? .....
4. Is your home work systematized, so that you get it done with the minimum expenditure of time and energy? .....
5. At home do you keep your clothes, tools, and other personal possessions in systematic order, so that you may find any article at a moment's notice? .....

Total rating .....

Local situations vary so widely that no attempt is here made to set up any standard personal work time program. The hope is, however, that each Executive will carefully study and later budget his time. It is sound management

The Executive with a Large Paid Staff

To many who have regarded volunteer leaders as the genius of Scouting method, the creation of large, paid staffs by executives will be viewed with deep concern.

"Machinery" in scouting must remain a means and not an end. Whatever the next decades will reveal, it is clear that the past decade has definitely confirmed the principle of an Executive having a minimal paid staff and a maximal volunteer staff.

The executive with a large paid staff adds to the relations to volunteers already mentioned, the relations of the business executive to his paid staff.

The following paragraphs indicate certain significant positions taken by the world of business.

Emerson's Twelve Efficiency Principles

Harrington Emerson's well known "Twelve Principles of Efficiency" for the business Executive are quoted from his book bearing that title:

- I—CLEARLY DEFINED IDEALS—"If a man does not know to what port he is steering, no wind is favorable to him."—Seneca.
- II—COMMON SENSE—"The greatest truths are the simplest; and so are the greatest men."—Hare.
"When a man has no good reason for doing a thing he has one good reason for leaving it alone."—Walter Scott.
- III—COMPETENT COUNSEL—"Knowledge flows from two unfailing springs: One's own experience and the experience of others." "A wise man will hear, and will increase learning; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels."—Proverbs 1:5.
- IV—DISCIPLINE—"Calm soul of all things! Make it mine
To feel amid the cities jar
That there abides a peace of thine Man did not make and cannot mar."
—Matthew Arnold.
"Most of man's misfortunes are due to man."—Pliny.
- V—THE FAIR DEAL—"Justice without discretion may do much; discretion without justice is of no avail."
—Cicero.
- VI—RELIABLE, IMMEDIATE—ADEQUATE & PERMANENT RECORDS—"Where there are many hands, deliver all things in number and weight; and put all in writing that thou givest out or receivest in."
—Ecclesiastics 42.
- VII—DESPATCHING—"Away with all delay. Postponement always harms when all is prepared."—Tucan.
"Use your time. It goes so quickly here.
Teach yourself order, in order to conquer time."—Goethe.
- VIII—STANDARDS AND SCHEDULES—(What Should be done).
"Life is an arrow—therefore you must know what work to aim at, how to use the bow, then draw it to the head and let it go."—Henry Van Dyke.

IX—STANDARDIZED CONDITIONS—“Simplicity is an exact medium between too little and too much.”
—Sir Joshua Reynolds.

X—STANDARDIZED OPERATIONS—“Method goes far to prevent trouble in business; for it makes the task easy, hinders confusion, saves abundance of time and instructs those who have business depending what to do and what to hope.”—Wm. Penn.

XI—WRITTEN “STANDARD—PRACTICE” INSTRUCTIONS—“Written instructions kill the germ of misunderstanding.”—H. W. H.

XII—EFFICIENCY REWARD—“Recognition makes labor sweet.”—H. W. H.

Scientific Management

F. W. Taylor in “The Principles of Scientific Management” (1914) summarizes Scientific Management as—“Science—not rule of thumb; Harmony—not discord; Cooperation—not individualism; Maximum Output—in place of restricted output and the development of each man to his greatest efficiency and prosperity.”

An Executive

The word Executive involves the ideas of “other helpers”—of “plans”—of “policies” and perhaps of “methods”—of “progress” toward “getting things done”—of responsibility for “the conduct of affairs” so as to bring about “certain predetermined results.”

The fundamental fact about the Executive is his functional relationship to others. Above all, he must be a “human engineer”—careful, tactful, tolerant, considerate, appreciative, unselfish in his relationship with others. The morale of his helpers and the consequent zest and effectiveness of their service, are his most vital concern. Criticism, petulance and sarcasm, mistrust and suspicion, blight morale like a hoar frost. That executive who is best beloved and who also most closely studies his business and his "men" secures the best service from his "associates."

SOME SOUND BUSINESS SENSE

"Never show your temper.

Indulge in no sarcasms.

Permit other people to have views.

Never contradict an irritated person.

Keep unpleasant opinions to yourself.

Be considerate of the rights and feelings of others.

Always use pleasant words.

Take time to be polite.

Never order people about.

Be gracious and accommodating.

Always grant a reasonable favor.

Don't try to fool your caller; he may be a smart man.

AND MAKE SURE YOUR WAY IS BEST BEFORE INSISTING UPON IT.

A newspaper clipping. Source and Author unknown.

There are certain things which the executive in any field must do.

He Must

(1) Ascertain Conditions and underlying facts in advance.

(2) Know what the organization is to try to do.

(3) Select his immediate helpers who in turn select their helpers.

(4) Divide responsibility among his immediate helpers who in turn make their helpers similarly responsible within distinctly understood limits which are not-to-be-overstepped either by the helper or by the "boss" unless to replace the helper.

(5) Communicate and come in touch with the rank and file of his various departments regularly through the individual whom he has placed in charge of that department; going "over his head" destroys the man's self-respect and generally saves little time.

(6) Effect division of labor corresponding to the above division of responsibility.

(7) So divide responsibility for planning as to develop the initiative of and get the most ideas from his staff.

(8) Set up general plans involving where possible definite program and time objectives.

(9) Ascertain progress made thereon from time to time through reports from department heads or foremen.

(10) See to it that the ideals of the organization and its morale receive resultful attention, perhaps through a training program.

(11) Counsel frequently with his governing Board.

(12) Establish rewards and checks which shall aid in bringing results on schedule time.

(13) Keep in close touch with what organizations of his type (competitive or otherwise) are accomplishing.

(14) Constantly counsel with his own department heads and outside experts toward the improvement of the service he is trying to render. For the Scout Executive all these items are colored by the fact that he is dealing with and operating through a volunteer group. "Hire and fire" or "Prussian" methods can accomplish little. Morale, spirit, enthusiasm—the things of Human engineering count heavily for or against his success.

Delegation of Responsibility

Delegation of accountability for the actual doing of things is inevitable. Ultimate responsibility for results cannot be delegated. The problem of the executive therefore is to so select his helpers that he may safely delegate to them a definite sharing of his responsibility so as to involve a minimum of his own thought or attention before, during, or after.

This necessitates that there be directly responsible to the executive certain helpers to whom in turn the rank and file of the organization are responsible. The Executive however is held finally responsible for what his organization does or does not do.

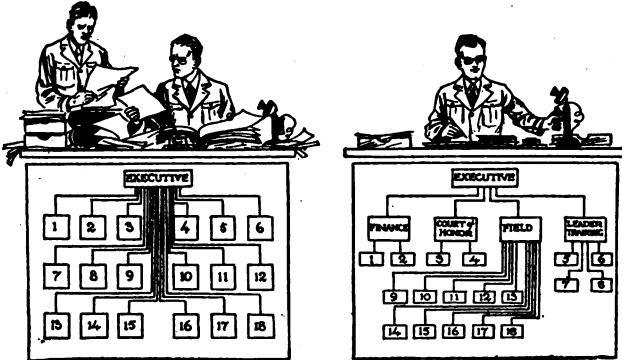

In his excellent book "The Executive, and His Control of Men," E. B. Gowin makes the following comments which are pertinent to this subject:

"A mass of material pours in upon every executive. Letters by the hundred are dumped into the office, the mere opening of which would often consume his working hours. Streams of callers besiege him; receiving each would leave the reception room still crowded at nightfall. Telephone messages, telegrams, messengers, memoranda from subordinates, press new problems upon him; "Unfinished Business" haunts the office and, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. Under such a burden many a manager is being crushed. His life is one long, losing fight. In spite of strenuous activity there has remained no time for those large problems upon which, after all, successful guidance depends."

The man who, though the head of a large staff, still insists on having every detail clear directly through his desk, cannot be an executive—he is generally only a very busy worker with numerous helpers.

As Knoepfel has pointed out such an one is the slave of detail, his desk is loaded, his time is mortgaged and he has inadequate time for developing the large, broader aspects of his organization's service. The following drawing adapted from Knoeppel, makes this very clear:

ALL DETAILS VS ORGANIZATION
(After Knoeppel)

The problem of the Scout Executive, however, is two fold here. He must delegate details within the limits of need and efficiency to his own salaried staff. But in dealing with his volunteer staff, he must spare them all possible detail, seeing that the paid staff thus protects the volunteer staff.

Limits of Discretion

Definitely understood relations and spheres of responsibility are very important. These are most effective if made matters of record. With volunteer leaders, what they want done for them can be ascertained in a helpful spirit of good team play.

G. H. Shepard in his book "The Application of Efficiency Principles" (1917), has clearly and tersely pointed out that in giving "instructions" to a subordinate one must

- a)—Set clearly the limit of his discretion;
- b)—Accord him full discretion within those limits.

This is sound for the paid staff—but with the volunteers, the Executive must find out what they expect him and his office to do for them to aid them in accomplishing their definite task.

The Volunteer

The usual text books on Executive problems are, as those quoted, written with the Executive of a paid organization in mind. The Scout Executive has no such control over his men, they are serving as volunteers and their satisfaction and morale and friendship are the Executives only "control" over them.

Then too, the large paid staff of assistants is not of itself an ideal, necessarily, to be desired and sought.

The very social nature of Scouting in helping a community help its own boys makes the following the rule—"as few paid workers as consistent with effective service" and then further recognition that the paid staff exists to mobilize, train and energize the largest effective volunteer groups, which groups do the real Scouting.

The Executive in the large city is therefore, like the executive in the village, dependent on the volunteer. What organization, division of labor, and efficiency devices he can have will depend on the quality and quantity of the volunteers he can enlist, train and keep active in service.

His organization depends and is composed largely of men upon whose time Scouting is not the first claim. His program therefore, must be elastic enough to recognize that fact. And as stated at the beginning of this chapter the Scout Executive is not a leader ex-officio, but is a leader by the consent and recognition of those led.

The Executive should be a man of honor, upright in every dealing with his fellows, and portray in his life and practise the principles of the Scout Oath and Law.

Relationships. (a) To the Council which employs him. He should have a joint memorandum and for mutual understanding, a definite agreement with the council specifying not only salary, vacations, and other general matters but specifically dealing with his duties, responsibilities, and other affairs related to his office. He should then in the spirit of unselfish service do more than is called for in the letter of his agreement.

Any service performed or time spent by the Executive apart from his regular duties as agreed upon, and for which he may receive compensation or any value consideration, should be done—if it is done—with the knowledge and consent of the council employing him.

It is not regarded as wise for any Scout Executive to act as agent for or receive commissions from the sale or recommendation of any Scouting supplies or goods related to Scouting and Executives are cautioned as to their procedure in the matter of accepting samples of goods used in connection with their work and of giving testimonials concerning the same, since injudicious procedure in these particulars may result in undesirable complications.

(b) To the Scouts under his supervision. He will never exploit the boys in the interest of his own prestige or advantage, nor will he permit them to be exploited by the Scout organization for its financial or other advancement, nor for the mercenary advantage of any other organization, firm, or individual. His relations to the Scouts and to the Scout organization will always be considered by him as a sacred trust.

(c) To his fellow Executives and to the Scout Movement as a whole. Every Executive entering the service thereby incurs an obligation to uphold the dignity and honor of the profession and will seek to promote its scholarship and efficiency, to elevate its moral tone, and co-operate heartily in the collection and compilation of useful material which will add to the knowledge of and assist in the formulation of principles and regulations for the benefit of the office of the Scout Executive.

Recognized business procedure and courteous consideration of requests for information and co-operation should be strictly observed as matters of honor.

Organized conferences, institutes, and conventions should receive his active support and be utilized as an opportunity for cultivating fellowship, for exchanging experiences, and for the advancement of scientific and practical knowledge and the maintenance of ethical standards.

In all competitions in Scouting activities with representatives of other councils and in the keeping of records, and in the reporting of Scouting achievements he shall practise the strictest accuracy and the highest integrity and sportsmanship.

Executives seeking associates will as a matter of courtesy notify the senior Executive with whom the person in question is associated that he is in communication with his associate and send him copies of all correspondence.

(d) To those seeking professional or personal counsel of the Scout Executive. All confidential information should be guarded with strictest fidelity and honor provided however that this does not preclude the taking of proper measures for the protection of individuals, the Scout movement, or other organizations.

(e) To the public. The Executive should exemplify in his relations to the public the essentials of true character in the keeping of appointments, in his general deportment, in the promptness with which he meets business obligations, and in the interest which he takes in matters relating to public welfare.

(f) To the Churches and other organizations. He should be tolerant in his religious ideas and seek to co-operate with churches of all creeds and faiths and with all legitimate agencies which are seeking to advance the interests of boys.

CHAPTER III

THE COMMUNITY SURVEY

General Plan

To ascertain the facts, to inventory conditions about boy life in his community is the first step which the thinking executive must make before he can intelligently counsel toward a plan of work. This is equally true of the executive entering a new field and of the executive desiring new efficiency in his present location.

Search of the literature of surveys has failed to reveal the development of comprehensive procedure in community surveys of boy life. Very excellent surveys of parts of the problem have been made by various scout leaders, some of whose results are here used as illustrative material. It has seemed imperative therefore to develop a suggestive "boy-survey" program outline for the Scout Executive.

It has been a general principle of school, business, and industrial surveys and auditing to have an impartial, outside expert make the survey. This has decided advantages where it is desired to establish whether or not the local staff are doing good work. Such questions easily become controversial, and outside judgment is often the only expedient.

The purpose of the Scout Survey, however, is primarily to accumulate certain statistical facts as to how many boys there are and how their time is occupied—points about which there is no necessity for controversy, no particular "O. K."-ing or criticising of other's work but rather an enumeration.

For this reason, Scouting is enabled to be true to its ideal of broad community cooperation with existing agencies—and therefore, in making surveys can take the strategic position of asking the churches, the schools, the unions, industries, etc., to cooperate in a community boy inventory.

This is at once sound strategy and sound sense. It economizes the scout leader's time and is in reality the most effective way of getting the churches and schools and other organizations awakened to boy facts and interested in doing something about them.

General City Comparison

1) One of the early things to be done is to ascertain how one's community compares in growth, wealth, education, etc.,*<sup>2</sup> with similar communities throughout the U. S. This can be done by getting a group of scout executives of towns of your size to run parallel surveys and pool the data; or one can write to these cities to the officer corresponding to one's local sources of information.

II) The Boys in Schools

The natural way to secure information about the boys in Public, Parochial and Private Schools is to seek the administrative officers of those Schools.

Probably the tactful approach is not to ask them to "please secure the facts indicated on the enclosed sheet" but rather by letter or telephone or personal conference to tell them that the Local Council is very desirous of knowing about the boys in the city and desires to know if this school officer would not aid in the making of a simple survey. Consent once given to be a member of the "Survey Committee," either in a meeting or in personal conference, he can be asked to take charge of compiling facts about the boys who are in his schools.

It will be seen clearly that thus may the seeds of future cooperation be tactfully sown.

*2—(This list could be expanded indefinitely or modified. It will be observed that the facts suggested above are on a %, per capita, number of inhabitants, per pupil—basis which makes them comparable directly with those of other cities).

Are there other opportunities available but not made use of?

What ones should be especially added?

Why not ask a group of boys to faithfully study their use of time for a week?

III)—The Boys in Churches

It will probably be an "eye-opener" for the churches to individually study their boy problem. As stated under 2. (The Boys in Schools) it is the soundest scout strategy to thus lead them to study their problem—as foundations are thus laid for future leaders and committeemen who become interested in that ever-new appeal of the boy.

1.) What boys are the churches reaching?

- 1) What percentage of the church membership is below 18?
- 2) What is the church doing to provide interesting activities for its boys? Service? Recreation?
- 3) Has a boy church attendance census been taken?
- 4) Are special boy services held?
- 5) What nationalities and % of each do your boys represent?

IV) The Boys in Industry

Interesting industries in their boys and possible interesting of their boys in themselves makes this inventory of great importance. With the exception of the loafing element in the community, this group comprises the mass of older boys.

The Commercial Club, the Manufacturers Associations, the Chamber of Commerce, the Trades Unions, perhaps the mayor of the town, the Public Library and outstanding public men will readily cooperate in securing facts about employed boys. The Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A., K. C. are potential sources of great service here.

It is possible for the Scouts themselves to collect these facts at the same time making it a means of listing the Vocational opportunities of the community so that such information may contribute to the intelligent vocational choices of the scouts or others. "Blind Alley" jobs should be watched for and noted.

Character and citizenship interests and ideas, a desire for and knowledge of how to grow personally are sorely needed by this generation of workers—as only such knowledge and outlook can hope to replace the ignorant blindness of extreme radicalism.

DIRECTIONS: This schedule is to be filled out every day from record kept by pupil or parent, showing fully and accurately how all the time is spent each day between rising and going to bed. The exact number of hours or minutes spent in each activity is important.

Leave one time schedule (without directions printed on back) with the pupil, with instructions how to fill out.

This schedule is valueless unless it is an accurate statement of facts.

Do not be in a hurry in securing the data. Interview the boy or girl when you both have plenty of time.

Explain that many other boys and girls are co-operating — helping the University to get this information.

See the pupil at least four times during the week to fill in the schedule. Do not let more than two days elapse between interviews.

Sample questions: "At what time did you get through eating supper last night?" "When did you begin?" "What time was it when you arrived home from school?" "When did school let out?"

VIII) Field and Extension Inventory

Many an executive has been surprised to find that he was only reaching a certain segment of his community. One executive recently in motoring the writer through his city said "you noted the area we just covered this side of the railroad. We do not have one troop in that section. The boys want it. The adults haven't seen it yet." Such an inventory is needed to visualize the actual situation.

1) Where are the churches and schools and potential troops centers of the city? Indicate them on an outline map of the city, marking in red those having troops. Places needing extension work will thus be seen at once.

Sample Study from Brooklyn, New York (Beeney)

2) Where do your Scoutmasters live? Solon I. Parks of Reading, Pa., suggests entering the residence of the Scoutmaster on a similar map, toward the policy of securing scout leadership from the community adjacent to the troop. Such a study by each Scoutmaster of his troop and showing the residences of the scouts and the meeting place of the troop, in addition, could be secured without much difficulty, (the Senior Patrol Leader would be glad to prepare the map) and would enable the executive to know how far he was conserving such community elements of morale and solidarity.

3) Inventory the possible and available sources of leadership supply in your community?

a) List of clubs and available men with their active interests and relationships in the community.

b) List of churches and available men.

c) List of Schools and available men.

d) List of Fathers and available men.

Such a study may properly be used to determine all the community agencies as a basis for getting them to appoint Boy's Work Committees, etc., etc.

IX) Troop Inventory

No survey of the Community would be complete which did not inventory Troop strength, Scout progress, Ages, Years in Scouting, Losses and Causes therefor. Here the Scoutmaster group should be dealt with like the other school and church groups mentioned and for similar reasons.

1) What is the present status of your troops?

Sources of Information

Own Local Council Records or direct securing from the Scoutmaster, Scribe or Troop Records.

2) What specific goal of growth and improvement shall we set for coming year?

a) Number new troops.

b) Maximum % loss to keep below.

c) Percentage of 1st Class, 2nd Class, Tenderfoot Scouts to achieve for the year.

d) Specific moral and quality standards to be met by leaders?

e) Training program to be put on.

f) etc., etc.,

A survey is only significant as something is done about it! It should give fruitage in specific plans and improvements.

CHAPTER IV.

EFFECTING A WORKING ORGANIZATION

A New Man

The executive who enters the work of an already organized council

- 1) Will do well to move very slowly in the matter of changes unless conditions have been very bad indeed.
- 2) Will be very, very cautious about criticizing his predecessor. Avoid doing so entirely if possible.
- 3) Will carefully study his community and its nature, counselling much with his cabinet and with them studying what should be done.
- 4) Changes in personnel will probably be made—but should come slowly in most cases, naturally and as painlessly as possible. The Scout movement will have to live with the people of this community long after the executive shall have gone—so that care should be exercised lest bad feeling be created.
- 5) Unsound moral conditions however, should be faced promptly and with decision, not with noise but with decision.

Initial Steps

For him—as well as for the executive entering a new field, hitherto unorganized, the initial steps have been outlined in Chapter II, page 24.

- 1) Scrutinize—his field to ascertain conditions.
- 2) Advise—with those who know the community.
- 3) Organize—to accomplish definite objectives.
- 4) Deputize—others to help carry the load.
- 5) Energize—with spirit and vision of service.
- 6) Supervise—and help secure results.
- 7) Realize—on the definite objectives started.
- 8) Recognize—the part others have played therein.

General Principles

To look and advise before leaping is the sanest policy.

- 1) Therefore a survey of conditions and
- 2) a thorough counselling with leading men must precede the effecting of the working organization.

72 Effecting a Working Organization

- 3) Tasks should be definitized—a man for every job and a job for every man. How can a man be expected to do his job if he is hazy as to just what his job is. The first thing in organization is to decide "What things are going to be done." These things must then be divided up into sizable jobs, worthy, attractive, possible.
- 4) Carefully select each man for a definite task. Here the counsel of leading citizens and boy-workers will be of great value. The character, the abilities, the interests, the hobbies of the man and his dependability are known to his fellows in the community.
- 5) An organization is a living machine and is not effective until the man becomes active. He must first be "sold" the idea and value of boy service; the job must then be squarely and frankly put up to him by someone he respects. (Preferably not the executive.) The man must then have cooperation and help in taking hold of his duties.
- 6) The time element of a task should never be camouflaged. A man should never be told: "It won't take much of your time", because any service other than a dummy directorship does take time. The man in honesty has a right to the most accurate picture of his job than can be given him.
- 7) The time element in meetings is of equal importance. It is not honorable to hold a man 2 hours at a "30 minute meeting." Run your meeting on such a planned schedule that things are ever on schedule time and dismissed before men begin to consult their watches and "have to go." The secret of such speed is probably to be found in following definitely Parliamentary procedure not lifelessly—but to the extent of handling one subject at a time and making some disposition of it. A motion brings loose conversation to a head and saves time. Much time is lost in such committee meetings by presenting a half a dozen things talking much about them and disposing in business-like fashion of none of them. If the scout business has reputation for dispatch in its meetings the biggest men in the community can afford to be there, otherwise not.
- 8) Keep the organization active in worth-while, forward-looking, onward-moving service tasks. The imagination of the community must be challenged—not cheaply by loud show, but by the quiet reality of service rendered. Activity in doing things for the boys is the secret. An organization (especially a volunteer group) is much like a bicycle—stable when going; it totters when it stops.
- 9) The human elements of friendship, consideration, encouragement, appreciation and recognition are vital organization elements, because they create morale. The spirit of an organization, the plane upon which it lives, limits its life and service just as truly as it does in the case of an individual. It is essential therefore for the executive himself to live those fine qualities which evoke such spirit in others. He thus can build the spiritual tone of his organization and until this is done his organization is neither effected nor effective.

- 10) The principle of definite time objectives is most healthful. What are we going to accomplish? Certain very definite ends and results as a minimum achievement task. When will this be completed? Sometime? No—it will be completed two years or 12 months or 6 months or 60 days from date! The theory which makes a definite amount of money and a definite closing date valuable in a financial campaign—applies with equal force in accomplishing any other task.
- 11) Bring these Councilmen, into some direct touch with the boys and their activities. It will tremendously enhance their enthusiasm and hold their interest, such contacts with strong, clean men will do the boys good as well.
- 12) Frequent, terse, reports give men information on which interest may be sustained.

Organization of the Local Council

Both logically and in point of time the organization of the local council and its committees precedes the organization of the Scout Executive's staff. Indeed the Executive is selected by the Executive Committee of the Local Council. There have, however, been cases where an Executive was brought in to help a few leaders organize their interest in and responsibility for boyhood into a working unit and then one of the early acts of the organization was to elect the executive formally. These cases are the exception however. The nature of scouting, as a national movement for local use by local men for the benefit of local boys—is such that certain minimal standards are necessary as indicated in Chapter VII.

Probably among these essential uniformities is the general nature of the local council organization, as the foundation unit on which by Federal Charter is builded the national movement to build character and citizenship.

The following statement was used to introduce the "Standard Constitution for Local Councils, Boy Scouts of America 1920."

"This Constitution has been drafted to set forth what is considered by the officers of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, to be the best form of meeting the needs of first-class councils. With some slight modifications it may be adapted to the needs of second-class councils.

It is presented as containing the minimum requirements which will be expected of first class councils. A reasonable time will be allowed to councils to adapt themselves to the provisions of this Constitution. In case there are local conditions warranting consideration of a request for modifications or the elimination of any of the provisions, this matter should be made the subject of correspondence with the Director of the Department of Field Work.

It is the privilege of all councils to add to the provisions of this Constitution and to elaborate as much as may seem desirable in the By-Laws, and to so draft By-Laws as to cover local conditions.

For the convenience of the field, standard By-Laws are made available with alternative suggestions for various provisions in which experience shows different conditions prevail in different localities."

PLAN III—THE SECTOR PLAN

Troop representation direct to Council—Council organized under standard plan—Standing Committees of the Council consist of District Committees of like name—District Committees may caucus but do not legislate

ARTICLE—DISTRICTS

Section 1—The territory under the jurisdiction of this council shall be divided into the following districts: (Here give boundaries or the names of the townships which are to be included in each district. All boundaries should be along established civic boundary lines.)

Section 2.—Each of the standing committees of this council shall be composed of one sub-committee with corresponding name and function from each district.

Section 3—The sub-committees in each district shall be composed of members of the council residing or interested in such district. Each district sub-committee shall be responsible for performing the functions of the local standing committee of which they are a part within the boundaries of its district. Such sub-committees, however, shall not operate independently in matters of policy, method or procedure, but shall meet with the sub-committees from the other districts of like function as the standing committee of the council to consider and determine the respective problems, needs, policy and procedure, thus establishing uniform policies and practices throughout the entire territory and more fully meet the responsibilities of the council.

Section 4—The council shall meet and operate as a unit including in its membership all representatives of troops. The various sub-committees in the respective districts, however, may meet together as a district committee of the whole for the consideration of problems and informal discussion of matters pertaining to the district. Section 5—Each district committee shall elect delegate members of the local council in the proportion of one delegate for every two troops within the district.

By providing for three delegates for every two troops, the membership of the council representing troops would be materially increased, thus permitting a larger number of members at large, and a sufficient membership for effective committee work.)

ARTICLE X—APPROVAL AND AMENDMENTS

This Constitution and By-Laws shall be adopted at a regularly called meeting of the District Committee subject to the approval of the Local Council or its Executive Board. It may be amended at a regularly called meeting of the District Committee provided a copy of the proposed amendment accompanies the call for the meeting, and provided further that such proposed amendment shall have had the consideration and approval of the Executive Board of the Council.

THE LOCAL COUNCIL ORGANIZATION SOME FUNDAMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS

By Geo. W. Ehler, Scout Executive, Allegheny Co., Pa.

Fundamentally the Boy Scout Organization is an association of volunteers, being entirely so in all of its legislative units, and in the personnel who are directly engaged in the performance of its primary activities—Scoutmasters leading boys. It employs a relatively small number of Executives whose functions vary in many details in many places but most Councils conceive the office of the Executive to be in a large sense that of a General Manager whose duty it is to help secure and train and give expert leadership and inspiration to the body of volunteer workers, as well as to direct and supervise the work of other employees.

Up to the present the organization has been peculiarly successful, in contrast with other similar movements, in maintaining the voluntary character of its control, management and activity. Future sound development and strength and permanency in the field of its service depend upon the maintenance of this dominance and activity of the "volunteer" factors. In other movements exercising similar functions in the field of education and welfare, the "Expert professional" has or is on the way to, become the controlling factor, with a consequent deterioration of the service of the volunteer, because the "Experts" have taken over all the worth while activities and have left the "Volunteer" the unimportant matters that "do not require the services of an expert."

Scouting in the strictest sense and meaning of the word and reduced to its lowest terms of organization, depends upon the consecration and efficiency of the volunteer Scoutmaster. Without him there can be no Scouting. He is the one indispensable factor.

With the recognition of the size of the task that the Scoutmaster assumes in undertaking in his leisure time the leadership of twenty to thirty boys in the Scout program, there has come the realization that if he is to accomplish the largest results in the personal life of each of his boys, there must be placed at his disposal through the efforts of other persons, every resource of the institution and of the community needed for the conduct of the troop and its relation to other troops and to the community that will enable him to devote his available time exclusively to his personal contacts with his scouts and to his study of them and their needs from his standpoint as a dominant factor in determining their characters and leading them into effective citizenship.

All the "overhead" organization—from the Troop Committee to the Local Council and its committees and paid staff, exists primarily for the purpose of bringing aid, assistance, support, encouragement to the Scoutmaster. If the "overhead" organization fails to do this whatever else it does is time, money and energy wasted. Secondary purposes of the "overhead" but all indirectly affecting the primary purpose, include conservation of the movement: within its own field and to its avowed purposes, protection against commercial and other exploitation and extension to unserved boys. Therefore, all wise organization plans and methods of administration must be formulated primarily in accordance with these two points—

- 1 The Primacy of the volunteer
- 2 Service to the Scoutmaster.

With respect to the first point, whatever specific form the organization assumes it must endure that the service to be rendered by the volunteer shall be worth-while in a real sense; a service necessary to the success of the movement in its ultimate effect upon the Scout, in itself of such importance as to command the attention and best effort of the man to whom it is assigned and of such nature as to arouse the enthusiastic interest of virile, red-blooded men.

Furthermore, the service must afford opportunity for the exercise of initiative and judgment, some share in determining the conditions under which the service is to be performed, a realization of personal responsibility for the proper discharge of the duty assumed and authority within the sphere of the particular office.

This will require that whatever may be the size or character of the paid staff, its functions must be entirely those of leadership and training—leading the organization to develop its manifold opportunities for service, leading individuals to see the opportunities for personal service adapted to their capacities and interests and so training them in the exercise of their respective functions that the energies of the paid expert are released for concentration upon the unsolved problems and the development of a constantly widening influence of the Movement upon the boyhood and manhood of the community. The form of organization and the principles of its operation are related very directly to this problem.

Service by the organization to the Scoutmaster in a satisfactory constructive manner is related very largely to the administrative methods of the organization but most largely to the correlation established between the Scoutmaster and the various operating units of the organization through the leadership of the Executive. Whatever be the form of the organization or its policies or its program—the paramount function of the Scoutmaster as the leader of his Scouts must never be compromised by Council Committee or Troop Committee or Executive, nor must his freedom in conducting his troop as he sees fit be unnecessarily limited by Committee or Executive so long as satisfactory results in Scout progress and service are apparent, and the letter and spirit of the Constitution and By-Laws of the National and Local Councils are observed.

A third consideration that must be taken into account to assure the successful administration of the Scout Movement is the democratic principle and republican form of organization enjoined by the National Council in its By-Laws—Article XI—Section 2, Clause 8 and Section 1, Clause 6 to wit:

“Clause 8—Representation. The membership of all local councils shall include representation from organized troops as provided for in Clause 6 of Section 1 of this article, together with representatives of the various religious, civic, educational and business interests of the community. All applications for charters shall be made on behalf of the community.”

“Clause 8—Representation. In communities supervised by local councils, each chartered institution shall be entitled to elect one of its members, other than the Scoutmaster, as a member of the local council, and in case of an independent troop, one representative citizen of the United States identified with the work of that troop, other than the Scoutmaster, may be elected by the Troop Committee, to membership on the Local Council, provided, however, in the larger communities where the local council work is sub-divided among district committees, the representatives of troops shall be appointed to the committee in charge of the district in which the troop holds its regular meetings and the district committee shall, in turn, elect delegates to the local council in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution and By-Laws of the local council.”

If the Scout council in any community is to be a living, growing, social agency not only the form enjoined in the foregoing quotation must be actually created but the spirit of service must animate its every part and the responsibilities carried by every member must be seriously considered and fully discharged. The volunteers must not become automatons to “rubber stamp” the decisions and acts of the “Experts.” And furthermore, this consideration effectually negatives any plan of organization of Military Type which normally tends to the exercise of “authority” the giving of “Commands” and the overdomination by “headquarters” which tends to perpetuate the feeling of being in the community but not of it; an idea that must be sedulously combatted by constant and consistent stimulation of the normal activity of each constituent factor in the organization in accordance with assigned functions in its own field and the refusal of the paid man to perform the volunteer's duty because "he is paid and can do it so much more efficiently."

In this connection it must be remembered that the compensation of the volunteer is purely personal satisfaction through a sense of duty performed, or pleasure in the activity itself, or in achievement of the desired result of the activity engaged in. Likewise the only penalty for failure to perform his assumed task is a feeling of personal dissatisfaction which is in direct proportion to his interest in the particular activity involved. There is no economic or other tangible gain or loss. Therefore, factory methods and industrial "efficiency" schemes must be fundamentally modified in giving leadership to the volunteer force. Standardization, formal schedules and fine techniques will largely fail and should, for these are "of the letter and not of the spirit."

MAKING THE COUNCIL COMMITTEES FUNCTION

By W. Edgar Wylie, Assistant Regional Executive Region Seven

I. WHY COMMITTEES

The task of the Scout Executive is to serve boyhood through organizing the boys to serve their community and organizing the community to serve its boys.

The Scout Executive is therefore concerned with two human elements—boys and men. Organization is the key to each.

He must organize { Boys—by troops—To serve the Community.
Men—By Committees—to serve Boyhood.

To be successful, the executive must be able to do both.

Scouting is based upon the volunteer theory, i. e., using many men volunteers, each rendering some small service, to accomplish a great task.

The work must be split up into many small service tasks, and each man or group of men given some fairly definite part.

Committee work is one of the most important elements in the structure of any volunteer organization. It is a device for the systematic subdivision of work and its orderly distribution among many workers. Its direct purpose is to get something done, but it has two important by-products.

- (1) It is a method of interesting more men from year to year.
- (2) This wider interest gives increased financial ability.

The Scout Executive is concerned with two kinds of committees:

- (1) Standing Committees, as provided for under the constitution or by-laws of the organization.
- (2) Special Committees, usually appointed for a special task and ordinarily, for a short term, such as scout week, a rally, etc.

II. HOW FORMED

*The Scout Executive can render considerable assistance to his President, Executive Committee, or other body responsible for the selection of Committee, if he will, through questionnaire or other means, secure some idea of the fitness for committee service of various men under consideration. A suggestion along this line is attached hereto:

- (a) Is the man interested in the task of the Committee?
- (b) Has he prestige in the community?
- (c) Has he special knowledge or experience fitting him for this particular task?

* It is assumed that the Scout Executive is familiar with Chapter IV of "Community Boy Leadership," and the suggestions there given as to how Committees may be formed.

108 Making the Council Committees Function

- (d) Is his indifference or apathy or opinion of a kind to make it desirable to appoint him a minority member so he may be educated to serve?

III. GETTING ATTENDANCE

(Caution: Don't start all Committees at once or you will not be able to supply adequate secretarial service.)

Notices of meetings should be sent out in the name of the Chairman, preferably dictated by him, on letterhead, several days before the meeting. These should specify exact place and hour, subjects to be taken up, names of committeemen expected to report on special subjects and a return postcard with the following message stencilled on it:

"I will ..... be present at the meeting of the committee on ..... at ..... place ....."

Note the will denoting determination and not merely futurity. If tentative reports of sub-committees are to be discussed at the meeting copies of these should be enclosed so that members may familiarize themselves with same before the meeting.

In smaller towns where meetings are called by telephone or word of mouth rather than by letter, have Chairman call the meeting personally. If impossible to get him to do this personally see that notices goes out in his name. Notice of the meeting should also contain the hour at which adjournment is expected so that members may be assured that the meeting which is announced to begin at a definite time will also end at a definite time.

A few hours before the meeting have your stenographer telephone each member a definite message somewhat as follows: "I am speaking for Mr. (Name of Committee Chairman). He is counting on your being present at the meeting of the ..... Committee of the Boy Scouts at ..... time ..... place. You will be there, won't you?" The operator should have a reserve list of topics to be taken up and should be coached not to take "No" for an answer without having an opportunity to say, "You know that there are a number of important matters to come up, such as ..... and ....." or "Mr. (Name of Chairman) will be very much disappointed, because there are a number of important matters such as ....., etc., to be discussed." The executive should not figure in that conversation because the committee member should be made to feel a certain responsibility to his chairman.

OTHER AIDS IN SECURING ATTENDANCE:

1. Prior to first meeting have chairman go to each member and "sell" him his job. Have President, Commissioner, or Executive Committee meet with committee at first meeting.
2. Newspaper publicity.
3. Bring in scouts, scoutmasters, or others interested in the committee's work to meet with committee.
4. Absentees may be called from meeting. Have Chairman call on absentees. Ask habitual absentee to set date for next meeting, and remind him of this when next meeting is held.

IV. GETTING RESULTS AT MEETINGS

Prior to first meeting the executive and chairman of the committee may prepare a step by step analysis of the committee's task.

Example of such analysis:

1. Where are present troops located?
  - (a) Are they operating successfully?
  - (b) What assistance have they been given?
  - (c) What additional service might be given?
2. Where are additional troops now needed?
  - (a) What institutions should be interested?
  - (b) Who are the men best fitted to present the matter to them?
  - (c) When should this be done?
3. What phase or phases or organization shall this committee consider at its next meeting?
4. Time and place of next meeting.
5. Adjournment.

Results of such analysis:

1. Interest increased.
2. Courage of Committee Members multiplied.
3. Prospects of Success multiplied.

Sometimes it is wise also to have a calendar of dates showing when each step in a committee's program of work should be completed. The chief object is to bring home to the committee a definite idea of the responsibility for concrete achievement within definite time limits.

An example of such a calendar will be found on page 384 of the Scout Executive's Handbook.

V. CONDUCT OF MEETING

Carefully plan details of meeting. Try to visualize the whole thing. If possible seat members of committee around table with chairman at head and secretary at his left hand. Have before each member a copy of the step by step analysis. Sometimes it is advisable to have this analysis of committee task written on a blackboard. It may be easier to focus attention on a blackboard than if each man is looking at his sheet of paper. Also, it is constantly before the group. The committee member cannot fold up the blackboard and put it in his pocket.

Prior to the first meeting rehearse with committee chairman his opening statement. Be sure he can make clear to committee what is to be accomplished at that meeting. Try to have chairman on hand five or ten minutes before meeting is scheduled to begin, to discuss important questions.

Begin on time. Have just enough formality to secure unconscious discipline.

If there have been prior meetings have chairman briefly summarize proceedings of last meeting. Reading of minutes is tedious and may kill meeting at start.

110 Making the Council Committees Function

Immediately proceed to consideration of Number One of program. With program in hands of each member it is not difficult to confine discussion of subject at hand for the chairman can say, "Well Mr. Jones, the matter you were speaking of comes up under Number 5. We will get to it in a minute. Let's get rid of Number 1 first." The Chairman must combine tact with firmness however. It is well to let a man waste a little time rather than antagonize him by cutting him off too short. Nevertheless it should be remembered that aimless discussion is the bane of the average committee meeting.

The program should help the chairman to hold the committee to its task.

The Executive's ideal must be—to make every committee meeting a real event, a gathering for discussion of a vital problem at which measureable progress can be made.

Let no meeting break up without for a few minutes considering, "What is the next step?" If that is the last thing in the minds of the members before adjourning, there is less likelihood of a break in that continuity of interest and judgment which is so necessary to the success of committee work. If possible, fix the time and place of next meeting.

VI. RECORD OF MEETINGS

Following committee meetings the secretary should dictate minutes and have copy sent to the chairman. Digest of meeting should be sent to all absentees. In dictating minutes absentees may be listed first. This is to give them the undesirable prominence they deserve and also to serve as a reminder to the secretary to send them abstracts of the meeting.

Furnish the chairman of the committee with a binder in which he may file carbon copies of the minutes of each meeting. Such a binder with stiff manilla cover costs little and will serve to emphasize the importance of the committee if the secretary will have lettered on it the name of the committee and the chairman. Such a binder will prove invaluable to the chairman in the handling of the committee and will accustom him to reading the minutes of the last meeting before coming to a question.

Keep in the committee folder record of committee attendance, so that estimate can be made of work of each member. This will serve as a guide to future committee appointments.

CHAPTER V

RECRUITING LEADERSHIP

Volunteer Leadership

The genius and the success of scouting has inhered in its volunteer leadership. Scouting has been an effort, fundamentally, to awaken the community (or the institution) to a consciousness of the needs of its own boys and to provide it with a tried program of activities through which its own best men should give companionship to its own boys.

The immediate and seeming personal sacrifice which the leader must make constitutes in a measure a guaranty of the motive to such service, but it constitutes also a great problem.

Everywhere analysts agree that boys stand ready but that the men to lead them are wanting.

Difficulties in getting the best and busiest men, problems of training and holding these create a distinctive task in securing scout leaders.

Basis of Methods of Enlisting Leaders

There are certain general considerations which are pertinent:

- 1) Care in selection must be ceaselessly exercised. The plea that good men are busy and scarce hence an inferior man must be used is no excuse. Better wait than to get a man of inferior character. Do not hope to reform his personal habits after he has worked a while. Men of character for boy-companions can be created only by selection—they must be hand picked. While 'tis true the troop committee selects the scoutmaster, they must be given leadership in standards for that selection.

Will you be able to take a hike at least once a month?.....

Remarks:

2) Don't select a man because he has money or can build camp fires—but pick him because he has character and can help build boys. He can learn technical duties.

3) Definitize the tasks to be done and then seek the man to handle that definite job. This is sound insurance for his efficiency—for only as he knows what he is to do, can he hope to do it! This will further aid in the selection as it will indicate what kind of man is necessary for each job, thus reducing the chance of picking the wrong man. After setting up a definite and distinct task to be manned, then—

4) Go after the biggest Men in the Community. Successful experience has shown that any man in the city can be secured to help if the right approach (Man or method) be made. Aim high—organize the getting of these men—they are more vital than money. Time and energy spent here are basic investments. The large turnover in scoutmasters bears mute but unmistakable testimony to poor methods of securing or selection. Often the function of the Executive here is solely to cooperate with the institution in selecting and signing its Scout Leaders.

5) How to land him?

There is no one infallible method.

(I) He must first see the vision of boy need.

- (a) Through having boys of his own, or
- (b) Through general newspaper, or movie or poster publicity, or
- (c) Through a public address appeal, strikingly rendered, or
- (d) Through having helped inventory community boy conditions, or
- (e) Through some personal appeal from a close friend or groups of friends, or
- (f) Through correspondence—clever appeals have been made, etc.

(II) Some one who challenges his respect must then put the job squarely up to him. Persistent following up with repetitions from other big men should be organized by the Institution and the Scout Executive and Council members if need be, until the man's consent is won. It may take years to land some men—but some men are worth it. Seek men who are worth it.

(III) The use of existing agencies to secure the leadership for their own boys is the soundest scout policy. Indeed it is required that troop committees be selected by institutions, though the Executive may advise. It seems fair to urge that the selecting of the Scoutmaster by the Executive alone is entirely unsound. The permanency of Scouting in a community depends directly on how far its controlling roots go right into the Community itself.

Leadership must come out of the group not be put over it from without.

When for special or additional or reserve leadership or because of internal conditions, the troop committee has to look about for men, often the Rotary, Kiwanis, or Lion Clubs, the American Legion, Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A., K. C., College men in College towns, Lodges, etc.,—can supply needed leadership. Then too community specialists, hobbyists, people with avocations can often be used if known and found. The compilation of such a list is therefore valuable.

It is essential to keep in mind however that membership in a fine group is no guaranty of fitness to lead or associate with boys! The steps urged in Chapter I should be followed strictly—(They have now been provided in a special pamphlet on “How to organize a troop”) see pages 7-8.

- 1) The interest and then the action of some relatively permanent group or institution must first be carefully secured.
- 2) They then select their troop committee.
- 3) These men then select their Scoutmaster.

The executive is concerned with standards, with the kind of a man they select, with keeping him active after training him but the executive should not regularly take the lantern of Diogenes and himself go out seeking a man! He should help—but securing the leader is a task the Executive should delegate. He never can do this, however, unless step (1) above has been well done and is being well continued.

The publicity (or better the educative) elements of step (1) cannot safely be relaxed for one season. (*) 1.

(IV) Once the man is secured, the task of the executive is to secure or give the needed training. It is probable that the Executive will have to "Sell" the man the idea of the training program and the time and energy it demands, as well as organize (*)2 and effect the training itself!

(V) The following special devices have been selected from many used in recruiting leadership.

A) The San Francisco Council plan submitted herewith is typical of the old method of general recruiting.

Letter No. 1

Dear Friend:
 There was a boy
 And his name was Bill
 Who started out
 In Life
 Just like any Other boy
 But
 He didn't have a real Friend
 Who was a real Man
 So
 He played in the streets
 And in alleys
 And behind Barns
 And he didn't know
 There were trees
 Made to climb
 Nor
 Fish to catch
 He couldn't Swim
 All he knew
 Was pavement Houses
 Dirty Streets
 Alleys
 Cigarettes
 And Smut
 You see he didn't Have a Half way chance
 To grow up into a Real boy
 Because
 There was no
 Real Man willing To help him
 To Live Right
 Now wasn't that Too bad?

Jim.

Letter No. 2

Dear Friend:
 Once there was a boy
 And his mama Called him
 William
 And so did
 Everybody else
 For he was such an Awfully nice boy
 He didn't get
 His clothes dirty
 Because
 He wouldn't Play rough
 And he kept his Hair parted
 All the time
 He could play the piano
 But couldn't
 Play Ball
 He could climb scales
 But couldn't Climb trees
 He knew how to Dance
 But didn't know how
 To run
 And yet he was Going to be Twenty-one years old
 Some day
 And Vote
 He was a sissy
 Just because He didn't have A Real Friend
 Who was A Real Man Willing To help him be
 A Real Boy
 Now wasn't that Too Bad?

Letter No. 3

Dear Friend:

There was a man
 Who was A Man
 And his name
 Was Mister Wm.
 But he was always Too Busy Working for Himself
 To think of Somebody else
 So he Kept on working
 At his desk
 And forgot
 There was anything
 In the world
 But
 His desk
 And he got Some wrinkles
 And a Bum Stomach...
 And
 Couldn't sleep at night
 So he Got grouchy
 And didn't have Much fun
 Not near as much
 As he used to have When He was A Real Boy.
 Now wasn't that Too Bad?

Letter No. 4

Dear Friend:

One day
 Mister Wm.
 Heard about
 Those boys named
 Bill
 And William
 And he felt so sorry
 For them
 Because
 He had been A Real Boy
 And knew what fun
 It is to be Alive
 And these Poor kids
 Were being cheated
 Out of Life
 So he said
 He wished that Some Real Man
 Would help
 Those boys
 And he tried
 To think
 Of some way he could get Some one
 To do it
 Then a voice..
 Told him
 He was the Real Man
 For this Real Job
 Of making
 Real Boys
 Now what Do you think About That?

"Up a Tree" for a Leader

Letter No. 5

Dear Friend:

Some day soon
 There will be Three Real Boys
 Bill, and Bill, and Bill
 Who have Good times Together
 Out in the Woods
 And they swim
 And Camp
 And Fish
 And Sleep
 And Eat
 And Bill doesn't have A bum stomach
 And he can't keep His eyes open Until he Hits the hay
 And he isn't Grouchy
 And he has
 A real good time.
 And another
 Bill
 Don't play behind
 The barn
 Up the alley
 And live
 In Smut
 For he would Rather spend his time Thinking
 About hikes and His friend Big Bill.
 And another Bill
 Isn't a sissy
 For he likes
 A good time
 With his friend

"The plan that we have followed during the past two years in securing Scoutmasters is to have the members of our Executive Committee and others, ever on the lookout for Scoutmaster material.

"As soon as we have found a man that we think we want some one who is intimately acquainted with him and who can properly approach him, does so, resulting in our Scoutmasters being "hand-picked," so to speak.

"We have found in using this method that we get much better material than by advertising and running a campaign for Scoutmasters through the press."

D) Council Testimony on the Policy urged by having the institution regularly provide its own leadership.

Philadelphia, Pa.

"Our general policy re: matter of enlisting new leaders is that the institution organizing a troop must be expected to enlist its own leaders. Headquarters is glad to assist herein (particularly in neighborhoods where there is a dearth of leadership material) and to train their leaders."

Sandusky, Ohio.

"Make the troop committee and organization sponsoring the troop responsible for its leadership."

Newark, N. J.

"The Troop Organization Committee of the Local Council meets Thursdays for lunch. They properly organize all troops."

Syracuse, N. Y.

"The custom in the past in this Council has been to ask the Troop Committee to select and enlist Scoutmasters and Assistants for the troops which are under their charge. This custom will be continued so far as I know at the present time.

"We are now advanced to the point where we are old enough to pick Assistant Scoutmasters or at least Senior Patrol Leaders of troops from some 25 young men who have been through the Scouting game from Candidate to First Class, or even to Eagle Scout. These young men are being encouraged to lend their assistance to troops in need of their aid, serving as Assistant Scoutmasters or Senior Patrol Leaders where such officers are not now available in certain troops."

New Haven, Conn.

"The old plan of securing Scoutmasters is not successful nor logical. Each institution, especially a church, must be made to feel that the responsibility of securing a scoutmaster belongs to that institution.

"For troops in schools, clubs and libraries students in Yale University provide suitable leadership. During the summer vacation the scouts are taken care of in some other way.

Portland, Maine.

"Have secured most of our leaders from the institutions where troops have been formed. Anticipate securing a number of reserve officers from the American Legion this fall."

Omaha, Nebraska.

"We maintain and increase our supply of Scoutmasters by conducting Scout Leaders' Training Courses once or twice each year. Previous to the opening of these courses we ask all of our old Scoutmasters and other officials, to bring in a Candidate. We also ask the Pastors of the various churches to suggest someone from their congregation to take this course.

"We find that it is not best for us to locate Scoutmasters for the various churches and similar institutions. Our job is to sell the idea to the institution and let the Troop Committee select its own Scoutmaster. I at one time attempted to recommend a Unitarian man for the Scoutmastership in a Methodist Church. It didn't work. On the whole I find it much better for the institution sponsoring the Troop to select its own Scoutmaster and turn him over to us for training and supervision. Public Schools are the only institutions to whom we can safely assign Scoutmasters.

"As a rule the men who are in Scouting may be depended upon to interest their friends in the movement."

Detroit, Mich.

"In line with the program of our expansion campaign inaugurated in the fall of 1919 we endeavored to get away from the idea of securing a number of scoutmaster candidates who could be planted here and there in troops in which they were not particularly interested and in whose soil they might not take root. We decided to go to the troop committee of a troop, without a scoutmaster and urge it to provide at least one candidate for the training class and then to go to the churches, clubs, schools, industrial plants, or other sponsoring bodies bringing forth their responsibility to them in such a way that they would seek candidates from their own number to become leaders of their own troops.

"In other words, we simply followed out the requirements of the National Constitution and By-Laws which require that troop committee shall provide adequate leadership for their troop, and we avoided the "hit or miss" campaign for leadership.

"The plan worked. Our Fall training class secured by such methods was attended by about 50 to 75 men. Our Spring Training Class likewise averaged 40 men and they are all men with troop committees behind them actually doing constructive work in the Scout Movement.

"Our experience in filling vacancies has been amusing. In several cases during the past year, pastors of churches who were used to the old system have come to us and said, "Mr. So and So, our scoutmaster has left, will you please send us another one?" Our reply has been a courteous "we are very sorry but we are unable to do that. That is the job of the troop committee. If Mr. So and So, the chairman of your troop committee, has not already called a meeting to consider the matter we would suggest that he do so at once." In nine cases out of ten this policy has worked. In the tenth case if there was evidence that the committee was not sufficiently interested to find a man itself and if the boys who had been members of the troop could easily be transferred to other troops, we felt that the institution in question did not deserve to have the benefits of Scouting and that troop was disbanded.

"This policy has proven to be most satisfactory. All of our troops are much healthier and we have about one-fourth the number of vacancies that we had formerly under the old system."

Norfolk, Va.

"The policy of this council is in accord with the National Constitutional provision that the institution select the scoutmaster.

"The troop committee are warned to place their ideal high and to "make haste slowly," with the result that the men selected are averaging higher in mentality than heretofore."

NORFOLK COUNCIL BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

This insert is prepared for use in the National Pamphlet "THE TROOP COMMITTEE" in order that the internal troop organization as outlined on pages 8 and 9 may be visualized and also to include a statement concerning the policy of the Norfolk Council relative to the organization of troops in the territory under its jurisdiction.

STATEMENT OF POLICY

The National Council, through the By-Laws, Article XI, Section 1, clause 4, makes the Local Council responsible for approving applications for Troop Charters and in the same article, Section 2, clause 10, the Local Council is charged with the responsibility of promoting the troop relations and protecting the movement against misinterpretations, wrong direction, commercialization and unwise activities, but in Article XI, Section 1, clause 1, they place the responsibility for the organization, conduct and maintenance of the troop squarely upon the institution with which it is connected, or in the case of a community troop, upon some civic or welfare organization agreeing to assume such responsibility, or failing that, upon a Troop Committee reporting directly to the Council.

A—INSTITUTIONAL TROOPS

1—Explanation of the movement to the head of the institution and to its governing board at a meeting, by a representative of the Local Council.

2—Formal endorsement of proposition to organize a troop by action of the institution's governing body.

3—Appointment of a troop committee by formal action of the institution's authorities, the members of which committees shall meet collectively with a representative of the Local Council and have explained to them their duties and responsibilities.

4—Selection of a suitable man to serve as Scoutmaster and one or more Assistant Scoutmasters, who have taken or will take the Scout Leaders Training Course.

A conference between the proposed Scoutmaster and an Executive officer of the Council should always precede the definite appointment.

5—Application for "Troop Charter" to be prepared under the direction of the troop committee (Form 670) naming the member of the committee who is to represent the institution on the Local Council.

6—Forward papers (Form 670) in duplicate to the Scout Executive to be presented at the monthly meeting of the Organization Committee for action.

B—COMMUNITY TROOPS

In the case of so-called Community Troops not connected with an institution of any kind, a group of representative men interested in the welfare of boys should be organized and this group accept the same responsibility as an institution, following the same procedure as regards items 2-3-4-5 and 6 under Institutional Troops.

C—NEW SCOUTMASTER

When for any reason it becomes necessary to register a new Scoutmaster before the expiration of the troop year, only the Leadership Application (Form 505) need be filled out. This is to be forwarded to Local Headquarters for action by the Organization Committee.

D—ADDITIONAL ENROLLMENTS

Additions to the Scout enrollment may be made by the Scoutmaster at any time during the year. In such cases the registration is for the balance of the troop year and the fee is proportioned.

Use form 515 whether for one or more Scouts.

Forward papers with requisite fees to Local Headquarters in Norfolk.

E—REREGISTRATION

Reregistration of old troops shall follow the same procedure as new troops except:

- 1—Report of years work to governing body by Troop Committee.
- 2—Action by institution on continuance of troop.
- 3—Reappointment of Troop Committee.
- 4—Fill out Charter Application and Annual Report to National Council.
- 5—Papers in duplicate to be in Headquarters in time for the meeting of the Organization Committee in the month in which registration expires.

Conclusion

While the growing policy of the present is to put the responsibility for leadership directly up to the institution and its troop committee—this in no sense absolves the Scout Executive and his organization and leadership committees from an active part therein.

CHAPTER VI

THE TRAINING PROGRAM OF THE LOCAL COUNCIL

by Lorne W. Barclay—Director Dept. Education, National Council

The key which unlocks the chest of your community's boyhood is the training program of the local councils. There are men in every community who are potential leaders of boys, but the mysteries of boy life must be unlocked for them so that direction in action and life may be given. The training program will furnish the inspiration and methods for the intensive growth of Scouting. The recruiting of institutions, troop committees, scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters will mean nothing to the future of the community's boyhood without a thorough-going, well planned and enthusiastically administered program of training. The technical aspects of the Scout Program as well as the general lack of understanding and appreciation of the problems of youth on the part of the grown ups make necessary, even imperative, their training in leadership.

The constitution and by-laws of the local council present the responsibilities of the training and leadership committee—see pages 90, 91. The proper functioning of this committee must occupy much of the scout executive's attention. No small part of his own training will be evidenced by his success in this department of his work. The training program should have as its objective training of men to lead boys, and boys to lead boys and train the community to serve its youth. Such a program must contemplate the instruction of all who are to serve as leaders in the local work especially scoutmasters and patrol leaders.

Training Troop Committeemen

The initial training of the troop committeemen comes through personal contact between the executive or his representative and the committeemen, either as individuals or in a group, when the troop is inaugurated or when a new committee is appointed. The executive can do well to give time to educating the officers and the general membership of the institution using the program. The proper understanding on the part of the local institution of their responsibility in the way of leadership and support is fundamental and essential. The lack of permanency in many troops is due to the lack of understanding on the part of the institution of its responsibility in the initiation of the work. It is, therefore, important that the representatives of the institution in the form of the troop committeemen should be thoroughly conversant with all their responsibilities not only to the scout movement but to the institution itself as well as to the group of boys.

After the troop committeemen have had their initial training relative to their duties, a series of two or three conferences of committeemen in general may be profitably held. The main purposes of such a conference are to impart further knowledge and give inspiration to the troop committeemen in carrying forward the work. The element of inspiration is most important because the continuation and development of the work depends upon the interest of the institution and its troop committee and stimulation is therefore valuable in keeping them active in their responsibility. In local communities where troop committeemen are assigned to specific duties, such as are suggested in the HANDBOOK FOR SCOUTMASTERS, pages 196-201, conferences can be held for those assigned to the same tasks throughout the community. The frequency and the program of these sessions should be determined at the discretion of the local council training committee. The offering of a training course for committeemen has been well worked out by the El Paso, Texas, Council—Mr. G. O.

Everman, Scout Executive. The following is the plan of the course:

Plan of Course

One (1) evening each week for a period of five (5) weeks.

Instructors

The Training Committee, Scout Commissioner, Deputy Commissioners and the Scout Executive.

Instructor.

To cover all phases of boys' work especially that of a troop committee, collective and individual work, each session to take up one or more subjects under the following headings: functions of the committee collective or united individual work.

The training of scoutmasters and assistants is the biggest item in the local council's training program. Many methods have been devised to help meet the need for training such as the plan suggested in the SCOUTMASTERS' HANDBOOK on Training by Apprenticeship. Then there is the method of the training school and the scoutmasters' round table. But even with the many efforts along this line, the training of the volunteers is still a problem. How during their leisure time, to train volunteer workers who already are crowded with their own regular duties is a problem which challenges the best thought and educational effort.

Busy men—persuaded to give some of their leisure time because of their interest in meeting boy needs—doing a task so exacting as to really require of them careful study and preparation—standards having to compete with business, home, recreation, fatigue, inertia—the most casual thought reveals that maintenance of interest will clearly call for the most attractive methods. Dr. H. W. Hurt makes the following pertinent and significant suggestions.

"It seems clear that insofar as possible the training should:

- a) Conserve the scoutmaster's time. Meetings should Be Brief.
- b) Partake of the atmosphere of recreation. Some entertainment should always be provided.
- c) Should be suited to the need and speed of the individual.
- d) As much as possible be done through channels other than mass meetings (though a regular social and conference session is doubtless valuable); e. g. correspondence—visitations—personal conferences—home reading, etc.
- e) It is unsound to put new men and old, year after year, through the "same course of intellectual sprouts." Some method of grading and division must be introduced.
- f) The older men should be utilized to train the newer, with suitable recognitions to both. Training Course Diplomas are sound policy.
- g) The genius and versatility of the local executive will be taxed to study his men and find the kind of training they most need.
- h) In group sessions the Conference or discussion method—the pooling of experience, is very valuable. Indeed an executive will find it worth while in morale and instruction value to collect such methods, mimeograph or print them and distribute them from time to time to his Scoutmasters.
- i) If the material to be "gotten over" to the Scoutmaster is outlined quite fully, mimeographed and given to the man, you have made possible a recurrent appeal to the eye as well as the one appeal to his ear.
- j) The correspondence Course material developed by the National Staff, or similar material, may be used by the Executive or his Director of training, to reach scoutmasters otherwise inaccessible.
- k) The Local Council should supply the scoutmaster with needed literature.

Analysis of the Scoutmaster Job

Whatever the method of instruction or training or preparation—what are the things that need to be "gotten over" to him?

This can be best approached by analyzing out his duties and needed qualities which are fixed by the nature of his work.

Clearly there are three divisions of scoutmaster need:

- (1) Things he must BE
- (2) Things he must KNOW
- (3) Things he must DO and certainly this is the order of their importance.

The Scoutmaster What he must BE "Physically strong, Mentally awake, Morally straight."	How secured BY	IN	TRAINING COURSE
1) Man of Character 2) " " Clean Habits 3) Good Loyal Citizen 4) Man of at least average intelligence 5) Interested in Boys; Enjoy their association 6) Man of Personality 7) Making good in some work 8) Man with Sense of Humor 9) Teachable (openminded; Teamplay)	Selection Selection Selection Selection Selection & Experience Selection Selection Selection & Experience	(Troop Committees must be made to select right kind of men. "Making men over" after they come in is as unpromising in scouting as it has been found generally in matrimony. Better pick the right kind first even if it means delay.)	INSPIRATION (Every course should refresh the springs of spiritual vision. Mere technique is inadequate. Lofty motive must be afforded.)
WHAT HE MUST KNOW	Instruction " " " " " " " "	Scout Literature " " " " " " " "	Self-Instruction or Special Courses Boys' Handbook Boy Psychology Scoutmasters' Handbook Various Outdoor Books, etc. Special Practice (Doing It) Trips, etc.
THINGS HE MUST DO	Ideals Instruction Instruction in How or Delegation Instruction in How or Delegation Physical, Mental, Moral Activity Instruction Study and Action Practical	Inspirational Literature Scout Literature " Participation Doing right things Scout Literature Community Life	Training Must Involve Actual Doing of the things he is to do later as well as the "HOW"

What should be in his Training Course?

A careful study of this analysis reveals three things which should be in Scoutmaster Training Courses:

1. Inspiration, things which minister to his spiritual life or personal efficiency, aimed to sustain, elevate and enrich "What he is" and help him keep up his "steam" and vision.
2. Knowledge, of the program and of boy nature and of methods. This may come from self-instruction or courses of training, or both.
3. Actual Doing as a part of training as well as the actual "How to do;" programs should be planned etc. This may profitably be supplemented by allowing the new man to briefly assist a strong experienced man, thus letting him actually do or lead.

In the light of the foregoing analysis, the following list of training items have been analyzed out of the program. However, preliminary to the actual training process, the council probably should present the scoutmaster with the Handbook and other needed literature. Effective scoutmastership then will need the following, probably in the order presented:

1. Inspirational things to touch the man's spiritual life and to enhance morale through vision. "A vision of personal obligation."
2. The objectives, the policies, the relationships of scouting including seascouting. How to present and use the Oath & Law and the "Good Turn."
3. How to plan meetings, activities, hikes, etc., including the actual "class-room" (or individual) building of sample programs, these then to be evaluated.
4. Boy nature and Interests. Boy leaders, securing and training them.
5. How to "teach" (or better—how to give boys a chance to do and thus to learn) the various scoutcrafts.

The following items are included in the list of the things scouts learn to do:

Knots,
 First Aid (1. Elementary, 2. More Advanced), Signaling (1. Elementary, 2. More Advanced), Tracking,
 Scout's Pace,
 Use of Knife or hatchet and Axe,
 Fire Building,
 Cooking (1. Elementary, 2. More Advanced),
 Thrift, 14 mile hike,
 Compass, Map making,
 Swimming, Judging, Nature.

These may probably best be included as an activities part of the training session and thus scattered through the entire training period. It is fundamental, however, not to submit the experienced men to the same routine as the inexperienced.

There are however, certain other things best taught the new scoutmaster by doing

- a. Drill—foot movements, simple commands and formation for easy marching of boys through crowded streets or on parade.
- b. Camping, technique and experience.
- c. Various handicrafts—though the scoutmaster may delegate these to men expert therein.
- d. The making of a system of records.

In many councils it has been found effective to organize the new men into patrols under the leadership of more experienced men and to enable them to at once learn to do and observe how it is being taught by actually going through the various program elements. Certainly a capital scheme, if, the executive can get his men to do it.

The new Scoutmaster's Handbook contains considerable material of the alternative methods sort and a very suggestive analysis of methods of instruction which are useful in keeping scout instruction as remote as possible from the formal school methods.

6. Tests and Promotions, Court of Honor, Merit Badges and Vocations, are matters of such vital import that they are worthy of place in the training scheme. Formal examinations can kill boy interest; real tests, however, frequently competitive—always doing rather than talking or writing words, and with suitable recognitions for the boy—can give vigor to interest.

It is imperative, however, to be again mindful of the fact that experienced men cannot safely be "put through" the same training as new men time and again: they must either be used to train others or be separated from the inexperienced men for training. In the periodic conference and discussion, however, their contribution will be the chief source of experience and should be used and recognized as such."

Hold Interest

The scout executive must ever hold before him the fundamental necessity in all his training work to hold the interest of his men. Many devices have been developed to this end such as the announcement that a "big surprise" will be had at the next meeting such as getting a box of apples and passing them around as "eats," or a fake boxing contest will add to the enjoyment. Use your community song master for one or two of the surprises. He will be glad to cooperate. Many scout executives have found that the possibility of an examination at the end of the course where brain can be matched against brain will add considerable interest to the course. Contests can be arranged that will add much to the interest of the course. Nothing should be allowed to drag. Everything should go off with a snap. The opening session of a course must be crammed full of human and interest gripping activity. Otherwise many of the men who will come in to look in on the course the first evening will not continue.

Faculty

The Training Committee and the scout executive in organizing the course must give careful thought to the selection of a faculty. It is important that the best qualified men be secured. Educational authorities in your locality or in neighboring localities can be secured. State universities or other institutions of higher learning can possibly supply instructors. Care must be exercised with these special educators to be sure that they have the Scouting point of view and that their talks are related to the type of training which you are attempting to provide. Executives from neighboring cities can also be used. Local expert scoutmasters and local leaders in various fields will contribute most in the developing of the faculty for training.

National Certificates

The Department of Education of the National Council since August 1919 has been issuing certificates to local councils and schools and colleges conducting courses which meet with a set of minimum requirements which were established at that time. These minimum requirements were devised only for an elementary course in Scouting. Up to date it has not seemed practical to establish standards for advanced courses in Scouting. Certificates will be issued by the National Council through the Department of Education to all men recommended by local councils as having satisfactorily completed training courses which have been previously approved by the Department of Education. The following minimum requirements were adopted by the Committee on Education of the National Council.

1. A course to be approved by the Department of Education should consist of a minimum of sixteen hours of training work, preferably eight sessions of two hours each.

2. At least one session of each course should be in the out-of-doors and be devoted to practice work.
3. At least 50 per cent of the course should consist of other than talks and lectures. The outline submitted for approval should show evidence of the intention to devote much time to practical work.
4. The course should include an exposition of the principles and objectives of Scouting as well as its educational principles.
5. Certificates are to be issued upon the recommendation of the group giving the course, but it is expected that all who are recommended will have attended at least 75 per cent of the sessions. A charge of 25 cents is made for each certificate.

NEWARK, N. J. TRAINING POLICY

This System of Training aims to cover every phase of Scouting which in any way results in a more thorough understanding of the Scout Program.

The plan involves training under two distinct heads, viz: The Executive Staff, and the Training Department.

THE EXECUTIVE STAFF*Specific Details:*1. Troop instruction by the Field Staff.

This involves training in troop management and routine, by the commissioners and the field executives. The Commissioner's Staff consists of the scout commissioner, a deputy and his assistants for each district, and special deputies at large. Following is the plan: A field executive is to be present with every new troop during its first two meetings after registering, and a deputy commissioner, or an assistant, or an Aide is to be present during the next two meetings. The object of this plan is to teach, at the start, the proper method of conducting meetings, and of instructing. Occasionally, joint inspections are to be held by the whole Commissioner's Staff for the purpose of standardization.

2. Bulletins.*3. Visits to old troops by new leaders.*4. Training Troop.

The training troop is a group of leaders or prospective leaders registered and meeting as scouts under the direction of a scoutmaster who is expert in the fundamentals of Scouting standards which the council aims to reach.

5. Pathfinders of the Golden Trail.

This group is fundamentally an "older boy" group. It functions at best in camp because its meetings are ceremonial in nature, involving Indian terms and ceremonies. Only the most trustworthy scouts who represent excellent material for field work are admitted into its membership.

6. Troop Committee Instructions.

This involves training troop committeemen to function according to the plan adopted by the Local Council. The instructors are members of the Organization Committee.

7. Troop Committee Bulletins.

These are bulletins issued for the purpose of teaching troop committeemen how to function at their best.

8. Training Camp and Mass Hikes.

This involves lone troop camps, week-end camps, summer and winter camps, and hikes held at frequent intervals for new troops. The plan is to hold a hike under the leadership of an expert for every three new troops.

Use Scoutmasters' Handbook in Course

With the publication of the SCOUTMASTERS' HANDBOOK has come a great help to the development of training programs for scout leaders. The Handbook should be the text book of the course and every encouragement should be given to the study of the Handbook for Scoutmasters while the course is going on. This has been well worked out by the Wichita, Kans., Council as seen in their course.

Schedule

Tuesday, October 28th Meeting No. 1
SCOUTING.

Its Objectives, Accomplishments and Possibilities.

THE JOB OF THE SCOUTMASTER.

Scout Executive B. B. Dawson. First Three Chapters of S. M. Handbook.

Saturday, October 30th Meeting No. 2
HIKES AND MEETINGS.

The kinds of hikes, their purpose and aims as well as the general plans for meetings and suggested programs and a method of making up such programs will be considered here.

Scoutmasters F. C. Williams, G. M. Snavely, Frank Isely, A. E. Franz and the Scout Executive.

Chapter IV of the Scoutmasters' Handbook should be studied in connection with this meeting.

Saturday, November 6th Meeting No. 3
SCOUT-CRAFT.

Elementary and advanced Scoutcraft will be taken up and discussed with regard to the different ranks of Scouting and the requirements thereof.

Nine methods of instruction suggested in the Handbook will be enlarged upon here in a theoretical way and there will be suggested what might be called Interest Material to help the Scoutmaster in putting the program over.

Scout Executive Dawson, Scoutmasters Isely, Snavely, Williams and Franz.

Chapter V of the Scoutmasters' Handbook.

Saturday, November 13th Meeting No. 4
SCOUTMASTERS' HIKE.

Under direction of the Scout Executive an afternoon and evening will be spent in the open and around the campfire. In order to give all a voice in the matter the final arrangements as to time and place will be made at the second and third meeting of the series. A practical demonstration of the methods learned in meeting No. 4 and some practical work in fire building, axe, knife and hatchet, cooking, etc., will fill the afternoon and the meeting around the campfire will be given over to a round table on problems of the Scoutmaster. Suggestions for these topics will be in order at the first three meetings and they will be announced at the close of the third meeting along with the announcement of the Hike.

Saturday, November 20th Meeting No. 5
CLASS REQUIREMENTS.

A study of Chapter VI of the Scoutmaster's Handbook will give a very good idea as to the nature of this meeting. An effort will be made to clearly define those things in the requirements which are not clear to some. Methods of giving the examinations especially will be considered here.

Scoutmasters Franz, Isely, Snavely, Williams and the Scout Executive.

Saturday, November 27th Meeting No. 6
THE SCOUT TROOP AND PATROL.

This will no doubt be one of the most important of all the meetings as it will get right next to those problems which are so large to the average Scoutmaster.

The matter of Membership, Discipline, Grouping, Business, Routine, and others are of vital interest to every Scoutmaster, Assistant, or Troop Committeeman. A number of special features for holding the interest of the older boy will also be suggested for discussion.

Scoutmasters Snavely, Franz, Williams, Scout Executive Dawson, and Scoutmaster Isely.

Chapter number VII of the Scoutmasters' Handbook.

Saturday, December 4th Meeting No. 7
SCOUTING AND THE COMMUNITY.

The Home, the Church, the School, State and Civic institutions, all go to make up the community and to all of these Scouting is a supplementary movement. The matter of Good Turns, Individual, Troop and Civic, as well as emergency service of various kinds all have a place and Chapter VIII of the Handbook for Scoutmasters considers this side of the matter and on this the discussions will be based.

Scout Executive Dawson, Scoutmasters Snavely, Williams, Isely and Franz.

Saturday, December 11th Meeting No. 8
BOYS.

This meeting will be based principally on Chapters X and XII of the Scoutmasters' Handbook, second part. The meeting will be conducted by A. K. Rak, Professor of Psychology at Friends University. Professor Rak's interest in, and study of boys from a psychological view is one of the most interesting and very profitable meetings. We only regret that he has to be limited to one meeting for this subject.

Prof. A. K. Rak, Friends University (Head of Department of Education Professor of Psychology).

Saturday, December 18th Meeting No. 9
THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS SIGNIFICANCE OF SCOUTING.

We know of no more capable man for this above topic than the one who has accepted it. Dr. Ross W. Sanderson is the Executive Secretary of the Wichita Federation of Churches and he has been asked to speak very frankly as to what the church expects of a Boy Scout Troop. He is in a position to speak for all denominations and having been a Scoutmaster as familiar with the attitude of the National Headquarters as expressed in Article III, Section 1 of the National Council Constitution.

THE SCOUTMASTER AND HIS LIFE WORK.

The Scoutmaster who is awake to an opportunity plays a greater part than he supposes in the vocational selection of his Scouts. A little care and thought given by the side of his work will result in great good. Chapter XI gives some definite suggestions in regard to this matter and these will be presented to the Scoutmasters by Mr. L. W. Brooks, Principal, Wichita High School.

Short Training Camps

The Charlotte, N. C., and Chattanooga, Tenn., Councils have found the short concentrated scoutcamp training course very effective. It is found a problem to secure the attendance of men at a scoutmasters' course running a period of weeks where they must give an evening a week to the course and an evening a week to their troops. Executives are finding the course such as that of Charlotte, N. C. (see below) valuable in helping in their problem of training. Chattanooga, Tenn., has operated courses of this kind twice on Saturday and Sunday.

SCOUT MASTERS—TROOP COMMITTEEMEN.

This training course is for your instruction and for the purpose of showing you, by doing, the things you teach your scouts. The big outdoors calls for men, real live men, who can swim, and live in the open. But can you do these things and get real enjoyment from the experience? No, this requires knowledge of the woods and streams, how to build cooking fires, then be able to cook after getting it started, what woods to cook with, these and many other valuable hints will be given in this course. Tree study under the direction of an authority on trees and shrubs, birds, by a nature lover and one who has made a study of their habits, etc.; first aid to the injured and camp surgery by our Chief Scout Surgeon. How to select a camp site for the night, week end or permanent. Don't miss these instructions, and the last one on the program—Fun—come and see. Fee for Scoutmasters and Committeemen will be car fare to and from Beatty Station on P & N., 32 cents each way.

GOOD NIGHT?

The summer camp furnishes a superb opportunity for training in leadership. 84 council camps report for 1920 leadership training of adults as a major activity. Scout camps now look upon their function as training camps in leadership—men as well as boys. If it is not practical to get the scoutmasters, assistants and troop committeemen together for a week, they can be given much help by a series of evening meetings after working hours or week ends or by a series of Saturday meetings. No camping program is complete without a program of training of adult leadership.

The Forestry Department of the University of Minnesota at Lake Itasca and the Agricultural Department of Pennsylvania State University have pointed the way in showing how the state university can be utilized in training leadership during the summer months in camp. The Utah Agricultural College made an excellent contribution in its short course of last winter in which it drew men from various parts of Utah and with the local scout authorities offered an excellent course of training over a period of two weeks. The willingness on the part of educational authorities to assist the training of leadership today is most encouraging and all their facilities should be taken advantage of by every local council.

Extension Department of Universities Give Help

Good results are being gotten by some councils in cooperating with the Extension Department of universities. The Youngstown, Ohio, Council has for two years cooperated with the Extension Department of the University of Pittsburgh in carrying forward its leadership training course. The University of Nebraska assisted by the Lincoln, Nebr., Council this year carried through at Lincoln the following course:

Scoutmasters' Training Course conducted by the Teachers College, University of Nebraska, Extension Department in Cooperation with the Boy Scouts of America, Lincoln Council.

Opportunity of an Executive in a College Town

With the growth of the Scout Movement has come a magnificent appreciation of its value by the faculties of our colleges, universities, normal schools and theological seminaries. At the present time successful courses are operated in many universities, colleges, normal schools, and theological seminaries. Teachers' College, Columbia University, has two members of the staff giving leadership to courses for scoutleaders.

This development offers the scout executive in a college town a remarkable opportunity for service not only to the students of the college but to the boys of his own community. The college town scout executive is in a strategic position to interest the college authorities in adding to their curriculum either in the Department of Physical Education or in the School of Education a scoutleaders' course. These courses will minister not only to the students in the institutions, but to the leaders in the town.

Having the course under the auspices of the college or university, adds dignity and influence to it. It also makes available to the council the services of many men connected with the college who may contribute much to the development of the scout work with boys. In many cases, the scout executives, for the present at least, have to give rather intimate leadership to the college instructors until they have begun to think of this work with boys in terms of Scouting. Every faculty has many practical men who would be interested in doing work of this kind. In but few cases will the executive find any difficulty in securing the active co-operation of the college or university in introducing these courses. The Department of Education will be glad to assist in working out of the details after the initial co-operation is established.

This plan will give an opportunity for the local council to enlist many students and members of the faculty as assistants or instructors. Our suggestion, however, is that the students be put in as assistants rather than as scoutmasters because of the fact that they are only at school a few months of the year and when their courses are finished most of them move away entirely.

In each college town there is also a great opportunity for the scout executive to bring together all students in the college who are scouts or who have been scouts and establish within the college itself a scout unit of men who are interested in boys and in Scouting. Two or three meetings a year might be held of these men to continue and maintain their interest in the movement. From this source much assistance can be secured. In Yale University, where this plan has been tried out by the New Haven Council, there has been secured very substantial assistance from the students and at the same time there has been maintained within the student himself a wholesome interest in Scouting so that when he graduates he will go back to his own community with a continued interest in the movement and prepared to render service to boyhood there.

DENVER'S PLAN

The Denver Council has developed a unique plan of training scoutleaders in that their course practically continues throughout the year and although a man may be unable to take certain session of the course, he can get those sessions in a later course. This plan seems to work well. Denver Council has prepared a syllabus which has been helpful. Up to date it has not seemed advisable to publish such a national syllabus because of the feeling of many that we are still in the experimental stage in training courses and a national syllabus would have a tendency to stratify methods throughout the country. There should be the widest activity in the way of experiments with the development of methods of training volunteer leaders. The Denver Council has made a real contribution, through its syllabus and the development of its co-operative work with Denver University. It has a commencement program and publishes a list of their graduates.

Rural Training

The Training Committee of the local council has a much simpler problem in the city than in the rural community. Distance and the difficulty of getting men together in rural districts adds very much to the work of the scout executive whose responsibilities take him into the rural communities. The plan which seems most feasible is that of two or three conferences of scout leaders in various parts of the rural community through the year. This of course should be supplemented from the executives' office by helps based upon the Scoutmasters' Handbook which can be sent through the mail. If a training school is attempted covering a series of sessions, it will be necessary for the executive to realize that an attendance of four or five men will be very much worth while. The plan of the Monmouth County Council in having an executive officer remain for some time in a given locality and thereby devote considerable time to personal instruction is getting results. (See page 202.) Many of the suggestions here given for the work of the Training Committee will have to be adjusted and administered in another manner for the rural community. Nevertheless, many of the fundamental principles here stated will be of great assistance in the development of the training program in small communities.

The correspondence course being developed by the Department of Education will be very valuable as a help in the training program in the rural communities. This correspondence course also can be used to advantage by local councils but it should not displace the regular training school. Fuller information of the course can be supplied by the Department of Education of the National Council.

Leaders' Clubs

In the early days of the movement and even yet, much valuable training work has been done through the Scoutmasters' Association or the Leaders' Club, as it is sometimes called now. Great value will accrue from the information and inspiration received by scoutmasters one from another through the monthly meetings. It is an opportunity for the interchange of successful methods and for conferences on troop and boy problems with other scoutmasters. These round table meetings from the standpoint of training are very important. The training function, therefore, of the leaders' group should always be kept before the scout executive as a fundamental objective in his training program. Scoutmasters not only need the help in knowing how to carry on the work with the boys, but they need the stimulation which can come through such work to the carrying forward of Scouting with boys.

SCOUT EXECUTIVES IN TRAINING.

Adopt Training Program and Policy

The Committee on Leadership and Training of the local council will have the problem to meet of adopting a policy as to the training of boys. Scouting is a system of training in leadership. There is great danger, however, of the methods of the school room coming into the scout movement or of the executives and their training committee devoting time to training boys in their first and second class work rather than the training of scoutmasters and leaders in the development of this work. There has been some question as to the place of the patrol leaders training school in the scout movement. It is generally accepted that the patrol leaders' school would operate with the approval of the scoutmasters as a valuable assistance in the general program of training leadership in the local community.

Patrol Leaders' Training

Several scout executives' conferences have considered the patrol leader training program and a number of cities have adopted the policy of supplementing the scoutmaster's own work in this direction (for after all, the real responsibility in this matter is the scoutmaster's) with a definitely planned patrol leaders' training course. On the basis of the experience of these cities together with the considered opinion of several prominent scout men to whom the question has been submitted, the following suggestions are offered to local councils in the training of patrol leaders.

The purpose of the course is "to give the patrol leaders something of the art of their job and a little of its science." Such a course should seek to fix "a definite minimum standard for the position of patrol leader, so that the dignity and respect of the rank may be maintained."

Opinions differ as to what boys should receive this training. Perhaps most scout officials would be inclined to limit the registration to Senior Patrol Leaders, Patrol Leaders and Assistant Patrol Leaders, but there is a considerable group who believe that as many more boys as have the capacity to receive the training should be given the opportunity of benefiting by it. In Scouting we must recognize the existence of "plural leadership" in almost every group, but this may perhaps be divided into "organization leadership"—the job of the real patrol leader—and "activity leadership." The leader of the latter type may perhaps be better dealt with in separate training classes or by individual conferences. Care should be taken, however, to limit the number to a group which will not become unwieldy.

A short six or seven week course with one session per week will probably be found the most effective. Two hours will be long enough for any session, but the program should be intensive and full of action from the "fall in" to the "dismiss."

A good suggestion is to divide the class session into three periods, the first to be devoted to a discussion of general fundamentals stimulated by somebody who can use the combination talk and quiz method to best advantage. A blackboard is another good device for holding interest here. In the second period, the groups will divide into sectional conferences for Senior Patrol Leaders, Patrol Leaders, Assistant Patrol Leaders and, if others have been admitted, a special section for them. Each section will have a program of its own devoted to the particular interests of its members. For the last period the entire class will be consolidated for practical scout work, demonstrations, games and competitions. These should be conducted, not only with a view to instructing the members of the class or giving them a good time, but with the idea of showing them how they themselves can use such activities with their own patrols and troops.

The sessions should be opened and closed with some approved scout ceremony, and run on schedule time from beginning to end.

"A definite course may be provided taking up the qualities, problems and methods of leadership together with some of the technique of Scoutcraft."

If the class period plan suggested above is used the following subjects will have special value for the first period:

Scout Courtesy.
Attendance.
Relationship.
Leadership.
Programs.
Discipline.

For the sectional conferences of the second period the following subjects are suggested:

Studying Each Scout.
Handling a Meeting.
Handling Tests.
Getting "Good Turns" Done.
Arranging Special Features.
Scout Ceremonies.
Making Scout Work Attractive.
Putting Out-door Stuff Across.
Stimulating Advancement.
Getting "Team Work."
Using Activity Leaders.
Mobilization.
Esprit de Corps.
"Stars," "Grouches," "Nuts," etc.

For the third period arrange to have practical instruction in:

Advanced First Aid.
Advanced Knots and Rope Work.
Signaling Methods.
Nature Study.
Camp Fires and Cookery.
Map Making and Reading.
Use of the Compass.
Laying and Following a Trail.

and have practical talks on such subjects as:

Camping and Hiking.
Fire Prevention.
Safety First.

and play "games with a purpose."

Getting Started

First of all, "sell" the scheme to the Scoutmasters. When they have been committed to it, give them a real part in planning the course, in selecting the various instructors, and in actually putting it across. Make them realize that they will be welcome to sit in at any or all the sessions of the Patrol Leaders' Class, but when they do come avoid the possibility of them turning the classes into Scoutmasters' meetings instead of meetings of the Patrol Leaders. If given an opportunity to aid in initiating the Patrol Leaders' Class, the Scoutmaster will prove the best ally of those entrusted with putting it across.

For instructors and leaders use experienced Scoutmasters, outside experts such as naturalists, doctors, firemen, policemen, domestic science teachers, engineers, etc., and patrol leaders who know how.

Plan to hold the meetings at times which will cause the least interference with regular troop plans and engagements.

Make some of the meetings out-door meetings.

Avoid monotony. Each program should be so full of interest that the boys will not even think of staying away from the next.

The above suggestions are based on the experience of others. Data now available are meager although more local councils are trying out the scheme of training patrol leaders. Many councils have found patrol leaders conferences stimulating and valuable in helping the scoutmasters in the local troop.

The Department of Education is anxious to receive these programs as well as a report on their operation after they have been thoroughly tried out so that we may eventually develop a suggestive program which will be of help to the whole field.

EXPERIENCES OF OTHER COUNCILS

Los Angeles, Cal.

"We are formulating plans for launching permanent schools for training leaders to be called "SCHOOL OF THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF SCOUTING." Students may enter in time and graduate as soon as course is finished. Will embrace training of Patrol Leaders, Scoutmasters, Troop Committeemen. Local council will conduct. We do not believe in farming this phase of the job to a local university or any other educational institution. This conclusion has been reached in a measure on basis, and the testimony of educators (spread broadcast by National Headquarters) to wit, in substance that the content and arrangement of the program of Scouting, and the Philosophy of education and pedagogy involved, are far ahead of the present thing found in orthodox education and the average institution of learning. Still we shall draw upon local institutions and learning, we plan to "gear" our school more intimately to Scouting than seems possible through any plan of subordination to the traditional procedure of the average school or college."

Oshkosh, Wis.

"Ran a Scoutmasters' Training Course at the State Normal School where students get college credits for work. Used the Troop Committees to help select men. Last year's course ran from February to June."

Waukegan, Ill.

"We tried the novel experiment of running the scoutmasters' and patrol leaders' school under the same direction for the first year. Some Scout Executives have denounced this plan as impossible. That however, is due to the fact that they did not understand our system of working it. We probably would not do it a second year, but for the first year, it was the only thing that could be done, as we could not provide leadership for two schools.

This combination of schools was provided with 25 instructors and the program divided into four parts, first the inspirational talks which were given to the entire school; second the round table discussions, in which the scoutmasters, patrol leaders and scribes were separated into various rooms; the third, the practical scouting work, in which men and boys alike were put through knot tying, first aid, signaling, etc., under the same instructors; and fourth, the activities program, which would not have been nearly the success it was without the boys, as we all know men do not play as spontaneously as boys do unless they have the rejuvenating spirit of the boys in the game. The boys put pep and spirit into the meeting and the men give it dignity.

They each had their separate discussions and they had the practical experience of dealing with an actual group of boys. The subject material covered in the 8 week course, covered so wide a field that it was necessary to devise some scheme whereby the program could be carried out on schedule and at the same time give the students a chance to assimilate the ideas presented, which required time.

This is the most unique feature of our plan. To do this, we had every instructor prepare notes on the material to be presented. These notes were mimeographed and furnished to every student together with a folder in which to bind them. Most instructors were limited to 15 minutes for talks, or half an hour for demonstrations or activity.

The notes system has the following advantages. It assured us that the instructor had definitely prepared his material, so as to avoid wasting any of his 15 minutes by a rambling talk, or hesitation. In case the subject was not completed in the allotted time, the essential points were already in the hands of the student, so that little was lost, and the student has the opportunity of giving the subject more leisurely thought afterward, by use of the outline.

174 different students attended this school. Of this number 65 were adult leaders and 109 boy leaders. The average attendance was 83 with the maximum of 132. 28 of the total number had a perfect record of attendance, while 82 were present 5 or more times."

"A training course following along the lines as that suggested by the Columbia University. Six lectures or rather meetings. Executive has a demonstration troop and meetings are actually held with the boys rather than talked about by the men. First the demonstration meeting—then questions and suggestions in regard to the program just completed. The training is largely for new scoutmasters and they are notified by mail or by phone. For the older scoutmasters we have the Scoutmasters' Association which meets once each month and takes up the various problems and also makes use of the demonstration troop, which enables the executive to place before the Scoutmasters his ideas as to the proper way to conduct the meetings, play new games and teach the various branches of the work. Attendance runs high among the new men in training and about 50% of the older men. To secure attendance of the older men, one scout is appointed from each troop to act as messenger and call each week at the central office for mail for his troop. There is a mobiliza-

The greatest opportunity and responsibility of the scout executive is that of training. In fact, Scouting itself is a system of training of which the training of adult leadership is a very important part. The scout executive then must look upon himself as an educator in every sense of the word and in his own mind he should keep before him constantly the educational approach and attack on his problems. This of course means that in the training of himself he must continually keep up his own program of training. For his own efficiency, capacity and personality will go far to giving the educational leadership, stimulation and inspiration necessary for the carrying forward of the Scouting program in the lives of the boys of his community.

CHAPTER VII

LOCAL AND NATIONAL RELATIONSHIPS

Team Play

Scouting is not a one man individualistic game—it is a community project. Indeed the “quarter-back” who is a heady general passes the ball to someone else to carry and then helps him carry it. The fundamental social philosophy underlying Scouting is that Scouting is done by the community! Of course the actual activities are done by the boys but the community is the enabling agency. The executive, who in lone style puts over a big scouting program himself almost singlehanded is really doing his community a grave injustice. Where will they be when he is gone? They will have neither organization nor experience nor momentum! Forms of social service to be permanent must be rooted in the permanent things of community life. Individuals are not permanent.

Team play means further that the Scout Executive shall play the game squarely with all the local agencies of community life. Live and let live—help and perchance ultimately be helped. Team play with churches, homes, schools, other boy’s work agencies—a readiness to cooperate all along the line is good scouting. It is seeking “to be helpful to other people at all times.”

Morale

Morale is the main spring of volunteer service. It must be created through warm, unselfish human helpfulness and loyal service—it can be maintained only on the same lofty level.

The executive who cannot maintain morale in his team-play with his volunteer leaders—whose training helper and coach he is—cannot meet the basic demands of the profession. Self-control is the key to power; unselfishness releases good will; consideration and appreciation create affection.

162 Local and National Relationships

Team Play Throughout the Nation

Scouting seeks to help boys grow into right-charactered citizenship—seeks to make boys loyal, strong, useful Americans. Not citizens of New York nor of New Orleans nor of Spokane, but citizens of the United States of America. Nationally, scouting is the summation of its local units. Its Federal Charter authorized a certain type of boy-manhood under the title scout. No executive has the right to accept a commission from the Boy Scouts of America and fall short of these national obligations. He has no right to tangentially diverge as long as he bears the Scout label. If he must run an entirely different and individual program not “gearing” nationally with others, then common honesty—the pure food and drug act—would demand that he change his label.

Team-play nationally, to give other boys the benefits of his experience and his ready cooperation in all forward efforts for American boyhood is a minimum prerequisite which the National Council and the American public have a perfect right to demand of every commissioned executive.

Registration: Team-Play With Whom?

If all members of this great scout team are to play together, if there is to be effective team play, it is evident that each must qualify as part of the movement and know what others have similarly qualified. This is brought about through the system of registration whereby every boy and man on the team is recorded, and his position designated. Indeed registration is formally filing credentials showing that one has met the requirements and is worthy to bear the name of “scout.”

Of course what applies to the Scout Executive applies equally to the scoutmaster and to the scout. As long as they bear the name “Scout,” they should play the game according to the standards fixed through Federal Charter and be protected therein. The necessity for care in avoiding counterfeiting and commercializing of Scouting is made clear by the fact that not a week passes but that some such sly effort is attempted. Then too, registration fixes exactly one's place and duty on "the team." Therefore it is important that every boy and every man, every troop and every local council register, and register promptly, whenever registration becomes due. Otherwise the whole team is slowed up and endangered.

And being a team, there are coaches and captains who must know the points of strength and weakness in the different players in order to strengthen them in their weak points, and in order to weld all together into the most efficient team. And so they must have the facts, as each player must also have the facts about himself, to know himself. Therefore, it is that registration involves not a mere listing of names, but an honest studying out and frank presentation of the facts about each one's play. And so it is that facts in some detail, are needed on the troop's registration, and yet more detailed facts on the council's registration so that results may be measured. And all facts called for should be scrupulously given. Only thus can the player really know and help himself, or the coaches know and help the player and the team, or the public recognize and approve the fact that the Boy Scouts of America are meeting the conditions and standards which Federal Charter entails.

The Scout Commissioner

What should be the relations between the Scout Commissioner, the ranking volunteer leader and the Scout Executive, the ranking professional leader? Team-play! Not littleness or self-preferment but team-play! Probably more trouble results from haziness as to their real functions than any other one cause other than personal antipathies. In that council where every member is charted for a specific task responsible to this committee and so on—there will be minimal overlapping and friction. Furthermore if the spirit of team-play locally and nationally is the vogue, and if the thoughts of all are centered on service to and welfare of boyhood, instead of "where do 'I' sit" there will be little trouble. The remarks of Chief Scout Executive James E. West (at the First National Conference) bearing on the problem of Commissioner and Executive are suggestive:

"It is most fitting that the ranking uniformed officer in formations of Court of Honor work should be a volunteer leader. In other words, we have found from experience that there is great strength in having the Scoutmasters given the leadership of a man who himself is a volunteer worker, who is a part of the community, not necessarily an expert in scouting, but if you can get a man who is an out-doors man and an expert in scouting who is also a man of clean character and of good personal habits, a man whose very life and habit is an inspiration to boyhood, why you greatly strengthen your corps of volunteer leaders by having such a type of man as your Scout Commissioner; and in accordance with his equipment, his experience, his ability and time at his disposal, it is your privilege, as a general in the background, to make use of that man, capitalize him, not only for the glorification of a volunteer worker, not only for the inspiration of the boyhood enrolled in scouting in your community, but in proportion to that ability as a leader to get practical service out of him.

"We have in our own literature set forth a minimum of what we think a Scout Commissioner should do, and definitely advised that in every community, according to the leadership, that there be made a matter of record a definite statement of the responsibility of the Scout Executive and the Scout Commissioner; and where that has been done there has been very little difficulty; but where you have been vague about it and hazy, you have been treading on other's toes; and the practical advice which I give you is this, that you make sure, when you are engaged, that there is a definite understanding as to what you are going to ask of the Scout Commissioner, and what is going to be expected of you. I would strongly advise that you would start in with a minimum of responsibilities, let him head the Court of Honor work, if you please, and be the ranking officer in public appearances, and let him visit troops as inspection officer under your leadership. Then if you find you can add to that, why have it done upon your invitation and by definite understanding. Does anybody take exception to that?" (No response)

MR. TRASK: "Absolutely seconding what you have said, and in addition to the duties you laid down, we found that our Commissioner, who was a big man in the com- munity, made a mighty fine head for our Scout Leaders' Association. He is a volunteer worker among volunteer men."

MR. WEST: "As Executives we move around from place to place. If we have as Scout Commissioner a man like they have in Buffalo for example and I take great pleasure in referring to this, we would be lucky. Mr. Rich ten years ago started in. His five boys have been scouts. He is a leader in church work, a man of fine family, a leader in public affairs, and has, because of the wisdom of the local Council there, been placed in a position where he is the genius of the Scout Executive, giving a tremendous amount of personal service which could not have been paid for. And so I might refer to men in other cities."

Local and National Headquarters

What is the Boy Scouts of America? Is it a local office or a national office? Is it a local council or a national council? It is neither and it is both! Neither, in that it is a Movement, a working ideal of boy service.

The real Boy Scouts of America is the army of boys and the army of men who serve and lead them through Companionship.

National and local offices and councils are alike then—as parts of a great, living, breathing, nationwide organism of service. Both exist for the same purpose—service. One is a central office—just as the National Council—representative body—is the central legislative body. The only excuse for the existence of offices is that they may serve boys and the leaders of boys. The functions of local Headquarters are discussed in Chapter X. National Headquarters, the office of the National Council exists to serve local scout work.

It is therefore appropriate to remind ourselves of the uses to which we may put the National Staff Departments.

There is one blanket use, however, which covers all:

WHENEVER THE LOCAL MAN WANTS ADVICE OR SUGGESTION OR HELP IN HIS PROBLEMS—CALL ON THE NATIONAL MEN:

ROUTINE PROCEDURE

In considering local and national relationships, routine procedure deserves as thorough study and understanding as any other one factor for the successful operation of the program of the Boy Scouts of America. Where there is complete understanding and faithfulness in observation of regulations incident to routine procedure, there is a maximum of efficiency and worth while results.

Too often indifference and impatience are shown with reference to requirements which have been found by experience to be essential in order to bring about desired results. The uninformed will characterize such requirements as "red tape" and without serious thought create a critical attitude of mind on the part of his associates which brings a needless handicap to the success of the Boy Scout Program.

The Boy Scouts of America is fortunate in that it has been able to have the co-operation of all the various national organizations engaged in social and educational effort, as well as some of the most effective business concerns of the country in the development of its routine procedure. Based upon its experience at the time the Federal Charter was secured, rules and regulations were set up with clearness and an unusual degree of definiteness in its Constitution and By-Laws. Each provision affecting routine procedure is based upon some actual necessity for the good of the organization and the accomplishment of its objectives.

As the Chief Scout Executive has repeatedly stated, "the primary responsibility of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America in making the Scouting Program available to the boys of America, has been:

- First: To create and maintain conditions so that boys actually, intensely desire to be Scouts;
- Second: To create and maintain conditions so that men with proper educational and character qualifications are willing to give service as volunteer workers."

168 Local and National Relationships

Every requirement and every step in the routine procedure of the Boy Scouts of America must have a practical and worthwhile relationship to these two fundamental responsibilities of the National Council. How long would boys desire to be Scouts if it was not a privilege to wear the uniform and if there were not through a system of registration methods of determining actually who has the right to wear a uniform? Again, how much pride would a boy take in wearing the various pins denoting achievement if there was not an adequate organization and machinery for insuring that badges when awarded actually represent achievement and so reference might be made to each and all of the present regulations and different steps in routine procedure definitely related to maintaining conditions so that boys actually, intensely desire to be Scouts? In like manner, how would he be able to enlist men of intelligence and character to give volunteer service unless through organization methods there is made available the leadership and machinery with which to secure worthwhile results and in a relatively satisfactory manner measure such results? The records show that in proportion to ability of the National Council and local council to develop and maintain training courses, are we able to enlist and hold the interest of men simply because they find that by giving their time they are doing something worthwhile.

Whenever there is doubt in the mind of a Scout worker as to the real necessity or merit of any step in routine procedure in carrying out the program of Scouting, an attempt should be made to analyze the question from the foregoing point of view. It may be taken for granted that before the regulation covering the subject was prescribed, it was believed, in the opinion of those responsible, to be essential and worthwhile in securing best results through the program of Scouting.

The National Office cordially invites and welcomes constructive criticism to the end that the essential needs might be met with a minimum of routine procedure. Many improvements have been made, especially during recent years, and in proportion to the co-operation secured from the field, further improvement and simplification may be expected.

JAMES E. WEST.

RELATIONS WITH NATIONAL OFFICE

The routine contact of the local Scout Executive with National Headquarters occurs promptly on the beginning of his work and it is necessary that he acquire an accurate and intimate understanding of the requirements of the necessary procedure, as it is fundamental to the organization of his daily office routine and his system of records and accounts which are treated in Chapter X.

These routine procedures have to do with—

- (1) Registration.
- (2) Merit Badges.
- (3) Supplies.

REGISTRATION

By-Laws, Art. XIII, Section 1. (See page 556)

Registration pertains to the foundations of the movement, as it has to do with the boy membership on the one hand and the determination of the adult personnel on the other, and the accuracy and promptness of execution of the procedure are related very closely to the maintenance of high morale in all ranks.

All registrations of troops under first-class council pass through the Council office and the National office deals only with the Executive.

Registration procedure involves the use of the following forms by 1st Class Councils—690—Registration of New Troop.

170 Local and National Relationships

- 691—Registration of Old Troop.
- 692—Information Sheet.
- 696—Transmittal Blank.
- 694—Scoutmaster's Application.
- 695—Assistant Scoutmaster's Application.
- 515—Additional Enrollment.
- 502—Transfer.
- 710—Report of Certificates issued to Scouts.
- ...—Blank Certificates for Scouts.
- ...—Notice of, and report on, troop expirations and re-registrations.

These forms properly filled out and executed are the evidence of co-operation on the part of the institution behind the troop, the troop committee, the Scoutmaster, the Council Committee on Troop Organization and the Scout Executive. Real co-operation here ensures the laying of sound foundations and makes for permanency and efficiency in the organization of Troops and low mortality of Scoutmasters and Scouts.

This co-operation should never be permitted to become merely formal routine, the extreme of which is the entire filling in of the form by the Scoutmaster for the institution and the Troop Committee and the substitution by the Scout Executive of the rubber stamp for action of the Troop Organization Committee.

Every item on the form is important either for the local or the national office and in most cases for both. Therefore not one should be slighted or omitted. Names of officers should always be original signatures. No name should be signed unless the man has read and actually given assent to the obligations stated and implied.

REGISTRATION OF TROOPS

The Information Sheet (692) gives a summary of the points to be observed in filling out forms 690 and 691. This information is elaborated in the pamphlets

“How to Organize a Troop” and “The Troop Committee.”

The forms (690 and 691) having been fully and properly executed, the following procedure must then be followed:

1. Fill in, sign and issue Scout Certificates to Scoutmaster, for boys who have passed Tenderfoot Tests.
These are furnished free to Local Councils.
2. Once a week prepare “Report of Certificates Issued to Scouts” (form 710) and transmit same to National Headquarters, together with the original copy of each application received that week and the fees for each registration. Form 502 for each Scout transferred from one troop to another should be included.
3. On receipt from National Headquarters of leaders’ certificates and troop charters, issue same to troops.

Leaders’ certificates are issued only by the National Office and no troop nor candidate for commission is registered and in good standing until such certificates have been received by the Scoutmaster.

No applicant should be permitted to wear the uniform or any insignia until he has received his certificate, as it too frequently happens that a commission has to be withheld because of confidential information on file at the National Office. It should be emphasized at this point that it is incumbent on every Scout official to keep the National Office informed concerning any man whose serious unfitness for leadership of boys should prevent him being commissioned by the Boy Scouts of America.

SCOUTMASTERS AND ASSISTANT SCOUTMASTERS (Forms 694 and 695)

When after a troop has been registered it becomes necessary to change the Scoutmaster or to register an additional Assistant Scoutmaster form 694 or 695 is to be used as required. Careful execution of these forms showing the action of the Troop Committee and of the Troop Organization Committee is imperative.

172 Local and National Relationships

These forms should be listed and forwarded with the weekly "Report of Certificates Issued to Scouts."

ADDITIONAL SCOUTS

When it is desired to add more boys to a troop after it has been registered the "Additional Enrollment Blank," form 515, must be used.

As the expiration of all scout registrations is the same as that of the troop, which is twelve months from the last day of the month in which the local council approved the troop application, the fees for boys joining after the troop is registered are proportionate to the time remaining—50 cents for 10 to 12 months, 40 cents—7 to 9 months, 30 cents—4 to 6 months, 20 cents—less than four months. "Additional Enrollment" blanks should be listed on and sent in with the "Report of Certificates Issued to Scouts"—form 710.

TRANSFERS

Form 502, fully executed, should always be required signed by both Scoutmasters. When the expiration date of the discharging troop is earlier than that of the receiving troop, the proportionate fee for the difference must be remitted.

RE-REGISTRATION

Each month the National office issues to each Council a list of troops due to re-register the following month, together with a list of those then due or overdue and asks for a report on their status. Good local council practice dictates that the Scout Executive should have already notified such troops and have machinery in operation to secure re-registration before the expiration date is reached.

Troops failing to register by the last day of the month due, become automatically "lapsed" and ineligible to purchase or wear official goods or insignia or participate in Scout competition. Such troops are continued on the records as "active" troops unless notified to the contrary, but they are "dropped" at the end of six months unless there is positive information of their local activity and purpose to re-register.

The re-registration of "lapsed" troops is made continuous with the previous registration unless it is otherwise desired. If the "re-registration" is not made continuous a break is made in the time credited to scouts and troops for veteran rank, which causes confusion and dissatisfaction.

The fee for re-registration is always 50 cents per scout, irrespective of the date when it is made.

SCOUT CERTIFICATES

Blank Scout Certificates are shipped to local councils as reports indicate they are needed. An effort is made to keep the supply on hand up to 10% of the Council's annual requirements. Prompt return of the "receipt" to the National Office should be made.

VETERAN REGISTRATIONS

Scouts and Scout officials—including Council Members and Troop Committeemen—are eligible to join the Veteran Scout Association. (See Chapter XIX.)

The form for Registering Five and Ten-Year Veterans is No. 598. This requires the endorsement of the Scoutmaster in case the applicant is a Scout and of the Scout Executive.

MERIT BADGES

The Merit Badge is the evidence of the Scouts' continuing activity and service, increase in preparedness and closer approach to efficient citizenship. Therefore the standard of its achievement must be kept at a high level in order that the respect for it by Scout and Scout Leader may be maintained and heightened. A most important factor in effecting this objective is the procedure of awarding the badge and particularly that relating to the high rank of Eagle. (See Chapter IX.)

174 Local and National Relationships

As in Registration, so here, promptness of service by the local and national offices and careful attention to a simple procedure is vital.

The forms involved in Merit Badge procedure are—

Form 507—Scout Application for Merit Badge.

698—Application for Life, Star and Eagle.

699—Order for Merit Badges.

700-689—Report of Court of Honor.

700A—Procedure for 1st Class Councils.

717—Range Officers' Application.

PROCEDURE

Local procedure requires the Scout application (form 507 or 698) approved by the Scoutmaster, examination by Expert Examiner (Marksmanship Examiners must be Range Officers approved by the National Rifle Association, Form 717) and personal appearance of the Scout before a Court of Honor with not less than three members of the Court present.

The application blanks for all badges except the Eagle are retained in the local office. Eagle applications must be sent to the National Office.

The Court of Honor Report—form 700-689—signed by the Chairman of the Court of Honor and the Scout Executive and giving date of session of Court, names of members of court present, names of Scouts and Badge Tests passed and the number of scouts passing each test, is forwarded to the National Office accompanied by any Eagle applications—form 698, that may have been approved.

The filling of "Order for Merit Badges"—form 699, is conditioned upon the periodical receipt of the "Report of the Court of Honor," after the council has received the "initial" stock of badges ordered by it

Orders may be sent at any time but it is common practice to send an order with a "Report" and to replenish the "stock" by replacing the badges just issued.

A council may carry in "stock" any merit badge or certificate including Life and Star, but not Eagle Badges. The nature of the Eagle is such that its issue is retained at the National Office because this is believed to enhance its value in the mind of the Scout and to increase the prestige of its possession.

Council practice varies in the purchase of Merit Badges. Some councils purchase and give every badge won; others require the scout to pay for each badge.

SUPPLIES

Official Scout goods and insignia worn by boy or man are the evidences to the public of relation to the Scout Movement, therefore, it is most important that the procedure relating to the securing and wearing of such supplies shall be such as will be full protection against being illegally secured.

The handling of all Pins and Insignia is restricted strictly to the Scout Executive or some other official duly authorized by formal act of the Local Council Executive Committee. These articles may not be sold to Scoutmasters or other officials until the commissions for such officers have been received by them.

Orders for any goods except Pins and Badges may be sent to the National office by any registered Scout or Scout Official and will be honored if name is found properly entered on national records.

Any goods carried by Official Outfitters may be purchased by a registered Scout or Scout Official provided he presents his Scout Certificate unexpired.

Scoutmasters and other Scout Officials not under the jurisdiction of a Local Council may buy Pins and Badges other than Merit Badges, from a local council office provided they present their unexpired certificates as authority.

4. To broadcast all possible information on Scouting to the general public.

1. Newspapers—special Scouting sections, Associated Press, United Press Bureaus, News Syndicates, special news items, local rotogravure sections, magazine sections, and other pictures.
2. Magazines and miscellaneous periodicals—educational, religious and other class publications; motion picture periodicals, banking journals, automobile and other trade journals; official organs of auxiliaries such as Kiwanis magazine, the Rotarian, the Legion Weekly, etc.

There is no department where there is room for greater close co-operation between the National headquarters and local fields than in this one. This co-operation is bound to be reciprocal. In other words, in order to put out publicity in the above mentioned channels, a large proportion of the information must come from the local fields; then, when it comes to passing valuable information and aid back to the local fields, the Publicity Department should be able to give them the best that is gleaned from the whole country. This should be of great help to the local fields:

1. For organizing the work.
2. For financial campaigns.
3. For educational campaigns.
4. For putting through camping and other special projects.

There are many publicity projects that can be handled through National headquarters, with a thorough appreciation for local conditions, to great advantage economically, on account of having the benefit of technique, quantity and quality.

Special Service may be rendered in many of the ways suggested above.

Interpreting questions of policy and requirements under direction of Chief Scout Executive.

Supplying statements as to history, purpose and scope of the movement for Encyclopedias, etc.

Co-operation with Court of Honor.

Co-operation with Committee on Badges, Awards and Scout Requirements.

Providing Exhibits.

Miscellaneous co-operation with other departments and at request of Chief Scout Executive.

Responsibility for Scouting

Recognition of the fact that the Boy Scouts of America is not any central group but is made up of all those who in any capacity bear its name—carries with it a definite responsibility. Local and National Councils and their officers exist to make that responsibility articulate.

The Local Council and its officers, therefore, are responsible locally for the welfare, the good name, the success of Something of which they are but a part. They must therefore share in the responsibilities.

Weakness in program or procedure should be watched for and as a service to others communicated from local to National offices. False or commercial uses of the Scout name or emblems should be similarly a matter of local concern.

The local group have a very definite duty further to conduct their scout business with credit to themselves and the movement—promptness in meeting debts, honest reliability, proper records, auditing, etc., are of deep concern to the far flung membership and name of the Movement. The Local Council's financial responsibility is that of a member of the firm drawing not only benefits but helping to make those benefits possible elsewhere and to more boys by contributing suggestions, methods, and money.

When the entire membership of the organization shall have come into a consciousness of the unity of interest; when it shall have thus standardized its conception of the main objectives and responsibilities and relationships—then indeed working in unison can great service be rendered and progress made in building a better nation.

“One for each and each for one” is a sound motto for the future.

THE REGIONAL SCOUT EXECUTIVE—HIS FUNCTION

The Regional or Field Scout Executive is assigned to a definite district and is responsible to his superior officer in the National Council's office. He has a Regional Executive committee of representative laymen to work with and through in carrying on the work of the Region. It is his responsibility to retain in the Field the councils and their Executives. He is the field agent, official representative or ambassador, of the National Council in his Region. His duties in the Region are such as may be defined by the National Council.

The work of the Regional Executive at the present is chiefly that of extension and supervision.

The following are some of the duties which the Regional Executive may be called upon to perform.

A. Supervision

1. Inspection of local councils and Executives' work to see that proper standards

4. Answering all sorts of correspondence relative to policies and program.
5. Co-operation with National Council Education Department in promotion of conference and training programs for Executives.
6. Co-operation with all National Council departments as their work relates to his Region and with councils, officials, institutions and individuals in problems related in any way to National Scout work.
7. To be responsible for any Rallies, Field Days or other Scouting activities or problems of a Region, state or inter-council nature.
8. Re-organization. Financial and leadership problems.
9. Inspiration, encouragement.
10. Interpreting policies, explaining methods, outlining plans.
11. Investigation of applications for charter or renewal with definite recommendation.
12. Study problems of personnel and seek to so adjust Executives and Assistants that each man may find his proper place.

B. Extension

1. Advertising Scouting.
2. Surveying field as basis for intelligent work.
3. Securing the co-operation of other agencies.

4. Organizing Scouting (Councils principally).
5. Recruiting new Executives and Volunteer leaders.

Inasmuch as the Regional Executive shall sustain a close relation to the Regional Committees the duties of these committees at least in part are herewith presented:

- A. The Regional Committees are to assemble the representatives of the Local Councils in their Regions at least once, annually. Full and free opportunity should be given at these meetings for discussion by the delegates of the problems and program of Scouting.
- B. The Regional Committee shall co-operate with the National Council in developing a plan for establishing and allocating the amount to be expended for field service. The Regional Committee shall have the power to make adjustments within the Region in the contributions allocated to local councils for field expense, provided the allocation to the Region as a whole is not reduced. The Regional Committee, through its Executive Committee, shall assist in the collection of the amounts asked from them.
- C. The Regional Committee shall, through its chairman and executive committee, develop in counsel with the Regional Executive, the program to be followed in the Region, both in the matter of the intensive as well as the extensive development of the Region.
- D. The Regional Executive Committee shall with the aid of the Regional Executive develop a plan for the complete occupation of the Region and each new council shall be organized in relation to the general plan. This plan shall be chartered and each member of the Executive Committee provided with a map of the plan for his study and as a matter of information.

192 Local and National Relationships

- E. Each member of the Executive Committee shall be assigned a definite and circumscribed area in the Region which he will be requested to study and over which he shall have a special advisory relationship. He shall, in counsel with the Regional Executive, advise the Executive Committee of the status of Scouting in the Region and with reference to the needs and policies of the area under his general direction. He shall supervise in a general way the activities of local councils in the area assigned to him and bring to the attention of the Regional Chairman and of the Regional Executive the needs and requirements both for strengthening existing councils and for development of new territory.
- F. The Regional Executive Committee shall determine the status of local council scout executives with reference to attendance upon the Regional Meetings. Scout Executives shall not be permitted membership on the Regional Committees. Under no circumstances shall an Executive be permitted to attend a meeting of the Regional Committee in lieu of a committeeman nor given voting power if invited to attend.
- G. The Regional Executive Committee shall share in the selection of the Regional Executive. Under no circumstances will the National Council appoint a Regional Executive unless such selection is approved by the Regional Executive Committee.
- H. When a new council is duly chartered by the National Council the National Council will commission the Regional Committee to officially present the charter to the local council on behalf of the National Council. This should be done with appropriate and dignified exercises.
- I. The Chairman of the Regional Committee shall be a member of the National Field Committee. The Regional Executive Committee shall nominate a representative from the Region for membership on the National Camping Committee.

They shall in like manner nominate a representative for membership on the National Committee of Education.

- J. The Regional Committee shall take on such additional functions as may be assigned to them from time to time through the National Field Committee.

The Regional Executive shall be the Secretary of the Regional Executive Committee. He shall consult with the Chairman and members of the Executive Committee of the Region in the development of the policy of work for the Region and in as far as possible be guided by their advice. He shall, when practical, meet the chairman of the Regional Committee personally at least once each month for conference with regard to matters pending in the Region and with reference to developing further plans for the Region. He shall send to the chairman of the Regional Committee a weekly report of his activities and indicate one week in advance the places to be visited by him so that the chairman of the Region will be fully informed as to his work and movements.

CHAPTER VIII

LOCAL FIELD WORK

General Nature of Organization

Constructively reaching boys is the business of Scouting. The executive has been recognized as chiefly and primarily a "man's man"—who should mobilize the community forces. The scoutmaster is primarily a "boy's man" who shall give the boys character building companionship, although in the newer concept of Scouting he is a "man's man" as well in getting needed adult helpers for his troop.

Field work is then the organized means through which the Executive comes in direct touch with the real business of his organization.

Indeed the entire organization exists to enable field work and the boy service it enhances, to be done and better done.

Field work being concerned directly with the Service to the Community's boys must therefore be adequately organized and staffed; it must function and be effective.

In general there are four outstanding organizational policies.

- A) Shall the organization follow geographic lines in the districting of the division of labor with one man for an area?
- B) Or shall it follow functional lines with a man doing one type of work in the various areas?
- C) Shall this field service be rendered largely by a paid staff of full time or part-time men, or
- D) Shall it be rendered largely by a volunteer staff?

Naturally all shades and grades of combinations of the above policies will be found either because of the social theory held by the council or because of temporary conditions of transition.

There seems to be excellent theoretic and practice justification for setting forth a mean between (A) and (B):

A field man resident in each district and responsible for the general program but in addition thereto for him to have been selected as a specialist in some one field so that through training courses, literature, addresses, etc. the entire city may benefit from his possession of a specialized form of ability.

In the smaller communities (or larger for that matter) the first assistants selected as paid men will doubtless be those which either directly supplement the abilities of the Executive or relieve him of onerous duties.

The trend therefore is toward function rather than toward area alone in selecting paid helpers.

As regards volunteer and paid staffing, the history, policies, and aims of Scouting warrant the following:

The executive should never, on behalf of the Council, employ some one to perform worthwhile tasks for which he can secure equally able and dependable volunteer help. Clerical and routine tasks of that general class should as far as possible be lifted from the volunteer and done for him.

It is only fair to recognize that both large and small communities will vary widely in the available supply of volunteer leadership.

Careful study of the social theory of community life and of the actual folk therein quite inevitably forces one to the view that communities have within them the needed elements of man-power which under training, can effect leadership in meeting the community social needs.

The principle back of this is so important that the Executive should not too hastily run counter to it—namely The Task of Real Social Work is to help folk to help themselves.

Some of our men in the early days of the movement made the mistake of copying the methods of boy workers where the paid worker actually did all of the work with the boys.

The boys belong to the community as well as to the nation. The community should therefore be helped to maximally serve its own boys.

The community is permanent—the Executive like all individuals, is transient.

What is to be Done

There are two groups of field tasks—A) one, inherent in the nature of the Scout Program—B) one, dependent on the objectives the council is seeking to reach for that particular year.

A) Field Work Scouting demands.

This, in general, may be put under two divisions which can never safely be divorced in practice.

I) Service and II) Extension or as, G. W. Ehler, former executive of Allegheny Council, has ably phrased it,

“Better Scouts” and “More Scouts.”

Service

The service aspect of Field Work contemplates improving the quality of what the boy gets, as well as helping the man get it done. The key to such service lies through contact, through

- (1) Visitation. Every troop should be periodically visited (or inspected) by the executive or the Commissioner or their deputies or assistants. The findings of such visitations should be formally reported to the Local Headquarters so that remedial measures, if needed, may be taken.

Through the friendly and helpful contacts which visitation should create and foster, many collateral results arise:

- a) Morale—With a volunteer leadership, even more than with others, the spirit generated by kindly, considerate, appreciative, helpful human contacts is absolutely essential to getting results.
- b) Standards—Elaborate statements may have been typed and printed and mailed to each man, but the personal meeting and discussion makes meanings clear and can provide suggestion and help toward better scouts.
- c) Training—While training courses and "Scoutmaster troops," and training material by correspondence reach a large percentage of the leaders yet some men can be only, and some best reached by personal contact. Training can be unconsciously effected through the experience of others—and the man can be encouraged to learn directly from others by visiting other troops. Variety in the program and things to do from the crucial first candidate and Tenderfoot entrance—such help can be effectively rendered through personal contact.

- d) Supervision should of course be given but it should be received as well, it must be of the unconscious, “painless” type — helping through the training suggestions above, allowing these in many cases to adroitly emerge in conversation. The question and answer method when a man is there are often the most effective ways of uncovering and meeting troop problems.
  - e) Records and Reports of conditions, losses, advancement, etc. can be secured at first hand with a minimum of “reporting bookkeeping” and “statistical letter-writing” on the part of the scoutmaster. Thus too a significant statistical check upon the pulse of the troop may be taken without waiting for the end of the year, which for some problems is too late.
  - f) Progress of the scouts into the scout program may be effectively encouraged and stimulated through the contacts indicated above. Rallies and contests and competitions contribute heavily to progress also.
- (2) Creation of Board of Instructors and Examiners is a service which makes available to the boys as needed and desired, technical instruction, with subsequent testing toward the awarding approval of the Court of Honor.
  - (3) Community Service is vitally a reciprocal relationship. To enlist a troop to cooperate in a piece of real service to the community is real service to the troop.

DELAWARE AND MONTGOMERY COUNTIES, PA.—Exec. E. A. Carlson

Organization

The territory of Delaware and Montgomery Counties is divided into nine districts. These districts are not based on any geographical boundaries but are divided according to the means of trolley and railroad communications between towns. In other words, the towns near to or on any one railroad line would be in one district, thereby enabling them the easier to get together. Of necessity we were compelled to do this because of the great distance between troops and we have found it to work very successfully.

In each district we have what is known as a District Committee composed of members of the Troop Committee from various troops in that district. The District Committee is then divided into sub committees such as Organization, Investiture, Court of Honor, etc.

In each district we have a part-time Field Executive who is in charge of his district and is paid a salary for devoting a certain number of evenings to the work of inspecting the troops in his district. His duties are as follows:

Inspect each troop once every three months.

Send in inspection report immediately after inspection.

Court of Honor.

Meet every three months.

Set date of meeting in advance for season.

Act as secretary of same.

See that troops and members of Court of Honor are notified well in advance.

Organize troops.

Secure re-registrations.

Appoint a volunteer assistant to help in this.

Fix cases in need of adjusting.

Conduct district activities.

Publicity in local papers.

Give report of work done first Monday each month.

In addition to this we have divided our territory into an Upper and Lower section with an Assistant Executive in charge of each of these. These men are responsible for following up the Field Executives in their work. Their duties:

Conduct first class investiture ceremony.

Secure survey of towns and institutions in towns.

Help secure scoutmasters for troops without leadership.

Organize troops. Speak at meetings.

Conduct contests. Visit troops.

Secure close co-operation between troop and troop Committeemen.

Conduct Educational work.

Any other work assigned by Executive.

Instead of making Scoutmasters come to us, we have been going to them spending most of our time in the field.

TROOP INSPECTION

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

Detailed Information to Scoutmasters.

Awards

A certificate of efficiency will be given each Troop inspected showing rating and standing in the Counties of 65 to 84%.

Each troop receiving 85% or over in the troop inspection will be known as the Honor Troop and awarded a diploma.

Scoutmasters will not be notified when inspector will visit Troop. It is therefore wise to have all records, etc., up to date at all times. If a meeting is to be postponed or changed, Scoutmaster should notify Scout Executive Edward A. Carlson, 704 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia (Telephone Walnut 2356), in ample time to prevent inspector calling that evening.

If inspector does call and finds no meeting, Troop will receive a Zero. You can expect an inspector anytime as follows:

Fall Inspection . . . . . Oct. 1 to Dec. 25th.
Winter Inspection . . . . . Jan. to March 28.
Spring Inspection . . . . . April 1 to June 15.

SUFFOLK COUNTY (N. Y.) COUNCIL— Executive F. C. Cobb

"In the strictly rural County Council, where communities are small and widely scattered, the district organization must be emphasized. Suffolk County, New York, 100 miles long and 20 miles wide, where the largest town has a population of only 7,000, is divided into six districts. In this Council all joint activities are held within the district boundaries. There are no Field Executives, the District Commissioner working through the District Committee, being the contact with Council Headquarters in Troop activities. District Scout Rallies and Field Days are held each spring and fall. In them Scouting contests prevail, records being established for County comparisons. Courts of Honor, chosen from each District Committee, meet at these Rallies where all awards from second-class up are made. These Court meetings are public and out of doors. Scoutleaders' training classes are held within each district, conducted by the Executive and Supt. of Schools. A scout cabin has been donated for the use of Troops in one district. This will prove very helpful because country Troops have more time for hikes and outdoor activities during the fall and winter seasons. The Council summer camp is the only "get together" for Scouts from every Troop and is very important."

"Weekly bulletins are sent to every Troop from Headquarters. These serve as news letters and carry instructions. From last October to May, uniform monthly tests are directed in every Troop through these bulletins. The whole County Council meets only three times a year at Council Headquarters, almost supreme power being allowed the Council Executive Committee, which meets monthly and at various districts. In this rural class of Scouting, the greatest help will come through good district organization, efficient County and District Commissioners and an interested, active Executive Committee. The Council Commissioner is the inspector of all work and the contact between the Local and National Councils. In many ways the most difficult to handle, the strictly rural Council best carries out the plan of volunteer organization and offers the Scouting program to boys, lacking much other association and appreciating very fully opportunities dear to their hearts and of which they know a great deal."

SUPERVISION

By Executive E. Urner Goodman—Philadelphia

How may a Scout Executive invest his time to best advantage in the supervision of his field?

What major features demand his personal attention so far as that supervision is concerned?

These are questions, the answer to which depends in large measure upon the size of the Field, on whether it be a rural or an urban community, on whether there be sufficient resources to warrant a professional staff of assistants, and to a certain extent, on whether the field is but newly developed or has been organized for several years.

It may be safely concluded, however, that in the administration of any scout field there are certain very definite things to be done, whether they be accomplished by the Scout Executive personally, by paid assistants, or by volunteer leaders. To catalogue these items needing supervision, is perhaps the first step, therefore, in the supervision of a local field.

The following is a suggested summary.

I. ORGANIZATION FEATURES

- (1) Maintaining the several units of organization with full quota of leaders—properly functioning—e. g.
Scoutmasters for every troop.
Sufficient Deputy Commissioners.
Sufficient Troop Commissioners.
Sufficient examiners.
- (2) Handling special problems in organization—
e. g. disagreement between scoutmaster and the parent institution.
discipline cases appealed to Headquarters.
- (3) Fixing objectives for Extension and developing plans for their attainment based upon Number of boys available in community.
Number of parent institutions.
- (4) Keeping of records as to Registrations and re-registrations of troops.
Personnel records of leaders and scouts.
Vital statistics of Movement, e. g.,
Records of scout and leaders turnover.
Records of juvenile conditions in community.
Beneficial and detrimental influences.
- (5) Selling Scouting to community wholesale through constant contact with the great denominations of the Church, the public and private school systems, the industrial groups, the civic agencies.

II. TRAINING FEATURES

- (1) Giving adult leadership for a broader vision and more adequate service.

Leadership training courses.
 Correspondence training courses.
 Scoutmaster Round-tables and conferences.
 Demonstration meetings and hikes.
 Inspirational meetings.

- (2) Preparing older scouts for future leadership through officers' training corps, patrol leaders' training classes
- (3) Supervising in general the work of inspection and examination of scouts, according to Court of Honor standards in
  - Elementary grades—up to First Class.
  - Merit Badge ranks—up to Eagle Scout.
- (4) Publication of such pamphlets, bulletins, etc., as will prove helpful in educating leaders, scouts and the general public as to scouting objectives and standards
  - e. g.
  - Pamphlets on troop management and control.
  - Weekly or monthly bulletins or announcement sheets.
  - Year-books.
- (5) Maintaining a speakers' bureau composed of experts in various lines of Scoutcraft for use throughout the field—particularly in troops.

III. ACTIVITIES FEATURES

- (1) Maintaining a schedule of
  - Council and community inter-troop activities.
  - Field Days, Rallies.
- (2) Operating a program of civic service
  - Community Good Turns.
  - Rendition of legitimate service requested.
- (3) Supervising the camping program

  - Stenography.
  - Filing.
  - Duplicating and addressing.

- (4) House management at Headquarters.

V. FIELD VISITATION AND INSPECTION DETAILS

- (1) Planning and operating a well defined schedule of visitation of troops.
Every troop should be visited at least once quarterly.
- (2) Operating a schedule of intertroop inspections, troops in a given district or local community being inspected annually in competition.
Winners in the serial inspections of the year then competing
- (3) Attendance upon and leadership in sessions of the scoutmasters associations.

It will be noted that several details which seem to be akin have been listed under the general headings of

Organization
Training Activities Business
Field visitations

The placing of a particular detail under one heading or another and the titles given to the several groupings are relatively unimportant.

Very logically however, each group constitutes the business of a special department, with certain bureaus in each, any one of which might, if local need be sufficient, be developed into a separate department.

This entire alignment of administrative detail is with a plea for the orderly arrangement of the many important matters which confront the Scout Executive.

Having thus catalogued the main features of Field Supervision the Executive's next thought should be as to the most suitable means of functioning along these various lines. Obviously the size and nature of the field must enter into the consideration here.

Your good executive, however, whatever the size of his field will at once seek persons to whom he may delegate the responsibilities which confront him. The man who attempts to meet all the organization needs himself, to lead personally all the activities, to direct all the training classes and to personally solicit financial support for scouting, is not only going to find himself in a maze of detail, but is going to weaken the effect of his entire administration.

If paid assistants are available, the arbitrary division of duties somewhat along the department lines suggested above is comparatively simple. But even where this is impossible, it would seem logical to suggest that volunteer leaders be secured to take over the several responsibilities—either committees vested with power to act, or individuals given fixed duties.

There are two methods of delegating authority to assistants:—

1. By dividing the territory among them and giving over general administrative responsibility to each within his own district.
2. By delegating one or more major responsibility to each man, which responsibility he will assume for the entire field.

Thus instead of assigning to Deputy Commissioner Jones, two townships within the county, in which to follow up general administrative detail, the Executive might assign to him definite responsibility for the Training features over the entire county.

In the scout field there is probably ample justification for both divisions of responsibility. In a large centre, to the assistant Scout Executives would be delegated departmental responsibilities, while to the Field Executives would be assigned well defined territories for operation.

In the smaller community one or more assistants, either volunteer or professional would be assigned departmental duties, while Deputy Commissioners would be appointed over certain districts within the community, charged with general administrative duties therein.

But with the delegation of responsibilities comes the necessity for proper means of supervision over the work of professional volunteer assistants.

The general principles of good management involved in this important consideration, need not be dwelt on here. Suffice it to say that unless the Chief can (in his contacts with them) prove an inspiration to those about him—unless, as well, he can develop efficiency and bring out the best in his assistants he is not coming up to the mark.

Applying the principles of general supervision to the Scout Field, however, the following points are worthy of mention.

1. The Executive should, advising with his assistants and his Board and in conformity with the rules of the National and local councils, fix certain policies and standards with respect to the various departments of action and should insist on their observance.

2. The Executive should have a large share in the periodic and regular fixing of objectives of attainment in the several departments.

3. The Executive should see that the various departments, subordinate and separate units are working in complete harmony and in line with the general plan for council development. This entails a proper number of conferences, carefully planned.

4. The Executive should see that duties assigned are executed with proper dispatch and in conformance with a time schedule previously determined upon.

5. Having delegated responsibilities the Scout Executive should respect the rights of his Assistants and should not attempt to assume their prerogatives for them.

Having thus established the point that delegation of duties and the sharing of responsibilities is essential to the efficient supervision of a scout field, it is worth noting in conclusion, that there are certain personal contacts which the Scout Executive himself should not lose. Among them might be mentioned the following:

1. Contact with troops and Scouts. It is to the best interest of both the Executive and his field that from time to time, if only by two or three whirlwind visits per month, he should get next to the troops in operation.

2. Presence at major activities, Without attempting to assume responsibilities which he has already delegated the Executive should, of course, be in evidence at these affairs—and in uniform.

3. The Executive should be available personally for several hours per day to any and all who ask to see him. Nothing tends to build up the proper esprit de corps as free access to the man at the helm.

4. The Executive should have a definite part to play—if only one lecture—in training courses, bringing to the new leaders the keynote of real Scout Leadership.

5. The Executive himself should have definite contact with the community and its multiform activities. He should be in a position to feel the pulse of the society in general as reflected in The Church, The Home, The School, Industry and civic affairs.”

TROOP EXTENSION AND TROOP PROBLEMS

Executive A. T. Benson, Louisville, Ky.

Nothing is so important in the work of a Scout Executive as actually giving to the boy the program that will enthuse him and hold him to lofty ideals. All of the machinery of the local council must be directed toward this one objective. Since the boy gets his inspiration through the troop—the troop becomes the important factor in the organization. This will of necessity demand the best thought and effort of the Scout Executive.

His first thought after the service to existing troops, is toward the extension of Scouting to other boys by organizing troops wherever a group of boys may be gathered together, thus utilizing the “gang spirit.”

Because of the necessity of providing an adequate meeting place for the troop and, most important of all, to insure the permanency of troops thus organized, the Scout Executive should turn to the institutions of his community which will give such permanency and which already have a contact with boy life, namely the Church, Boys' Club, Playground, Public School, Y. M. C. A., etc.

The Scout Executive should seek and develop a point of contact with the Executive Heads of these institutions of his community with the result that the Scout Executive, or some representative of the council, is invited to appear before its governing body.

This is an opportunity to "sell" the Scout Program with its objectives of character building and citizenship training to the "key men." Thus confidence is created and favorable attention develops into an interest. He seeks to have this interest grow into a desire and they act upon his suggestion that a troop be fostered by them in their institution. The equivalent to "placing the name on the dotted line" is securing the appointment of three or more men to serve in the capacity of a Troop Committee.

At the earliest opportunity these men are called together for the purpose of organization and instruction in their duties as Troop Committeemen. Each Committeeman is made to feel that he is a potent factor in the success of the troop that is to be organized. In other words, the Troop Committee is the foundation upon which the troop is to be built. Time spent here to build is surely time well invested.

In the workings of the Troop Committee each Committeeman is given a definite task, which for the sake of the boy, he is honor-bound to perform. Among their most important duties is that of selecting a Scoutmaster who is to become the general director of the activities of the boys themselves. Through Scoutmasters' Schools, Veteran Scouts and the Handbook for Scoutmasters, the Scout Executive seeks to train properly the new Scoutmaster. The Scout Executive should spend considerable time in coaching these Committeemen in their various duties.

This plan is followed until the men of every institution in the community that touches boy life has had an opportunity to adopt the Scout Program as their contribution to the right development of the adolescent boy.

Troop Extension—Troop Problems 213

The local headquarters may be likened to an automobile agency which has three functions, namely, selling the car, training the man who bought it how to run it and rendering service to the man in trouble. The Scout Executive having sold the program and trained the men to operate it, must now turn his attention to establishing a service station where assistance may be rendered in the problems that shall naturally arise.

Among the problems the Scout Executive will find the following:

a—Maintaining the continual co-operation of the institution.

b—Keeping the Troop Committee on the job.

c—Keeping the Scoutmaster from becoming discouraged.

d—Lack of interest on the part of the boy.

e—Indifference of parents.

The attention of the service station must be turned toward these specific problems and every effort made to find a solution. No hard and fast rule may be laid down to govern all problems but each must be given personal attention and solved in the interest of the boy. All these problems relate to the production of the efficient scout.

The Scout Executive seeks frequent opportunity of meeting with the troop committee, keeping them and the institution through them, keenly alive to their responsibility to the boy.

Any discouragement on the part of the Scoutmaster may be traced to one of two causes, either the lack of co-operation on the part of the Troop Committee, or the lack of interest on the part of the scouts themselves. The former may be overcome by a frank conference in which all differences may be adjusted; while the latter may be combated by the carrying out of a carefully laid program of action with variety in the troop meeting, which shall mark an advance in Scoutcraft.

Continuous publicity, and education on the part of Local Headquarters and the Troop Committee in co-operation with the Scoutmaster will in most cases overcome any indifference on the part of the parents which is largely due to ignorance of the real purposes and objectives of the Scout Movement. This of course, involves demonstrations by scouts, the use of speakers' bureaus, rallies, "good turns" as continuously operating means of educating the public on Scouting.

By carefully establishing each troop in a permanent institution and by producing an atmosphere, in which, each member thereof finds it easy to do the daily "good turn" and live up to the Scout Oath and Law, the Scout Executive builds an organization which shall stand the test of time and the stress of change.

B) Field Work Fixed by the Annual Objectives Set by the Council.

Annual Objectives

Next to having an organization it is important to know exactly what it purposes to do.

A fine tribute to the quality of the Scout Executives is found in the wide prevalence of definite annual or monthly objectives.

It is obvious that the results scheduled for accomplishment will vary with the age of council, past progress, resources of men and of money as well as other considerations. This will definitely establish certain field tasks to be accomplished.

The most significant treatment of this topic therefore is for the Scout Executive to refer to the Measurement of Results Chapter XI, for certain facts about standards and to herewith include for study and adaptation actual annual programs from a number of councils.

AIMS OF THE WHEELING LOCAL COUNCIL FOR THE COMING YEAR

1. To attain a goal of 1,000 Scouts by Oct. 22, 1920.
2. To strive for greater publicity for Scouting.
3. Reorganization of Troop Committee and Court of Honor for aggressive Scouting.
4. To develop a still more vigorous group of Scouts through overnight hikes, winter and summer camp.

CHAPTER IX

SCOUT PROGRESS AND THE COURT OF HONOR

The Scout Court of Honor is the vehicle through which the local community gives articulate approval to scouts who have made progress. It exists primarily to encourage and stimulate, to standardize and interpret, to recognize and reward the boys' effort to advance and make progress through the scout ranks and tests.

Scouting however, is something infinitely more than the passing of tests and the meeting of requirements. These are the machinery of certain activities; the character building influence of the companionship with fine-qualified men and other boys while doing these interest-gripping activities—those associations are the big and real and vital character-building things.

While this chapter deals largely with mechanics, it is fitting to be ever mindful of the purpose they subserve.

Growth

Growth is the natural law of normal, healthy life. When it ceases, 'tis but a short step to decline and later decay. For the boy, growth is inevitable—the question is its direction and subject matter.

If he is not growing in Scouting, he is expanding his interest in some other direction.

It is vital therefore for the Scout leader to keep his boys growing in Scoutcraft and Scout service, if the socially and personally useful habits involved therein, are to be developed.

Progress and the Objectives of Scouting

Character building and citizenship training are the two major objectives of Scouting. "Building" and "training" are dynamic, not static terms. We cannot hope to successfully build character and train for citizenship unless doing is provided—unless we stimulate and influence the Scout to progress from one grade to another. Stagnation is itself immoral—unsocial—while purposeful activity and progress are basic in the evolution of the individual or the race.

To allow a boy to become a tenderfoot, procure a badge and a uniform, and remain a tenderfoot for an undue length of time, is to encourage evil habits in the boy and to kill the spirit of the troop of which he is a member. It is true that a few boys, being lazy, are satisfied to pose as Scouts, wear the uniform and enjoy the distinction. They must be "prodded into line." The fact that a lad has taken the scout Oath and memorized the Law does not work a miracle upon him. There is nothing magic about the Scout program; it must be lived. Advancement in itself cannot insure a complete adherence to the scout principles but it has at least provided the opportunity. It is a notable fact that boys who advance consistently from rank to rank are found by their Scoutmasters and Executives as exemplifying scout principles. There is a definite and favorable connection between scout progress and true scout spirit.

The Speed of Progress

The initial question is, "How rapidly should a scout advance?" Here a fundamental principle may be laid down. The rate of advancement must be based upon the ability of the individual and the amount of time he can devote to his tests. There should be no lock step formation in a troop. The machinery of examination should be so flexible that a scout can pass his tests and receive his advanced badge without a long period of delay. From the point of view of the Executive, a troop without first class scouts is likely to be a drag on the movement. It has been noted by many that simultaneously with the making a first class scout there comes a new breath of life to the troop.

While the Scout Handbook for Boys provides a minimum of one month's service before a tenderfoot may advance to second class and a minimum of sixty days before a second class scout may advance to first class there has been no maximum specifically established. Certain local councils, however, have set a time limit upon their scouts requiring them in some cases to complete their second class tests within six months or show reasons for having an extension of time. In some cities nine months or a year are considered a maximum for passing all tests for the first class badge. Here again it is almost impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule without interfering with the spirit of the movement. Frequently boys must work to help support the family and for that reason have only a limited amount of time to devote to their tests. Boys in high school often find their time almost completely occupied. All will agree that such boys have a right to the benefits of the scout program even though they may be able to advance but slowly. Here it should be borne in mind that consistent advancement, as conditioned by the Scout's mentality and surroundings, is the working rule.

Advancement

Scout progress involves paying considerable attention to the proportion of tenderfoot, second class, first class and merit badge scouts. In the first ten years of Scouting in America approximately 6% of the 950,000 boys enrolled during that time reached the first class rank. About 20% reached second class, leaving about 70% in the tenderfoot stage. Coming to the higher degrees we find that one scout in about 300 reached the rank of life and star while one in about 600 earned the coveted eagle badge.

In the second decade, experience, new ideals and better training should make possible a much better record. The scoutmaster is the keyman in effecting progress, though an active troop-committee can help tremendously.

What percentage of the scouts enrolled by a council should be first class? The age of the council, the efficiency of preceding years, the attitude of the community toward Scouting—these and other factors will be present. The following table is one Executive's judgment as to class distribution.

The table may be useful as a point of departure in establishing one's own minimum working proportion recognizing of course that "age of council" means different things in different cases:

Age of Council	Tenderfoot	Second-class	First-class
One year	80%	17%	3%
Two Years	60%	30%	10%
Three Years	50%	35%	15%
Four Years	40%	40%	20%
Five Years	40%	40%	20%

Stimulating Advancement

a) Morale or Troop spirit is one very certain channel through which progress may be enhanced. The leader who can create and maintain a fine spirit in his group will find the advancement of his boys a relatively easy matter. If in starting the troop there is action and movement and growth from the start the boy easily forms the growing habit!

Troop and patrol pride may be invoked to achieve and maintain standards.

b) The Example of growth

A growing scout leader can himself accomplish much through example. Telling, e. g. of scouts who have mastered all the merit badges or many of them often stimulates other boys to "start."

Selecting one or more boys in the troop and encouraging and helping them to advance will bring the spirit directly into the troop.

c) Competition

Competition, if judiciously handled, is a most subtle and effective method to use with boys. Great care must be exercised in having all of the rules and limitations on the competition thoroughly understood and observed by all.

Competitions within a troop or patrol, or between patrols, between troops or districts may serve as an effective stimulus to advance.

The following contest scoring outlines from the District of Columbia Council may prove suggestive:

etc., etc.

Inspection will consider two main factors: Appearance at time of Inspection; and Troop Organization, Records, and Attendance at Regular Meetings.

Credit will be on the basis of a possible 100. Appearance will count 40/100, and organization, etc. 60/100.

A separate set of judges will officiate for each of these two Sections.

Troop records, list of officers and certified statement of attendance for specified time will be presented by the Troop at the time of Inspection.

Associate Scouts will not be counted in contest.

Standing will be determined as follows:

Section "A"

2 points credit for each thing found correct (Hat, Coat, etc.): total points for Troop to be divided by number of scouts registered at Headquarters for that Troop, making a total of 40 possible points.

At Divisional and Final Inspections Scouts presenting note from parent or guardian certifying to illness will not be counted in determining standing of troop.

Section "B"

Records: 2 credits for each thing correct; Attendance: credits as indicated; Organization, credits as indicated—a total of 60 possible credits.

An "Active" Troop Committee shall be considered one that meets as a Committee at least once every 3 months, and one member of which attends a meeting of the Troop at least once a month; each member having some definitely assigned duty in connection with the Troop.

In "Troop Attendance" record, Scouts presenting note from parent or guardian certifying to illness to be counted as present at meeting. No other excuse to be accepted.

d) Doing. Advancement will be encouraged by careful keeping of the "doing" in scouting,—the active, interest element in learning.

e) Camp. The Boy Scout Camp has been found to be a potent source of scout advancement. The atmosphere of the camp, the desire to win camp emblems, seeing what other boys can do, time in which to do it and immediately available instructors and examiners—all these stir the boy to advance.

Hikes may be similarly used as a vehicle for all to pass their fire test or cooking or signalling test and so on.

f) Joint Action. A slogan with a time element in it has been found of value. For example—

“Every scout to advance at least one rank this year.”

“All Tenderfoot Scouts Second Class by Feb. 1.”

“Two new first Class Scouts in each troop by May 1.”

“All Camp registrations by June 1.”

“Every scout to pass one test a month,” etc., etc.

g) Recognitions. While working for prizes is often theoretically assailed as providing unworthy motive, its judicious use may prove effective. A cup, a banner, a ribbon, a badge will often appeal. The important element is to safeguard the nature of the work done so that it is not lost sight of on its own merits.

The Baltimore Council has for five years issued prizes not to individuals but to groups—to troops or districts. This has revealed added socializing values through the team-work element involved.

Some councils establish “standards of attainment,” as another form of competition. For example, if a certain troop reaches a certain standard in attendance, appearance, advancement, equipment, etc., it may be designated as “Standard Troop” or may receive a banner or a flag as a recognition.

The functions of the local Court of Honor

Article XI, Section 2, Clause 10, of the National By-Laws, provides that:

“They (Local Councils) shall provide courts of honor in order that boys may meet the requirements in the various scout tests as prescribed in the official handbook, under such conditions as will reduce to a minimum the necessity of a boy’s travelling a great distance from his home or of interfering with his school work or home duties.”

The duties of the local Court of Honor cover with varying degrees of emphasis in various communities the following five items.

- a) Certifying Instructors
- b) Maintaining Standards
- c) Providing Examinations
- d) Holding Review
- e) Conferring Awards

a) Certifying Instructors

Suitable and qualified experts must be found, certified and supervised to teach the more technical subject of scoutcraft such as First Aid, Signaling or Life-saving, Merit badges, etc.

Such instruction is done in close contact with the Scoutmaster and his program. This "Faculty" are usually the special subject examiners as well.

The far visioned scout leader will do well to capitalize the exceptional scout as special activity instructors not only for his own troop but even in other troops. Some Councils use these picked patrol leaders to help train new scoutmasters.

b.) Maintaining Standards

The maintenance of national and local Council standards of achievement is one very important responsibility of the Court of Honor.

The 1920 Handbook for Scoutmasters (Chapter VI pages 157-174) presents a standard interpretation based on ten years of experience by councils all over the country. This covers the tenderfoot, second and first class tests. A series of three pamphlets called "Scout Helps" has been issued for Tenderfoot, Second and First class requirements and giving more detail.

A similar interpretation of the various merit badges is found in the Merit Badge pamphlets.

c) Providing Examinations

In the first decade of the service of the Boy Scouts of America the Court of Honor ranged in its function all the way from being a "rubber stamp" which placed its approval on work done entirely by others, to conducting as did one council—a highly specialized Indian ritual quite definitely paralleling the tribal ceremonies of primitive tribes.

Section 1 of Article XV of the National Council By-Laws, which reads as follows, should be carefully noted by Scout Executives.

ARTICLE XV—EXAMINATIONS

Section 1—Examinations.

Examinations for all scout tests shall be given under conditions and leadership which harmonize with the aims and purposes of the Boy Scout Movement and its appeal to boys, irrespective of creed or religious beliefs, and which takes into consideration the twelfth scout law, requiring a scout to respect the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion.

Effort should be made to reduce to a minimum the necessity for requiring a boy to travel from home or to interfere with his school work or home duties. To this end examinations should be held at the place of meeting of the troop or in the neighborhood.

Tenderfoot tests are given by the Scoutmaster whether or not under council. For conditions governing first and second class and Merit Badge tests see N. C. By-Laws, Art. XV, sections 3, 4 and 5 respectively.

Section 5—Merit Badge Examinations.

I HAVE EXAMINED THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE:

These requirements as stated in the By-Laws (see P. 538) are not to be interpreted as requiring the Scout Executive or Commissioner to burden themselves with the actual conducting of tests. The function of these officials is to serve as a leader of leaders rather than to be in direct charge of the scouts themselves. The task of proper supervision and securing of duly qualified examiners should however be taken seriously by every scout official.

NEW PLAN FOR HANDLING MERIT BADGE CERTIFICATES

Councils now enter an "initial" merit badge order based on their expected needs for 3 to 6 months, and issue them directly on court of honor action before sending the "applications" to the National Council. Reports are made periodically, at least quarterly, upon merit badges and merit badge certificates issued—the scouts merit badge applications upon which the badges were issued accompanying the report. When more badges are wanted formal orders on regulation blanks are sent by the local council to National Council Headquarters Office. These "orders" accompany the "reports" of the disposition of the previous stock which constitute a perpetual inventory of the council's merit badge activities. This plan does not apply to the Life, Star and Eagle awards, which must be secured as previously.

Certificates Given Only Within Proper Jurisdiction

Certificates for advancement of second class, first class scouts and merit badge examinations successfully passed can only be given by the Local Council under whose jurisdiction the Scout is registered or properly affiliated except as provided in Article XV, Sec. 7, By Laws of the National Council, and in such cases authorities should respect the wishes of the council under whose jurisdiction the Scout is registered.

This applies also to membership certificates in the Boy Scouts of America which should never be given out except by the local council under whose jurisdiction the Scout properly comes.

The Objectives Of All Scout Tests

Section 6, Article XV, of the By-Laws of the National Council, states the vital objectives which should be held in mind in giving all scout tests. It reads as follows:

In all examinations, it should be borne in mind that the purpose of the tests and examinations is not to secure a mere technical compliance with

Introducing Scout _____ Troop

Please examine him thoroughly in _____ requirements, but rather to ascertain the scout's general knowledge of subjects studied, and practical rather than book knowledge is desired. A scout should be prepared at any examination for a review covering previous tests given him as well as to demonstrate that he knows the scout Oath and Law and is being guided thereby.

The soundest practice of today delegates the giving of the special subject examinations or test to the special group of instructors and examiners.

The soundest practice of today seeks to follow the scout theory of learning by doing and in the final tests to make deeds rather than words the basis.

To actually demonstrate and do the thing in question is a higher qualified test than to have the scout sit down and write about it.

Courts of Honor must avoid the dangers of traditional school methods of written examinations if scouting is to retain the advantage which scout activities give the scout program.

Let the examination be as near actual doing as is possible.

Cards such as the above are often times used for the signatures of the examiners:

d.) Holding Review

The Court of Honor is presumably composed of some of the outstanding men of quality in the community. They are to place the stamp of their approval as representing the city, upon the boy's work and advancement. They are to declare it genuine. Their own examiners have previously examined the boy and, with the Scoutmaster and the Scout Executive have certified him to the Court of Honor.

The function of Review is fundamentally to encourage the lad and dignify the Court's approval. To this end, the lad stands ready to be questioned not in a critical sense (that has been done by the examiner) but in a sympathetic manner giving the lad on his own initiative a chance to tersely tell the Court something about his "hobby." This right (or obligation) to review is clear cut and inherent in the responsible nature of the Court of Honor.

Needless, cornering questions which consume time, and perhaps humiliate the boy (or the inquisitor as the case may be) cannot be justified in a Scout Court of Honor.

e.) Conferring Awards

While practice varies somewhat as to details, yet it is under the authority of the Court of Honor that the awards of badges are made.

Following the lad's proper justification to the Court of the progress certified to it, it is eminently fitting for the Court to confer upon the lad, with a public ceremony of simple dignity, the recognition of the Movement.

Such achievement naturally is to be considered not as the goal but as a stepping stone for only that growth is significant which leads on to yet further growth. The scheme and ceremony of awards can do much to foster growth by showing the boys what interest the leading citizens have in the boy's advancement.

The New Council

To the Executive taking up work with a newly organized Council, the Court of Honor problem will early arise.

The old troops accustomed to independent action and standards must be reconciled to the new machinery and must cooperate therewith. Careful conferences with all concerned, with adequate time to "educate" them, will be time well spent as it will oft save later trouble.

Getting Scoutmasters to help recommend competent examiners and instructors will early give them added confidence in the Court and its work.

Court of Honor Procedure

It is very desirable to have the Scouts who have achieved progress appear before the Court of Honor as an awarding body. Such a body is logically made up of dignitaries, outstanding men in the community whose official action is significant to the boy and to his parents.

With any volume of awards to be made or indeed with but a few it is quite difficult to try to combine the functions of award with those of painstaking careful testing, which must be done by some one with specialized technical fitness for it.

It is required that the scout "personally appear before at least three members of the Court of Honor."

How may this best be done?
By division of labor.

(1) Instruction

- a) by the Scoutmaster in certain subjects.
- b) By special experts in technical and merit badge subjects.

- (2) Examination by this certified group of Instructors and Examiners in advance of the meeting of the Court.
- (3) The Examiners certify the fitness of the scout to the Court of Honor with the counter-signature of scoutmaster and Executive.
- (4) The Court reviews, approves or disapproves, and presents its awards.

While in many councils the review is very formal and very brief, the Court of Honor should recognize that it is responsible for seeing that standards are maintained.

When the lad "personally appears" before them, they may fitly enquire into what he has done to meet the requirements and merit the O. K. of the corps of Examiners.

An actual statement of what was done from the examiner may be illuminating.

It is well to remember as stated elsewhere in this chapter that the boy is not being subjected to jury trial or to cross questioning, he is before the Court with evidences of progress made, to have those evidences "vised" and to be so handled that the award of recognition for his progress shall confirm him in yet further progress.

It seems sound to have him bring before the Court things made or in some way demonstrate or tell the Court briefly about his specialty and what he has done in it.

The Lincoln, Nebraska, Council requires a scout who is presenting himself to the Court of Honor for First Class examination to bring with him:

1. Written account of fourteen mile hike. The account should be written in ink or with typewriter and on one side of the paper only.
2. "Twist" he has made and baked on a stick.
3. Map he has drawn of country one half mile square or of equivalent size containing at least fourteen symbols, including scale and compass direction, drawn in ink. No writing except title plate containing name, troop number and rank, also location of territory mapped.

4. Article of carpentry he has made.
5. Collection of leaves of ten trees or photographs personally taken of birds or tracks.
6. Map of stars showing astronomy requirements.
7. Evidence from school, parent and scoutmaster that requirement No. 11 has been lived up to.

Indeed with nearly seventy merit badges a terse succinct bird's-eye-view of the lad's work by himself should carry valuable thoughts to the Court which probably knows less about many badges than does the boy who has earned it. This of course was not true of the specialist examiner who previously made the boy meet high and exacting standards and who certifies thereto.

CHESTER COUNTY, PA., DUTIES, POLICY AND ORGANIZATION OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF HONOR

1. A chairman is appointed to preside at all of the sessions of the Court.
2. At least five men should be members of the District Court of Honor.
3. District Court of Honor should meet monthly.
4. Expert examiners are appointed to examine in subjects with which they are familiar. These men form the examining board of the District Court of Honor.
5. After being passed by an examiner the Scout should appear before the District Court of Honor (with at least three members present) at its regular monthly meeting with his signed application for Merit Badge. The recommendation of the examiner is accepted, provided the Scout measures up to the recommendations when questioned by the Court.
6. When the Scout has passed the requirements to the satisfaction of the Court, his application is signed and forwarded to Chester County Headquarters.
7. A public presentation should be made of Merit Badges or certificates. This meeting should be a public one with all Scouts, parents and friends attending. At this occasion a talk may be made on choosing a vocation, using Merit Badge studies as a basis. An inspiring talk on Scout Advancement may be given, urging the Scouts to strive for further honors, including Life, Star and Eagle grades.

Certificates, Merit Badge Applications and additional information will be gladly furnished free of charge by the County Headquarters.

Court of Honor Set-up and Operation

Executives Shaw and Drake of District of Columbia suggest division of labor; the main court for Merit Badges and a special committee thereof authorized for second and first class work. The latter is called the Committee of the Court of Honor for First and Second Class tests.

A. Merit Badge Court of Main Court.

1. Membership—Five or more qualified citizens.
2. Meetings—Either once or twice a month, omitting July and August.
3. Organization—
 Chairman—A Vice President of the local Council.
 Secretary—The executive or a member of Headquarters staff.

Where there are many applicants, court is divided into several sessions with three or more men in each, meeting in separate rooms.

4. Procedure.—

Scouts received one at a time; salute court; and are reviewed in subject; Merit Badge application blanks, properly endorsed by expert examiner, being already in hands of Secretary of Court. Most Councils require these to be returned from examiner two to ten days before meeting of Court.

Review sufficient to satisfy Court that scout is properly qualified for badge.

After review Scout salutes and retires.

5. Presentation—

Under direction of Court of Honor, at times and places designated by them—generally, a public function, with Chairman of Court, or important dignitary to award badges.

B. The Committee of the Court of Honor for first and second class tests.*

1. Function—

To review second and first class tests, and certify scouts as qualified; thus maintaining the same standards for all troops. Court does not examine Scouts; this is done by Scoutmaster for indicated tests, and by special examiners approved by court, for Signaling, First Aid, Map Making, and frequently for Nature Study.

2. Membership—

Deputy Commissioners and selected representative citizens or Troop Committeemen endorsed by Court of Honor; or Committee of Court itself.

*NOTE—This committee shall include such deputy as provided in Art. XV, Sec. 3, National By-Laws, see Constitution and By-Laws, Appendix A.

3. Plans of Operation—
    - (a) One Court meeting at a central place, before whom all Scouts appear, Court subdividing if there are many applicants.
    - (b) District Courts for each district, usually with Deputy Commissioner for that district as Chairman.
  4. Meetings—(Usually once or twice a month).
  5. Organization—

Chairman and Secretary and their other members.
Chairman usually a Deputy Commissioner.
  6. Procedure—

Scouts appear singly, presenting approved form certifying to completion of tests. Court reviews work done, satisfying itself that standards have been maintained and is privileged to question first class applicant, also on his second class and Tenderfoot Tests.
  7. Presentations—
    - (a) Tenderfoot and Second Class Badges usually presented by Scoutmaster at regular troop meeting.
    - (b) First Class badge usually presented by member Troop Committee, or some Scout Official not connected with troop; and often with elaborate ceremonies. (See Scoutmaster's Handbook for appropriate Investiture Ceremonies).

For many Councils the weak place in the above outline will be that two sessions are assumed, one to review and approve and one to award. It is easily possible to unite these into one session by regulating the number of candidates by the frequency of Court Sessions, and in large communities by the number of District Courts which subserve these functions for their individual districts.

In such cases of district organization it is sometimes found desirable to hold a big central union court for life and star and eagle and Honor Medal scout awards.

The Rochester, N. Y., Court of Honor is an example. The city is divided into five divisions, each division having a separate Court of Honor with Chairman and 5 members. Each District Court of Honor meets once in five weeks, so scheduled that one Court is in session each week. Although each Court meets in its own division, it is possible for a boy to attend any Examination.

Certified examiners are approved only after a review of their qualifications by the court of honor. No scoutmaster may be certified, except for camp or service out of his district; never for work with his own troop or those of his community.

In determining the ranking scout of the council the possession of Merit Badges is not the deciding factor.

Composition.

The Court of Honor is composed of—

A Chairman who is also a member of the Executive Com., the vice president Training Dept., the vice president Inspection and Award Dept., a clerk, who is the ranking Eagle Scout of the Council, twelve men, all members of the Council.

Regular Meetings are held quarterly for award.

Meetings monthly of the Committee of Three for reviewing credentials of scouts having passed examinations. This review does not, cover the subject of the examination. The examiner's certificate is sufficient. It does deal with the applicant's knowledge of the tenderfoot, second and first class work and his general attitude towards Scouting. The reasons for acquiring the badge applied for and encouraging future activity.

Place of meeting is the Court House. Open to public.

Program:

The Function of the Court of Honor (by a visiting council officer).

An Interpretation of the Scout Oath (by a scout).

Recitation of Scout Oath.

Recitation of Scout Law (Tenderfoot Scout).

Tenderfoot, second and first requirements (Scout).

Presentation of First Class Badge (Prest).

Investiture of Full Scout (Commissioner).

Interpretation of Merit Badge grade and requirements for Life, Star and Eagle badges (by a merit badge scout).

Presentation of Merit Badges (by Chairman).

Presentation of government or community service awards (by citizens).

Dismissal. Pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Program announcements are made by the Clerk of the Court.

The Scout Executive takes no part in this program. The Court sit in one group, the commissioner and staff in an other and the clerk with officiating scouts and citizens in the third.

The council as such take no part in the ceremony.

The idea is to make this a relatively serious ceremony. No songs, scout yells or other forms of entertainment used.

The Scouts are seated in troops.

Meetings are held in the County Court room.

SAN FRANCISCO COURT OF HONOR ORGANIZATION

The Chairman must be a member of the Executive Board.

The other members of the Court of Honor chosen from the Local Council membership, and include President of the City Board of Health; representative of American Red Cross; Scout Commissioner; three physicians; a Judge and three business men. The Court of Honor operates through its Board of Examiners, composed of experts selected by the Court as qualified to examine boys for Merit Badge work. Meetings are held during the second and fourth weeks of each month in the afternoon, and one meeting is held each month at night for the benefit of employed boys. The Court meets in the Court-room of one of the Judges of the city, and the boys are seated according to rank, being called one at a time before the Court, where he is questioned regarding his examination, and at which time he submits certificate of qualification. The Scout appears before the Court of Honor in much the same way that he does during his final examination. Various members of the Court alternate in making the address of presentation.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE PROGRAM

INTERVIEWS ARE HELD BY MEMBERS OF THE COURT OF HONOR WITH BOY SCOUTS RELATIVE TO THEIR VOCATIONAL PROBLEMS, AND AN EFFORT IS MADE TO PLACE BOYS IN OCCUPATIONS HOLDING THE BEST ADVANTAGES FOR ADVANCEMENT.

This last function is at once interesting and suggestive. Boys have a real right to such opportunity.

MIDDLETOWN, OHIO

The Court of Honor of the Middletown, Ohio, Council is composed of a Chairman and nine members each in charge of a section as shown below. Each secures experts for all of his subjects.

Sciences—8 Badges; Physical—6 Badges; Fine Arts—5 Badges; Mechanical Arts—11 Badges; Nature Study—6 Badges; Civics—4 Badges; Crafts—7 Badges; Outdoor—6 Badges; Agriculture—7 Badges.

WICHITA, KAS.

There is excellent advice in the suggestions of Scout Executive B. B. Davison of Wichita, Kansas: "The Court of Honor proceedings should be pretty well the same the country over. It should be worked out and given to the men to follow. They have little time to work out such a ceremony. Simplicity and brevity should be the paramount features. It should allow the Scout to place his mind on the meaning of the ceremony, rather than on the ceremony itself and doing or saying it right."

Based upon this suggestion the following suggestive scheme is presented:

Suggested Outline Program For Public Court of Honor Meeting

D. W. Lawrence—Field Dept.—National Council

1. Entrance of members of Court.
2. Bugle—Scout Call.
3. Formal entrance of candidates for awards.
4. Invocation suited to mixed religious group.
5. Pledge of allegiance to flag.
6. Second class } awards, with suitable investiture
First Class } ceremony, including brief review
Merit Badge } of scouts by members of Court.
7. Talk by Chairman, or a specially invited speaker, emphasizing ideals of Scouting, Oath and Law, and especially the value and importance of advancement in Scouting.
8. Scout Oath.

CHAPTER X

SCOUT HEADQUARTERS AND ITS WORK

by

Scout Executive C. A. Worden, Queens Borough, N. Y.

EDITORIAL NOTE:

Scout Headquarters exists primarily to RENDER SERVICE and PROVIDE INFORMATION. To do either of these intelligently necessitates RECORDS. Results can be measured only as results are KNOWN. Weaknesses can only be detected as records periodically reveal FACTS.

What records therefore, must the effective Council maintain?

- 1—ACCURATE AND APPROVED AND PERMANENT MINUTES of all Council and Committee meetings. (These are the source of executive authority. This will include record of budget, reports, etc.)
- 2—LETTER FILES containing copies of all correspondence involving decisions, policies, purchases, relationships, including instructions to paid staff.
- 3—ACCURATE RECORDS OF ALL INCOME and EXPENDITURE items with original bills and receipts. (This is essential to protect the Executive as well as the Council. These should be professionally audited at regular intervals.)
- 4—TROOP REGISTRATION including man and boy personnel kept down to date.
- 5—COURT OF HONOR RECORDS OF SCOUT PROGRESS. These should reveal the ranks of all scouts.
- 6—CAMP RECORDS of attendance, finances, and general results.
- 7—TURNOVER records of boys and leaders, showing age, rank, years of service and CAUSE of loss.
- 8—TALLY SHEET—A perpetual summary on all work is easily kept by adding daily changes.

The time has passed when a desk, a chair and a telephone—to say nothing of the proverbial hat—form the business office. Even the modern country store, in the interests of efficiency has given up its old round stove, and its saw-dust box around which the village orators and gossips congregated on chilly days.

"Efficiency," that more or less new and widely used word with which modern business has recently formed a speaking acquaintance has revolutionized that world and converted the slipshod business man into the Executive of the present time.

Progressive business today results only after efficiency methods have been adopted. The modern man is not fair to himself—to say nothing of those whom he represents—until he has become a student of efficiency.

To the Scout Executive, his Headquarters presents the first problem to be dealt with along the lines of efficiency.

One of the general criticisms heard regarding social and religious organizations is that they are not conducted on a business basis.

Office organization is a problem to which Scout Executives frequently give very little heed. Many are prone to put time, thought and energy into elaborate troop, field and Council organization schemes, which may not reach beyond the paper stage, and ignore entirely the fundamentals of their own office organization. This is a grave short-coming.

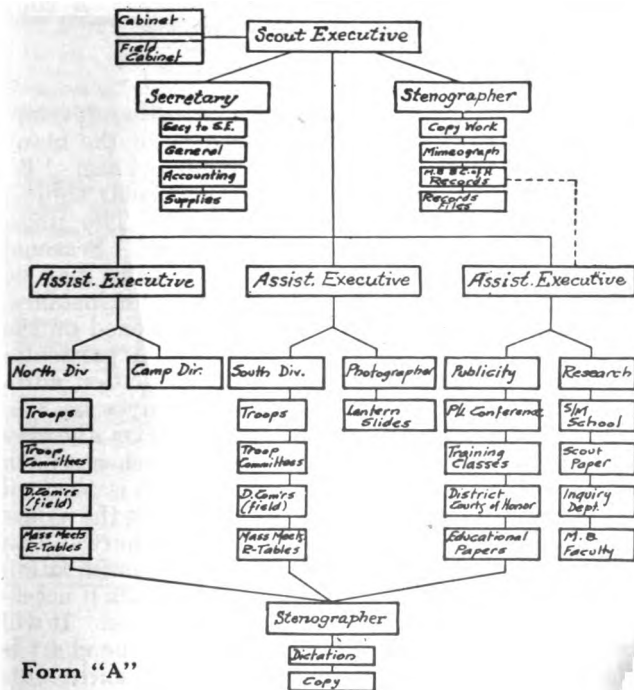

Office organization, no matter what the size of the field, will more or less naturally shape itself under three different heads, viz:—

1. The office and its equipment;
2. The staff and its functions;
3. The systems used in carrying on the work.

1. The office and its equipment. The Scout Executive's office is the fountainhead of Scouting in the Community. As people are judged by the company they keep, so will the Scout organization be judged, in large measure, by the appearance of Scout Headquarters. In many cases, upon entering an office one is immediately confronted with a counter and show-cases, giving the impression of a store and its attending commercialism, rather than that of a dignified business office. Posters are placed hit or miss upon the walls. Packages and boxes litter the floors. Truly, the first impression is not one that would breed confidence. The effect upon the staff is as unwholesome as it is upon the casual visitor.

The following, which are basic principles, should be borne in mind.

1. Locate the office as centrally as possible to the field covered. If possible, it should be in a prominent building with other well-established organizations or concerns.
2. Standardize the office furnishings, by having the desks, files, cabinets, chairs, and other furnishings of the same finish and style.
3. Instead of posters on the walls, framed pictures of Scout activities speak eloquently of the progress being made, and give a more cheerful appearance.
4. If conditions permit, have a general office, for the clerical force, and private offices for the Executives.
5. Arrange the desks and files so that the routing of the work is done economically and in an orderly manner.
6. Tidy desks vouch much for the efficiency of the ones using them.

Form "A"

Remember that Scout Headquarters is a place of and for business and it should not be used as a club room, a "hang-out" for men or boys, a museum, a storeroom nor a store. It should stand as a SERVICE STATION to those engaged in the conduct and promotion of Scouting. It should be a place for inspiration and information. It should be the record office for the archives of Scouting in the Community.

2. The staff and its functions:

Plan, and then state graphically, the functions of each one on the office staff. The plan will depend largely, of course, upon the size of the staff and the field covered. However, certain fundamentals are general. Form "A," on the preceding page, outlines the staff organization of one local Council. A copy should be in the hands of each employee.

For the Scout Executive himself, a further development of this plan is necessary because of the many matters passing through his hands. Form "B" automatically calls up daily some particular subject which might otherwise be overlooked. The items shown on the chart are standard activities. Seasonal activities and those which arise occasionally may be noted as they arise. It is not intended, for instance, that the "Court of Honor" is to be convened on the day shown on the chart, but that on that particular day, the Executive has called to his attention automatically any problems arising which must be considered in connection with the Court. On the day assigned for "Accounting" the Executive checks back on this subject with the staff member who is assigned to that particular task. In large territories, the names of towns or Districts are inserted on the chart and on the designated day the Executive gives consideration to conditions in those sections, checking back if necessary with the assistant, in whose field they lie. It will be seen that the system is flexible and if the chart is placed under a glass mat on the desk, the entire outline of the Executive's duties are constantly before him while the files are reposing in the cabinet ready for reference when necessary. This same system could be very easily extended to cover the weekly routine of every one on the staff.

The Executive's Time Chart 257

4/12/20

3—SYSTEMS

Letter Files

Particularly to the uninitiated systems and files sometimes present real problems and cause waste efforts. Each Executive should, therefore, study his requirements carefully, and if then unable to develop a workable and efficient system, call in a specialist from one of the houses supplying office equipment. These men will usually be glad to render assistance in return for an order for supplies. Some houses employ specialists whose services are free to the business public.

As an example of poor system, the writer recently found a very elaborate method for filing communications to and from the National office. The Executive had a separate file for each party with whom he had been in correspondence. He had not weighed the fact that whereas Mr. Brown might today correspond with him on a given subject, Mr. Jones might be the correspondent the next time the matter was brought up. In another office, an elaborate numerical system of filing was found and when asked to secure a certain letter (as a test of the system) such a letter could not be found and many other files were searched. Result:—No letter.

Through experience, the writer has found the best system to be the alphabetical with variations. For example: all letters of a general nature are filed behind plain alphabetical guides. Correspondence to and from the National Council is filed in monthly folders behind the general guide "B"—sub-guide "Boy Scouts of America." In instances where considerable correspondence is passing to another Council, Brooklyn or Manhattan, for example, separate files are made out and labelled for those councils and are then filed behind the general guide "B" or "M" in either of the cases cited. Matters frequently arise which result in many letters, as in the case of the "Jamboree," "Older Boy Problem," etc. Separate folders are prepared for each subject and are filed alphabetically behind a major guide; ("J" or "O" in the above two cases). For troop correspondence, it has been found most convenient to have a separate folder for each troop into which are filed letters, etc., from any source which may pertain to that particular troop. With the departmental plan of organization as developed in Queens, there are separate files for each department and committee thereof. This system is practically "self-controlled."

Above all things it is recommended that files be kept in a neat and tidy condition and up-to-date. Do not overcrowd the file folders as the letters are thus easily disarranged, and frequently damaged.

Cross Filing Device

Editorial Insert

Mr. E. S. Martin, Secretary of the National Editorial Board has an excellent, simple and inexpensive filing system for letters.

When a letter is written, two carbon copies are made—one on white paper which is placed in the subject files, with all other correspondence thereon—the other on green paper which is placed in an alphabetic file under the initial of the name of the addressee and with a notation on the sheet that the other carbon is in a certain subject file. e. g. letter from Mr. Brown on Court of Honor—the original letter and the white carbon are filed under Court of Honor in the subject file, while the carbon on the green paper is filed under B in the alphabetic file with a marginal notation to see Court of Honor.

The alphabetic file takes up very little space, and is less trouble than the customary "carding"—as it is made when the letter is written.

Registration

Troop registration (or charter blanks) and additional enrollments should be copied when received at the Council office and one copy filed in a folder similar to that shown in Form C. This set of folders properly separated by troop numeral guides contains the active Troop enrollment of the Council. When the charter application expires and is renewed or when the troop is considered "dead," the papers are taken out of these folders and filed in the regular troop letter file.

Desk Systems

The desk is the business man's work bench. It is a poor workman who cannot find his tools when needed. Study, therefore, the desk requirements and organize accordingly. A cleared desk is soothing syrup for overwrought nerves. A littered desk reminds one of the dog chasing his tail—a great deal of effort which does not get him anywhere. As suggestions: The upper left hand desk drawer can be used for the "days work" file; the drawer beneath as a temporary file for letters, replies to which are on the stenographer's note book; the bottom drawer, if there be one, for miscellaneous matters. The middle drawer—which is usually the scrap basket of the desk—can be converted into any orderly resting place for the tools of the Executive—pencils, pens, ruler, scissors, blank cards, etc. The upper right hand drawer holds the "tickler" and desk filing systems; whereas the large deep drawer underneath, equipped with letter folder arranged by months and days becomes the follow up file which brings correspondence and memoranda to the Executive's attention at specified times. Handy to the desk, a sectionette file will hold "matters pending" in folders indexed to suit the circumstances. Trays on the desk for "outgoing," "incoming," "file," etc., will help to "Keep the house in order."

In preparing for an efficient desk be careful to guard against an opposite extreme—i. e., the over-systematized desk.

Discard roll top desks as their pigeon-holes are only receptacles for jobs which "will be done tomorrow," but which in reality are never done.

SYSTEMS

Card Systems

Card systems should be adopted wherever possible. These should be as simple as is consistent with efficiency and good business practice. The cards should not be "loaded up" with a mass of detail for which Headquarters is absolutely dependent upon the field and which is seldom obtained. Always remember that Scoutmasters are volunteers. They are not paid as Executives. They are not paid to promote Scouting and they usually abhor detail. Incomplete statistics are as bad as none at all.

In the main, card systems are recommended for the following:

1. Individual record card (Form D) for each enrolled Scout. This card to be filed alphabetically behind a general guide card signifying the troop number. The information on this card is to be taken from the troop registration, and is to be supplemented by information as to the Scout's advancement supported by certificates of tests passed which may be filed behind the card.

On the reverse side of the card, (Form E) all Merit Badges should be listed, and dates inserted as tests are passed. Metal tips placed over the tops of the cards in certain positions will show the ranks of the Scouts.

In the event that a Scout does not reregister when his membership expires, his card is taken out of the Troop file and placed in a "dead" file, alphabetically arranged.

2. Card index of Scoutmasters and Assistant Scoutmasters and Councilmen (Form K). Some Councils also "card" the Troop Committeemen.

3. Cards naming the expert examiners and Merit Badge Faculty so cross indexed as to show:

A study of systems in use by a number of Councils discloses the fact that when a Scout enrolls as a Tenderfoot a card is made out for him and that when he reaches Second Class and finally First Class rank additional cards of special design and color are made out for his file record. Much of the data which appeared on the original tenderfoot card is in each case rewritten on the file card of the next highest rank. This necessitates an additional cost for extra forms as well as

In certain cases where Technical or Professional training has no bearing upon the qualifications of an Expert, it is important that such facts of experience in the particular field should be given as will justify the Court of Honor in approving the candidate.

It is suggested that Experts may give candidates many valuable ideas from their own larger experience and thus broaden their outlook beyond the formal requirements of the Handbook. For examination, however, we cannot in the interests of justice and uniformity go beyond a liberal interpretation of the Handbook requirements.

Finance and Accounting

Many honest men have been branded otherwise because of the poor accounting methods they used. Personal funds and Council funds should never be intermingled.

The Scout Executive owes it to himself, to his Council and to his contributing constituency to keep complete and accurate record of all financial transactions. The scrap of paper or the crude memo may serve for the moment, but soon the record is lost and the accounts are in a chaotic condition.

If an Executive has had no accounting experience, he is urged to immediately secure the service of an expert. It may be that on the Local Council there is such a man whose advice and physical assistance would be inestimable.

This, however, should not excuse the Executive from becoming familiar with accounting methods as accounting is one of the essentials demanded in the proper promotion of business enterprises.

It is not the intent here to give a treatise on accounting for that would be impossible in the space allotted; nor is it deemed advisable to go into systems which would require the understanding of a bookkeeper or an accountant to interpret. What is shown and explained will be such forms as are necessary to carry a Council's financial records at a minimum of both labor and equipment.

The books which will be discussed are

- 1—Journal Form V.
- 2—Cash Book Form W.
- 3—Ledger Form X.
- 4—Voucher Record—Form Y.
- 5—Subscription Ledger (or card) Form Z.

Certain books called "Complete account books are used for some professional accounts and combine the first three books above named in one volume, but such books are not generally practicable for general business purposes."

The Journal—(Form V) is a book containing all adjusting entries in addition to any other entries which cannot be properly recorded in any of the other books of original entry. As is shown in the cut, the Journal has been used to transfer to "Field Supplies" and "Court of Honor" accounts in the Ledger, two items which had previously been entered in other accounts. It would not have been policy to make original entries of these transfers in the Ledger for there would be no place available for an explanation of the need of transfer—no "supporting document" in other words

Form "V" Journal

The Cash Book (Form "W"—receipts) gives record of all funds received and deposited. In explanation of the several items:

Upon recording the subscriptions pledged, a Journal entry is assumed to have been made charging the "Subscription Ledger" account with the total amount shown by the subscription report, and crediting "Accounts Receivable." When Jones and Dixon paid their subscriptions, entry was made in the cash book and their respective accounts in the Subscription Ledger credited with the amount paid. As the "Subscription Ledger" account had previously been charged with their pledges, credit is now rendered by transferring the amounts to the opposite side of the Ledger account. The notation "10" shows that entry has been made. Likewise, as "Accounts Receivable" had been credited with the amount, it is, by transferring the total in the "Pledge" column to the "Accounts Receivable" account in the Ledger as noted by the "20"—(page number of the account in the Ledger) discharged.

The sales item of $25.00 and the camp credit of $300 are, as signified by notations "12" and "13" credited, respectively, to "Merchandise" and "Camp" accounts in the Ledger, as both of these accounts have profitted by the transactions.

The total of $1,325 in the "Bank" column becomes a charge, as indicated by "1" against the "Cash" account in the Ledger.

On the credit side of the cash book (Form "W-1") all disbursements are entered. The total of the "Accounts Payable" column is charged to that account in the Ledger to off-set the credit which was made when the Voucher Record was closed and the Ledger page—number 24—is noted to signify entry. The total of the "Bank" column is credited to "Cash" in the Ledger. The balance as of November 1st, as shown is carried forward to the debit side of the next page of the cash book as an entry under November 1st.

Form "W-1"
(Cash Book—Disbursements)

The Ledger (Form "X") is the book used for assorting all the debits and credits from entries in the records of original entry and books of summarization. These debits and credits are entered in the Ledger under the names of the accounts involved. A page, or section of a page, in the Ledger is reserved for and headed with the name of each separate account, and entries are made accordingly.

Of course it is understood that the left hand side of the Ledger is the debit side and that it receives all charges; whereas the right hand or credit side receives all of the credits. As an example, the cut shows the "Office Salaries" account page taken from a Ledger. The monthly totals of "Office Salaries" have been entered from the Voucher Record to the Ledger, as the book of final entry. At the end of the year, the total of $922 as a loss—for there was no tangible property to show for the expenditures,—was "charged off" by Journal entry to the "Profit and Loss" Account where it stood, not as a credit as here shown but as a charge. These two entries, it will be seen were then in balance and the "Profit and Loss" account showed the charge originally appearing against "Office Salaries." When all such "charge off" entries had been made, the regular running accounts appearing in the Voucher Record showed a "clean slate" ready for the next year's entries. The "Profit and Loss" account had in the meantime, however, increased its total by all of these "charge-off" entries until it was possible to ascertain the actual loss for the year. This loss would, of course, be decreased by credit entries—such as profits on some accounts—which would be similarly handled.

Form "X" Ledger

In modern accounting the Voucher Record—with its accompanying Voucher has become a recognized standard in financial systems. Convenience, accuracy and economy make this method the best disbursement record.

The Voucher Record, a sheet of which is shown in Form "Y" is merely a record of all vouchers prepared, usually entered as monthly units—and shows the voucher number, check number, name of payee, total amount of voucher (Vouchers Payable) and then a series of columns corresponding in title to the various items in the budget to which the vouchers are chargeable. All of the columns are totalled and closed monthly, the total of the column (which we will call "Vouchers Payable" column) is transferred to a like account in the Ledger as a credit. The totals of each remaining column is transferred to its respective account in the Ledger as a charge.

The total of the vouchers in the Voucher Record which do not have a check number noted opposite them constitute "Vouchers Payable" and should tally in total with the like account in the Ledger.

VOUCHERS

The simple voucher (Form AA) size 8" x 8½", used in conjunction with the Voucher Record, contains all the facts incidental to the financial transaction. The interior portion of the Voucher gives short particulars bearing on the charge, the record of audit, the approval to pay, and finally the receipt of the payee.

On the reverse side, (Form BB) appears a list of distribution items which correspond with the items in the Council budget. The amounts chargeable against budget items as shown on the invoices attached to and covered by the Voucher are to be charged against the proper account.

Sometimes, the Voucher and check are one and the same document as shown in Form "CC". When this form is used, the invoices, etc., which usually form the contents of the Voucher are not sent to the payee with the Voucher, but are held in the Council office until the return of the Voucher-check.

Some organizations do not care to send their Vouchers to the payee because of their value as evidence of the transaction. In that case a transmittal blank is mailed with the check, and the check endorsement is considered as a receipt.

Petty Cash

A petty cash account should be on hand in every office with which to pay the many small items of expense which are presented daily. It should be definitely stipulated what accounts should be paid in this manner. The usual items are carfare, express, postage, etc.

No expenditure should be made without a "Petty Cash Voucher" similar to that shown in Form "EE" to substantiate the payment.

All "Petty Cash Vouchers" should be summarized monthly and attached to Form "FF" for vouchering.

Supply Account

In handling the many receipts resulting from the sale of such supplies as scout insignia it has been found advisable to use an autographic sales slip in duplicate—the original for the customer and the carbon for the office files. The sales slips are entered in a sales register, on the debit side—giving date, ticket number and amount and the money deposited in the sales box. When the amount warrants a deposit in the bank, the money is put through the regular channels and a credit entry of the amount deposited is made in the sales register. The balance, if any, as shown by the totals in the sales register should tally with the amount left in the sales box. The slips are then filed away in numerical order for reference purposes. Form "GG" shows the autographic sales slip.

Form "HH"

In connection with the securing of financial supporters and later collecting their pledges, Form "II" and "JJ" are suggestive. Each form is business-like,—of necessity—and has a strong appeal.

The name of a prominent local banker as Treasurer will add greatly to the prestige of the appeal and contact. It gives confidence.

Form Letters should be developed where the time of the Executive and his staff has to be taken into consideration. A careful study of the files will disclose that many letters may be reduced to standardized forms. By numbering these various forms for identification purposes and then directing that a form letter bearing a certain number be sent in reply to a letter received, the time of the Executive is saved in dictating and the time of the stenographer in taking notes.

Copies of all registrations and additional enrollments should be made and filed in local council offices. Many times, Executives taking post have found that their predecessors had made no such record. The result has been an additional burden upon the National Office to supply what an efficient Executive would already have in his own files.

It is a good rule to permit no document to pass through an office to a depository outside of the office without "striking" a copy of it. There is no telling when the Executive may be called upon for the record or the facts contained in the record.

Business Cards

Your business card is your forerunner. Its appearance upon presentation often determines whether or no you are to have admission to the "sanctum sanctorium." You should, therefore, have your card neat and business like. Use a simple style of type and few printed words. If you are fortunate enough to have engraved cards, so much the better. If not, there is a printing process now used by some printers which raises the letters on the card. The next time you present this little ambassador of yours see if the recipient does not automatically run his fingers over the surface of it.

Standard Sized Forms

It is strongly recommended that a standard sized form be adopted. The 4" x 6" index card is ample large for any data which will need to be recorded. In other forms, the 8½" x 11", standard letter sheet size is convenient.

In reviewing the systems used by some councils one is impressed by the ridiculous size of some of the forms. It must be remembered that some sizes do not cut out of regular run paper without loss and that the printer is not the loser.

Numbering Forms

In ordering the various printed forms in use, it is well to have each given a form number and have that number together with the quantity, date of order and initial of printer appear in very small type in one corner, as:—"Form 5—2 M—8-10-20 E P Co."

For ready reference a separate folder might be placed in the letter file in which would be filed a sample of all forms used.

Troop Registrations

The problem of following down Troop reregistrations is an ever present one. Some Executives notify the troops by letter a month in advance of the re-registration date and enclose the necessary papers for filing. In the event of failure to register on time a system of follow-up postcards is brought into play. On the message side, each card calls attention to the delinquency in no uncertain terms.

On the address side short criptic statements are made such as:

(First Notice, green card)

"The Registration Chart at Scout Headquarters shows Green card standing for your troop—Avoid the hated red flag—Reregister at once."

(Second Notice—red card)

"Red flag standing—Avoid the disgraceful yellow flag—Save the honor of your troop—reregister."

(Third Notice—yellow card)

"Yellow flag standing—Final warning—A real scout never quits. Reregister."

A LIBRARY of books bearing on Scouting subjects should be in every Scout office. It will prove excellent as a reference library. Public libraries have frequently been kind enough to furnish such books for permanent use.

Scrap Book

It is advisable to have a large scrap book into which can be pasted in chronological order all press clippings on local Scouting.

A DAILY DIARY should be kept by each Executive in which is noted his personal activities and contacts of the day. This will often prove very useful in checking back beyond the limit of memory.

Delivery Boxes are installed in many Council Headquarters where mail, etc. for troops is deposited pending a call from the Troop messenger who is delegated to act as postman. In small cities, or where transportation problems are not perplexing, this system works very satisfactorily and saves much in postage charges.

Office Appliances

It will be found that the installation of a mimeograph machine as well as a mechanical addresser will prove of value when frequent bulletins are being sent to the field.

As Secretaries of Councils, Executives will find it very convenient to draft pro forma minutes of each Council or Board meeting before it takes place. The minutes should outline the program of the meeting, and state in full text the resolutions to be acted upon. With a set of such minutes in the hands of each member, resolutions can be altered to suit the sense of the meeting in far less time than would be taken to draft the original minutes.

The Scout Executive should see that complete minutes are made and properly filed to cover every meeting of the Council and its Committees. Such a procedure will, in many cases, settle disputes which are bound to arise.

Conclusion

The forms which are shown in this Chapter are those deemed necessary for the successful conduct of a Scout Executive's Headquarters. More elaborate systems could be and have been developed, but there is grave danger in stretching the point of efficiency so far that it will break. It is advisable to reduce the mechanism of Scouting to the minimum else card indexing and organization will take all the time at the Executive's disposal and the boy in Scouting will become an unknown quantity.

An endeavor should be made to work for simplicity of form and routine.

Office Records

The following description of records is from the Aurora, Illinois, Council and indicates some of the "follow up" methods used. Any system of records and checks to be meaningful must be kept down to date. With limited office force this makes simplicity imperative.

CHAPTER XI

MEASURING RESULTS

Knowing What the Results Are

Just as the Inventory, and Planning definite objectives are initial steps, so Measuring Results is the last step in any intelligent effort. Were the objectives attained? What was accomplished?

It is at once obvious that measurement of results is conditioned upon knowing What the results are:

Records is the answer! Science enters when records begin, because thereafter judgments are not guesses but are basable on facts—they may be measured, they become quantitative. Records are therefore necessary.

They must also be adequate, available, and as simple as possible. Some men in Scout work say "This office work and complicated records is well and good probably—but it isn't Scouting. I'll work with the boy." Agreed! Now it's over—what did he accomplish? Shall he be the sole judge? No—others must also judge his results.

How can we determine? "Records."

Records then are kept that the next service to boyhood may be done in the accurate, scientific, quantitative light of past service. We must avoid its mistakes and capitalize its strength.

Standards

Assuming that such records are kept, how shall the results be measured? There must be measuring rods or standards, and one of the serious tasks of any new or growing movement is to create sound standards. In such an effort there are certain facts which it is important to note:

I. Standards are natural growth, not imposed from without.

Standards inhere in the very nature of our life. Anyone working soon learns there are different ways of doing things and among these are better ways. Comparison and selection at once produces a standard. Sound standards arise from experience and are not "wished on" from without.

II. Standards do not fix a pulseless uniformity but establish a minimal level above which individual initiative and ability and power and leadership may do their best.

A scout should be standard. Why? Standard not in the sense that every scout must be no greater or better or more efficient than any other scout—but standard in the sense that every scout shall come up to a certain level at least, and we hope above that level. Take for example the scout "Good Turn." We have said a scout should do at least one "Good Turn" daily to some person. "Does that mean that when a scout has done his one "Good Turn," he can close the windows of his soul and no more go about looking for a chance to do good? No indeed. It means that he ought to at least have one "good turn" to his credit, but that represents a minimum, a point above which his individual energy and initiative shall make possible a further and larger and better result.

III. Standards provide a definite goal or objective, or target minimal but real—a a point on the thermometer we've asked every scout to reach.

Too much effort lacks a conscious goal—a definite objective to reach.

Shooting, like achieving, is relatively simple. Know what you want to hit, aim at it with your loaded gun and then pull the trigger. Standards foster efficiency through providing a target.

IV. Standards in social work, grail-like move onward.

Standards of social service (unlike the standard weights and measures in Washington, D. C.) do not stay "put." They are elastic in that they keep growing.

The very opportunity and genius of our standards is that as we attain a certain level we are able from that point of vantage to see above that and beyond, yet finer things to be and do for our boys.

Indeed the concept of standards as low-water marks has itself encouraged individual Councils to go ahead in sound growths whither we all have later followed them.

V. Standards cut waste.

Indeed it is part and parcel of the idea of a standard to select the best ways, which means avoidance of the wasteful ways and results. Standards cut the wastes of omission and of commission.

VI. Standards are great eveners of men.

They even them up not by holding back the superior who would set up their own methods—but they even up by bringing up the poorer quality to an attainable standard these alone would have never initiated.

VII. Standards foster morale.

Standards provide a definite thing to accomplish so that the satisfaction of success, of mastery can come to him who achieves. Both he and his community can know if he has met the requirements. This begets community confidence.

How Do We Get Standards?

- A) By compiling the facts of today and yesterday.
- B) By studying such facts covering numerous places and cases over quite a time period.
- C) What have the averages been?
- D) What has the wastage been?
- E) What are the needs to be met?
- F) What are the resources available?
Resources of men and of money?

- G) What then in the judgment of your advisors and in the light of the above facts is a fair goal to set as a standard?
- H) An experimental effort or trial must then be made to see if the objective can be reached. Failure may lie in the effort or in the goal set.
- I) Gradually out of such experience will emerge a common recognition—that e. g. not less than 5 or 10 or 20 or “some” per cent of the boys should be enrolled.

STANDARDS FROM THE FIRST TEN YEARS

- A) The general nature of the scout organization has through a decade's experience been produced and established with a socially sound general form of local organization.

Standard Constitution—see Chapter IV, p. 74

Standard By-Laws “ “ “ p. 81

How to organize a troop “ “ I p. 7

- B) The general nature of the Program while elastic yet has minimum standards set up in its Oath and Law and in the Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class, Merit Badge, Life, Star, Eagle and Veteran ranks.

A standard type of Training Course with certification thereof has been developed by the National Department of Education.

A standard quality of camping privilege has been made possible through the minimal standards set up from experience by that Department.

A standard quality of reading matter has been similarly set up by the Library Department.

Standard uniform and insignia have been authorized and protected by the Federal Charter.

- C) The genius of the educational method, the psychology of the movement is standardized through adhering to the “learning by doing” philosophy. Scouting is thus set apart from usual educational procedure in that it builds skill and character and citizenship through doing, through the actual exercise and living of the standard. (Beginnings in standardizing methods of instruction, meetings, hikes, contests, etc. were made in the new Handbook for Scoutmasters—1920.

D) The major objectives of scouting as affirmed in its constitution and formally recognized at the First National Conference of Executives:

- 1) Character Building
  - 2) Citizenship Training
  - 3) Physical Fitness

STANDARDS TO BE PERFECTED IN THE SECOND DECADE

Anything worth doing is worth doing well. Hence the actual answer to the above query is that probably every fundamental step in scout service could have minimum standards set up for it through mobilizing alternative experiences and out of them drawing such standard efficiency conclusions. Doubtless time and experience will do this. The first decade has produced the program tried and proved, and with it a socially sound, locally responsible scheme of organization for its use.

The second decade must produce the needed leadership, and must further perfect the training and permanent holding of that leadership. It must also create standards and means of evaluating the service of the leadership.

A) A more standard leadership.

- 1) Standards of Personnel are now being prepared to help meet this need
  - a) For Scoutmasters see Chapter VI.
  - b) For Scout Executives see Chapter II.
- 2) Quality of Character is secured by selection

The First National Executives Conference clearly affirmed that:

- a) Character in a Scout Leader is basic.
- b) He must practice what he wants boys to do.
- c) He must be actively and normally religious.

- d) He must grow intellectually.
  - e) He must know and do his job.
- 3) Their knowledge and efficiency must be increased through training. This means that the excellent beginnings made in training Troop Committeemen, Scoutmasters, Patrol Leaders, Scribes, etc., shall be further developed. Methods, content, grading, ways of taking it to the man! all these must be made the object of extensive study, of research, of experiment and of evaluation with resultant standard "best methods." See Chapter VI.
  - 4) A more permanent tenure. Care in selection by the Parent Institutions, troop Committee; better training graded, varied, individual, holding and helping; finer morale created and sustained through warm personal qualities and through a vision of boy need—these must be developed. See Chapter II.

B) A more standard outcome in the life of the Individual Boy.

- 1) This will come locally through the better quality of man as leader.
- 2) Through the better training mentioned above including specifically knowledge of Boy nature.
- 3) Through the individual leader working deliberately toward specific objectives with the best methods for realizing them being made available to him.
- 4) A well organized Court of Honor (see Chapter IX) can do much through standardizing its instruction and testing. In all these the vital standard must be that the scout be able and be called upon to do, not merely to know.
- 5) What should be a satisfactory moral outcome of the program? Voelker's study of the enhancement of Trustworthiness by 90 days of Scout training on new groups (with proper non-scout parallel control or test groups) revealed a 22% quantitative increase in trustworthiness. While most men will not desire or find it desirable now to thus try to test moral outcomes in laboratory fashion yet it is important that qualitative judgments from parents, pastors, teachers, the boys themselves and others be used to supplement one's own judgment of outcomes. The results should show in the boy's life. Definite effort should be directed to establishing high standards. Perhaps the safest guaranty is the tone of the unconscious atmosphere of the leadership, including one's self. Lofty personal standards tend to be soon reflected. "Character is caught not taught."

- 6) Service is a moral outcome. What individual and community "good turns" should be a fair goal? The minimum standard of a "daily good turn" is one so vital to the real spirit of scouting that its practice should be kept focal in attention and emphasis. Doing it one's self to the boys and others creates a sound personal background for emphasis. Without the "good turn" there is no Scouting. Two community "good turns" annually should be a minimum which most groups will multiply several fold.
- 7) The program through merit badge and advisers should link definitely with vocation.

C) Local Council Standards of Service.

In attempting to set up numerical standards of achievement for local or national work there are a few factors which should color the interpretation of mere figures.

- a) The age of the council
- b) Progress already made

- c) The annual objective
 d) What have been the facts for other councils during the past year?

It is important that these facts be reduced to a common denominator so as to make comparisons possible.

For example to say that one city has 1,000 Tenderfoot Scouts and another has 200 tells little—the significant thing is what percentage of the scouts are Tenderfoot.

This last is done in the following summary.

Dec 31, 1919 Population	Av. No. Scouts	Av. No. Troops	No. Pop. to 1 Scout	% of Avail. Boys	% Tenderfoot	% Second Class	% First Class	No. Scouts per Merit Badge Scout	No. Scouts per Scoutleader	Total per Scout Expend.
Class A Over 1,000,000	5795	233	349	3.73	58.7	22.2	5.9	21.3	3.9	$ 6.45
Class B 400,000– 1,000,000	2022	85	282	4.47	62.0	24.8	10.6	16.7	4.1	$ 7.63
Class C 125,000– 400,000	1089	44	186	6.97	69.3	21.3	6.6	14.3	3.4	$11.34
Class D 75,000– 125,000	607	26	161	7.69	66.7	30.3	9.8	16.8	3.1	$10.36
Class E 35,000–75,000	319	15	161	7.84	70.0	27.2	9.0	13.8	2.3	$16.21
Class F Under 35,000	213	10	101	13.51	69.0	27.2	18.9	18.3	2.2	$17.63
Grand Averages	637	26	211	9.4	67.9	25.5	8.4	13.8	3.1	$12.06

Average Results attained by six groups of cities under First Class Council for year ending Dec. 31st, 1919.

1) What % of available boys 12–19 should be enrolled? Nat'l. Average (1919) 9.4%. (1st class Councils.)

The average for the country is 9.4% or but one in ten. The smaller the city, the greater the % of boys enrolled, the percentage passing steadily from the Metropolitan average of 3.73% to the cities under 35,000 which reach 13.51% of their boys.

Should not a growing record be made year after year, measurably increasing the % of boys reached?

Communities below the national average have a real task to become average.

Communities above the national average will do well to push onward as the highest percentage of boys recorded is 49.8% (Lewistown, Mont.)

With boys yet unreached no character building and citizenship training program can stop.

2) What should be a fair age distribution of the scouts?

On the above chart is the average percentage age line of 100 councils 1920 and also those of Lancaster, Pa. and Champaign, Illinois. The Lancaster line approaches a line which holds up all the way across. The distribution would be  $12\frac{1}{2}\%$  in each age if no one died or dropped out and if there were no growth.

When the percentage in the 12 and 13 years together in an established council rises above 38-40% it means that there are too few older scouts left. There is excellent ground for urging that the 18 year old should be 8-10% of the scout enrollment. Each council should better the average record above.

3) What percentage of loss (if any) should be accepted as inevitable?

(a) Scoutmaster Loss. The average % for all First Class Councils in 1919 was 33%; 22,922 registered during 1919—7,542 dropped. (See Chapter XXII, p. 471.)

(b) Troop Loss. The average % for the First Class Councils in 1919 was 19%. (See Chapter XXII, p. 472.)

(c) Scout Loss. In 1919 one scout in every three was dropped.

Every council should strive to keep below these averages—which are dangerously high.

4) What is a fair and defensible annual per scout cost? (Annual First Class Council Average $12.06.) This should not include permanent equipment, camp site, etc. expenses, only the cost of actual operation.

The table above shows a higher per scout cost in the smaller cities ranging from $6.45 in Metropolitan to $17.63 in cities under 35,000 with a range from $2.29 to $63.50 per scout.

Age of council is a vital interpreting factor as a Council just beginning may have the overhead expense which could handle 300 scouts as well as the 30 they have for example.

However per scout costs can only be justified in terms of the results in % of boys reached, progress made, etc., etc.

The real question is what could the metropolitan group spending $6.45 do if they could have $17.63 or even the National First Class Council average of $12.06 per boy? The larger councils need more money and they have relatively fewer first class scouts and merit badges than the smaller cities and also reach a smaller percentage of the available boys! The reason must be sought.

Local Council Standards of Progress

1) What percentage of growth should be sought? Nationally the percentage was 8.8 in 1919, over 1918.

It is important that growth be permanent; be natural, not mushroom; be continuous, not "spurdy."

Perhaps the most significant standard is to fix a possible growth objective and meet it. It would seem that growth might properly at least keep pace with the population growth.

Many have suggested that a 10-20% growth annually is entirely reasonable to seek.

In determining this locally it is desirable to have the percentages for a series of years, the inventory of unoccupied territory and of eligible institutions therein, and an inventory of community boy life.

The average troop in the U. S. has about 20 in it. Adding 5 boys to a troop would at once add 25% to the enrollment. To grow 10% is only necessary for every troop to add 2 or 3 boys.

Boys must not be taken in more rapidly than can be given adequate leaders.

Another and inverse measure of this question is found in the number of population to one scout.

2) What should be the percentage distribution of scouts among Tenderfoot, Second and First Class?

The above summary indicates that the national figures are approximately 67% Tenderfoot 25% Second Class 8% First Class with 1 scout in 14 getting merit badges

It is good scouting to strive to keep the Tenderfoot Class smaller—probably not over 50%.

The fall of the year will naturally find more Tenderfoot than the coming of the next summer as the interval will have permitted advancement.

Allegheny Co. Council set up the standard of each scout to advance at least one rank during the year. That is simple and if done guarantees steady progress.

3) What merit badge progress should the scouts be expected to reach?

Certainly the rates of 1 in 14 is low, though one should remember that there are only 8.4% First Class.

If each eligible scout will earn not less than 2 merit badges annually: if the ratio of scouts to one merit badge scout be kept below 14 to 1—these, while not too high, represent goals attainable.

The other items of the above table are to be found in the appendix and should be studied comparatively in setting up local standards.

CHAPTER XII

THE PUBLICITY PROGRAM OF THE LOCAL COUNCIL

W. M. Kiplinger—Regional Scout Executive

The local council has continually before it the problem of educating its community as to what the Boy Scouts of America stand for and how the program of Scouting can be utilized. Few public institutions have been able to go far without the aid of constructive publicity; hence it is imperative that every Scout Executive acquire a working knowledge of the fundamentals of publicity, which is the quickest and most effective way of reaching the people of the community.

The successful council must educate its community to appreciate boyhood and to know the problems of boys' work in the community. The task of making the community acquainted with the conditions of its boyhood and how the Scout program meets their needs is one of the most important problems of the Scout Executive and he should have the assistance of a strong committee of the council to plan this feature of his work. Every activity of the local council is in a more or less degree dependent upon the publicity program. The relationship of publicity to the raising of money, to enlisting leadership, to camp activities, is such as to make it essential that adequate attention be given the question of publicity by the local council.

WHAT SCOUT PUBLICITY SHOULD ACCOMPLISH

"First, it must awaken the community to a consciousness of the fact:

- a. That there are boys maturing in the community.
- b. That these boys have needs different from adult needs.
- c. That what these boys do determines their habits—determines largely the kind of citizens they shall be.
- d. That the providing of things for these boys to do cannot be with social safety left to chance; that boy wastage spells community danger.
- e. That the community must therefore recognize the need of purposeful character and citizenship building service.
- f. That the community must be inspired to meet the need.

Second, the publicity program must reveal the fact that:

- a. Scouting offers a proved program for boy need.
- b. While the program is national it is for local use, run by local men for the benefit of local boys.
- c. The program is fundamentally and actively religious though non-sectarian, treating Catholic, Protestant, and Jew with equal "respect" for the convictions of each.
- d. The churches have endorsed and are widely using this program to make the church a hub of the recreational and community service life of its boys.
- e. The scheme of organization is democratic and representative.
- f. Scouting provides the community with a wealth of social service from its boys, it awakens boys to do something for the community that the "Good Turn" means "going about seeking to do good."
- g. The value of boy service to the community has been very generally under-estimated.
- h. Thus providing the boys with chances to participate in community life it trains its boys to become later leaders of community activities.

(by Dr. H. W. Hurt, in "Scout Executive" June 1920)

PUBLICITY METHODS

There are several headings under which the subject of publicity may naturally group, as:

- |                   |                        |
|-------------------|------------------------|
| 1. The Press.     | 4. The Picture.        |
| 2. Scout Service. | 5. Demonstration.      |
| 3. The Voice.     | 6. Indirect Publicity. |

THE PRESS

Newspaper publicity is of great value, in that it quickly reaches thousands of homes. It must contain the following elements:

1. Human Interest.
2. News value.
3. Must be non-technical in nature.
4. Must possess a general as well as a class appeal.
It must be written to reach the greatest number of people.
5. Should contain names.

A regular Scout column in a local newspaper is a good feature. The advantage of it lies in the fact that Scouts and Scout leaders look for it, and find there many items of interest. The weakness of the regular column lies in the attitude of the public toward any departmental stuff; they are liable to skip it. The Executive should plan on conducting a Scout column for those interested, but should run special stories often which will interest the general public. Care should be taken to split news among the various papers of the community. It is important that no one paper be favored; it is wise to have newspaper men on the council.

After considering what the newspaper will accept as good news, the Executive should realize that every story which is run about Scouting should have a definite objective; namely:

Objective

1. To win the support of the general public.
2. To stimulate a desire in the heart of readers to have their boys become Scouts.
3. To sustain morale.
4. To create a desire in non-scouts to join troops.
5. To awaken men to the possibilities of Scout leadership.

Care should be taken to avoid:

1. Sensationalism which is not lasting, and which will key up the readers to expect the impossible.

2. Stirring up class feelings.
3. Executives should see that items do not appear in their papers, which will lead sects and factions into believing that Scouts are being used against them. In this connection it is well to emphasize the value of suppression as well as the value of publication.
4. Care must be taken to see that trivialities which may give the public the impression that Scouting is a petty sort of a movement are kept out of the newspapers.

Difference Between News and Propaganda

News paints a word picture only—it is written to appeal to the greatest number of readers. Interest is the main objective, and it matters not whether the story will help or hurt the subject that they write on.

Propaganda, on the other hand, is definitely biased in favor of a subject—to illustrate—it is actually good news from the standpoint of the newspaper when a Boy Scout drowns; for here the unusual has happened, not an ordinary boy but a Scout, one who is supposed to have a knowledge of water. As good as this story is from the angle of the newspaper, it is ruinous from the angle of the Scout movement. On the other hand, if a Scout should be drowned in attempting to save life, the story could be written as an illustration of the spirit of sacrifice which is instilled by Scouting.

News Material

Every piece of Scout service rendered presents an opportunity for publicity. Constantly calling the attention of the public to service rendered by Scouting is essential to the success of Scouting.

A carefully prepared story on the Court of Honor makes good reading, and helps both the Scout and the movement.

The material sent out by the publicity department of the National Council, furnishes a basis for splendid news stories. This material, however, should be given a local turn whenever possible.

The Executive will find constant news to give out of informative and inspirational character in the printed material sent out regularly from the National Council Office. The Chief Scout Executive's page of official news in "Boys' Life" in addition to the regular issue of Scouting, contains official news of the movement nationally.

Almost every activity of the local council—hikes, camps, troop meetings, competitions, council meetings, etc.,—furnishes material for newspaper publicity.

How to get Newspaper Publicity

a. Appeal to the Editor.

This should be done on the grounds that publication of Scout news is a business matter for the newspaper.

Point out that Scout news is good news for the newspaper, containing the elements described above.

b. If preparing his own news stories the Scout Executive should study the style of his local newspapers and learn how to "dress up" a story. It is newspaper style to "begin at the end"; the important features of the story should be told in the first sentence.

If dealing through a reporter give the reporter news with enthusiasm, and be READY for him. Never keep a newspaper representative waiting.

c. Prepare your copy along the lines accepted by the newspaper—always typewritten and triple spaced. Have your names and organization in the upper left hand corner, and the date of release for your story in the upper right hand corner. Keep the appearance of your copy as clean cut as possible. In preparing your story describe the action the story tells about, but do not make "editorial" comment upon this action unless such comment is used as a quotation. Most newspapers prefer to write their own headlines.

- d. Furnish photos to your newspaper as much as you can. Be sure that the photos in themselves tell a story, and that they are supplied with adequate descriptive captions, including full names of people, etc. In furnishing photographs to newspapers always furnish glossy prints as better cuts can be made from them.

Church papers, bulletins of local civic and other organized groups should not be overlooked. Such publications are usually glad to co-operate in carrying stories of the movement.

Local Council Papers

While during the past ten years there have been many experiments made in conducting local council publications of various kinds, there has never been an opportunity for such a thorough study of this subject as to warrant any conclusive judgment as to the relative value of such publications.

It is known that there are a number of scoutpapers which have apparently justified their publication, but on the other hand, there have been a great many which have started and have not been able to continue for various reasons. Paper and printing and the special qualifications involved in the publication of a creditable paper costs a great deal of money.

Any project of this kind which is started should be undertaken on the basis of an experiment with definite provision for determining its value as related to the investment, not only of money but of the time of the Executive and other members of the headquarters staff. If a scout publication is undertaken, the question as to whether it should or should not contain advertising ought to be considered as an independent problem. It is poor economy to solicit advertisements for a publication of this kind at the expense of genuinely given outright contributions to the Boy Scout work on its merits.

Mimeographed or multigraphed bulletins to all active scout officials are quite a general practice.

This service is being maintained without great expense. In many cases there is very definite conviction that this service more satisfactorily meets the need than what is involved in expensive printing. On the other hand there are advantages of a simple scout bulletin published regularly, where the resources and the leadership permit it without considerable extra investment, because of the great saving in postage where entry can be had as second class mail.

Year Books

Practically the same reasoning should apply in the consideration of a year book. But few councils have undertaken them.

All such questions should be analyzed very definitely from the standpoint of the leadership and resources available for investment in such purposes as compared with the needs of the organization along other lines.

The National Council has agreed to undertake a thorough study of this whole subject for the benefit of the field.

SCOUT SERVICE

Second only to the press in the publicity program of the local council is Scout Service. Perhaps the best and most lasting contribution to publicity is for Scouting to really do something in the community—something big and good. The Executive should seize every opportunity to serve in community affairs. A single bit of service by a London Scout brought the movement to America. The Press, the Public and the individual observing Scout service intelligently rendered with Scout spirit will tell about it to their friends and neighbors and to the world.

VERBAL PUBLICITY

By word of mouth advertising is the best advertising you can have—what one person may say to another.

A speakers bureau is a splendid asset to the publicity program of a local council.

Arrangements should be made to present Scouting to Churches, Schools, Lodges, Clubs, and other gatherings whenever possible. Speakers should be carefully selected and well prepared with short snappy talks on the fundamental purpose and program of Scouting.

Council members, Scoutmasters and Troop Committeemen should be furnished with up-to-date information which will make it possible for them to talk Scouting to their friends and business associates at every possible opportunity. Educate them to do this.

PICTURES

More and more is the picture coming into common use as an advertising medium. Therefore in his publicity program the Scout Executive should not overlook the publicity value of the picture. Every Scout office accumulates many photos which may be used in many ways to tell stories of Scouting to the community. Mounted or framed they may be placed in Railroad stations, Hotel Lobbies, Chamber of Commerce Headquarters, Churches, Clubs, etc., to constantly bring to the attention of the community the story of Scouting.

Motion pictures are excellent publicity, both for educating the public and for recruiting new Scouts. The best of these are: "The Adventures of a Scout," "Knights of the Square Table," "The Lions Cubs," "Days of Real Sport," and "The Littlest Scout." Information as to distributors of these films in various parts of the country may be secured from the Library Department at the National Office.

Every local council should accumulate a set of lantern slides covering their activities, camp, hikes, etc. These are of invaluable use in securing enrollments for summer camps, and enlisting the interest of boys and adults, in Scouting generally.

DEMONSTRATIONS

There are times when stunts are legitimate for publicity purposes. A carefully prepared demonstration on Scouting activities introducing the great out-of-doors, cooking, signalling and first aid, will do much to stimulate the interest of the community in the Scouting program. Window displays are excellent; these may include Scouts applying bandages, building bridges, and doing other Scout stunts. In cities where restaurants cook flap-jacks in the windows there is a splendid opportunity to station a couple Scouts with turning ladles and some camp scenery. The big thing in Window trimming is the presentation of a single idea, either through the use of a number of articles relating to that idea, or through a solid window of one thing.

Any book store will concentrate upon Boy Scout books or out-door literature.

Any Department store can easily put on an overnight camping scene in their windows showing various material and equipment used.

Obviously it is impossible to attempt to describe the endless advertising stunts possible under the head of demonstrations. Care should be taken at all times to make certain that all stunts in Scout demonstration are in accord with the ideals of the movement. Fake fires or fake first aid stunts pulled off on the streets are dangerous; it is far better to render one little bit of service which is real than to put on a sensational faked stunt which is staged.

INDIRECT PUBLICITY

Not the least important factor in the publicity program of the local council is the advertising given Scouting by the appearance and behavior of Scouts and Scout Officials. Every Scout and Scout leader is a walking advertisement of Scouting. Every individual in the movement presents to the public not only himself as a Scout, but is responsible for the opinion people have of the 548,000 and more boys and men who comprise the membership of the Boy Scouts of America. As far back as the time the boy becomes a tenderfoot he should be impressed with the responsibility that the badge and uniform places upon him.

Every personal good turn, every bit of local or national service is an advertisement of Scouting. By thought, word and deed the Scout, Scoutmaster, and Scout Executive and indeed all who are a part of the local organization should exemplify in their daily lives to the people who are supporting the movement the ideals for which the Scout program stands.

The Executive in his own personality, personal bearing, official actions, and business dealings will be a real publicity asset if he is true, dignified, a man of high motives, prompt action and manly bearing.

A group of high-minded Scoutmasters, loyal to Scouting ideals, sacrificial in service and thorough in their Scouting ministry will give the Scout Movement splendid standing and an excellent appraisal by the Community.

Well groomed, gentlemanly Scouts who live up to the Scout Oath and Law and who are well disciplined and well trained are of the greatest value as a publicity asset.

If the local Scout movement can have identified with it the best men of the community as its council members and a man of unselfish mien and purpose as its Commissioner, the community will give high appraisal to its Scout work.

No amount of attractive publicity material will make up for deficiency in boy and man personnel.

While the above six major methods cover the general scope of local council publicity there are many publicity stunts which have value and which should be incorporated in publicity program. For instance:

Scout anniversary week offers an opportunity to bring to the public in a big way the things for which Scouting stands. Detailed suggestions for anniversary week programs are announced by the National Council each year.

City celebrations such as fall festivals, Memorial day, Armistice Day, etc. offer opportunities to bring Scouting before the public.

Field days, rallies, contests, etc., should be used.

Public Courts of Honor are effective.

Parents' nights at troop meetings present an opportunity to acquaint Parents and the Public with Scouting.

Summer and winter camps and, as said before, practically every activity of the council, has in it publicity possibilities.

Emergency duty publicity is a splendid means of showing the public the value of Scout Training.

CAMPAIGN PUBLICITY

Proper publicity at the time a local council budget is raised has more to do with the success of the financial campaign probably than any other single factor. A strong Publicity Committee should be one of the first considerations in planning a financial effort. Financial campaign publicity might well be divided into, (a) Press, (b) Features and display.

The following suggestions will aid the campaign publicity committee in working out its program:

Press

Prepare news items of the organization of the campaign committee and announcements of the plans as they develop and as they mature.

Enlist the co-operation of editors in writing editorials on the problems and needs of local conditions affecting boy-hood, and the value of the Boy Scout Movement in character building and citizenship training.

Secure appropriate cartoons.

Secure co-operation of local advertisers in carrying slogans and catch lines in their advertising copy.

Supply copy for donated advertising space.

Note

A very effective series of articles, 21 in number, outlining from a "selling" standpoint the program and purposes and activities of Scouting was run by the Aurora, Illinois, Council in their local paper before and during a campaign. These articles ran double column 14 to 18 inches per day. The constant presentation of Scouting and what Scouts are, and what Scouts do gave results that marked the plan as a success. This series has been printed by the National Council and is available at $2.95 per set, from the Supply Department.

Features and Display

- a. Window displays of Scout made material.
- b. Painted bulletins and special signs.
- c. Street banners and Flags.
- d. Car Cards.
- e. Motion pictures and slides featuring Scouts; slides advertising the campaign.
- f. Printed folder in connection with the campaign. There should be issued a printed folder telling briefly the accomplishments of the past and the things Scouting stands for. Such a folder should contain the Scout Oath and Law, endorsement from prominent national and local men and a definite statement of the benefits the boys, the community and the nation derive from organized Scouting.
- g. Other forms of local publicity will suggest themselves to the Committee. The publicity committee should not consider it its duty to merely attract people, but to educate and inform them as to the value of the Scout Movement.

The aim of the local council's publicity program must be to acquaint the community with what Scouting really is—that it is not merely a pastime, but that it is a tremendous force for good in character building and citizenship training service. Publicity is a vital force in reaching the public and it is not for the Executive to say whether he shall or shall not furnish newspapers with news, put on demonstrations, organize speakers bureaus and promote other publicity stunts, for that is an obligation he must fulfill.

CHAPTER XIII

FINANCE

Why Money for Scouting?

For a community to provide for its boys the benefits of the scout program with its attendant adult companionship, costs much of time and something, relatively small, of money.

The Scoutmasters and other leaders give their time the community as a whole must supply the needed funds.

But since the Scoutmaster gives his time, and some institution gives a place of meeting, and the boy preferably earns but at least provides his own uniform, and the troop organization meets the incidental expenses of the troop—and since these contacts with boys are the essence and reality of scouting—why should the community provide money for Scouting?

It has no building program costs to maintain as it uses building equipments already available—so why should scouting need the community's financial support?

Only for the purpose of creating a service through a small group of one or more executive specialists to do certain things for the volunteer organization, which they have found it helpful and, because of the technical aspects, necessary to have someone do for them. In larger communities, the pressure of responsibility for so vital and growing a movement as Scouting becomes too heavy for volunteers and the Executive is secured to help the community recognize its boy need; to help it find and train and use and keep Scoutmasters and leaders; to help provide safe camping privilege and all needed council or city wide equipment; to help it plan and serve and grow sanely and vigorously and continuedly and along lines sufficiently bulwarked by successful experience to safeguard the interests of the boy and the chartered obligations of the Boy Scouts of America.

In reality then, the community is only asked to pay a nominal sum for a very few executive specialists to serve its boy workers and to responsibly conserve the name, interests, and extension of the movement; and a further modest sum for such general camp or other activity equipment which individual troops do not have; and also certain amounts for publicity and office, and training and travelling operation and extension, incidental to the major purpose.

Modest as are these needs it is fundamental to a right approach to the problem of thus financing Scouting in a community to remember that money is not being sought for an outside organization coming in but rather for making available a method, a program for the community to use within itself to help bring out the good in its boys.

True, in recent years, the plan and practice of National quotas has grown up—but these modest quotas are given for fundamentally the same reason—to help make possible the research and literature and other National field service rendered to all communities and to permit these benefits to be made available to communities and boys not yet receiving them.

How Scouting is Financed

The community is dependent upon voluntary contributions for its money for Scouting. These must be provided by the adults—the boys may not be used to secure finances for the community. To ensure the permanency, dignity and effectiveness of the effort, there are certain general principles which should obtain in Scout finances:

(1) A Permanent Policy

Whatever methods may be used for raising money, certain it is, that the financial policy shall be such as to look definitely forward and build for a permanent Scout constituency in the Community. Those men whose generosity underlies all large community projects must be interested and enlisted as the permanent constituency.

(2) Many Contributors

In addition to those larger givers who will carry a large part of the load, there should be as many as possible other contributors. It is better to have a thousand contributors than a hundred giving the same amount. Investing even a small sum of money in scouting also involves as a by-product the investment of some interest. More givers then means more people interested, more as enabling shareholders.

(3) Universality of Support

The principle of many contributors should be applied universally so as to include all the various groupings and interests. Catholic, Hebrew, Protestant should all be included; capital and labor; etc. The wider the range the surer the resultant foundation.

(4) Contributing Based on Knowledge

No man can be expected to give to something he does not know about. Publicity, educating the public as to Scouting is the first and basic step toward securing support.

This need for publicity is continuous, hence its use must be continuous. Community interest, action or spirit cannot be expected to outrun its facts. The average community has very few facts about Scouting.

As such educative work must be continuous, care must be exercised to build publicity broadly and fundamentally so as to build permanently. The temptation to "play up" the spectacular must not be allowed to pass over the basic, big things for which Scouting exists.

(5) The "Good Turn" and Money

Service to the community through community or troop "Good Turns," if well done is the finest sort of publicity—though it should be done for a higher motive. Such "Good Turns" are the magic key to community interest and support, they constitute an ever potential financial asset.

(6) Men and Money

Scouting needs men more than it needs money. It is therefore not only the man's contribution that is desired but the man himself. Not a case of "your money or your life" but one of "your life and therefore your money." Given men interested in serving boys, and they and their friends will watch its financial interests.

(7) The Potency of the Boy

The direct appeal of the boy to the man for finances is distinctly forbidden by the National Council.

However the potency of the boy's direct appeal for public interest through demonstrations and personal service—should be recognized.

Demonstration troops or groups will always add to any public presentation of scouting and of course such demonstration uses incident to financial campaigns are entirely sound and fair to the boys.

(8) Budgeting and Reporting

It is a sound general principle of financial appeals that the proposed uses for the money sought, should be definitely budgeted and made known. Those investing their money have a perfect right to know exactly for what purposes their money is to be used.

This, however, very definitely involves the final step as well, and makes necessary a final report or accountability as to how the funds were actually expended.

Whether this final or annual accounting to the public should take the form of a public statement or whether one should be personally sent to all contributors is a matter for local determination. Perhaps both may at times be sound.

(9) Accounting

A vital principle for all, dealing in any way with public social work funds is to establish simple and accurate and reliable records of every financial transaction.

Many honest but careless social workers have come to regrettable but inevitable grief because their own personal finances have gotten mixed up with those of their council.

The most scrupulous care must be exercised to avoid this—indeed the Scout Executive is wise who delegates all receiving of scout money to the treasurer or cashier or secretary in accordance with regularly set-up machinery.

(10) Limiting Promises

There have been scout councils and other social movements which have “promised” their Constituency when securing a pledge that they would not be asked again to contribute for a year or for three years and so on.

Unexpected needs and conditions which have later arisen have found these workers much embarrassed because they had needlessly tied their own hands. It is sound policy to operate on a definite time basis—to ask for funds for a specific period such as two years.

There is, however, no justification to tie the hands of the organization with promises to not ask for more if it is needed.

Such a promise is in reality an apology for asking at all—and no scout worker should apologize for asking the community to create its own community machinery to meet its own boy needs.

Kinds of Campaigns

During the war, and in part since that time, the word campaign has in the minds of many people come to be thought of as a big, public “drive.”

The word campaign as used here will follow its meaning as interpreted in the dictionary.

“A campaign is an organized, systematic, connected series of operations to bring about some desired results.”

Such an organized effort may be conducted along widely different lines:

1) Publicity and Educational Campaigns

By this campaign is meant the so called “drive” with adequate publicity, interest appeals, extensive organization and numerous personal workers.

The more detailed operation of such a campaign is discussed elsewhere.

As Mr. Whiting points out (page 339), such campaigns of course, are aimed at much more than the financial returns, as they seek leadership and general interest and boy interest as well. It is only fair to state that the war period has brought such campaigns into disfavor in many quarters—yet if thoroughly organized, they still operate successfully.

2) Annual or —iennial?

Should the campaign, whatever its form be conducted annually, biennially, triennially or what?

Those who favor an annual “set-up” and campaign, urge the value of the annual educational publicity—this however, can be incorporated into an educational week as operated first at Flint, Michigan, and at Baltimore, Maryland, where such publicity work is conducted because of its own benefits.

The campaign for a term of years has the advantage of the element of permanency and if the budget be wisely foreseen and allowances made for emergencies will probably work little hardship even with new financial needs.

Special emergencies can be met by special gifts if necessary.

3) The “Gum-Shoe” Campaign

The “gum-shoe” campaign covers those that are conducted quietly without public advertising or notice. A selected group of actual or potential supporters are “seen” by the workers and the results secured quietly. Such methods are usually used to meet unexpected and extra-budgetary needs. Such campaigns are however "short" on the general educational features of the more public efforts. In "drives," such quiet methods are generally used in advance of the drive to secure the large contributions.

4) Continuous Campaigns

Some organizations do not operate annual or "periodic" campaigns but keep in operation a steady and constant search for funds. Such search very properly follows the "Gum-shoe" method, and generally presupposes someone devoting a definite amount of time regularly to such work.

For a service movement like Scouting, it seems in general to be sounder advice to urge that finances be handled and then full attention be given to the serving and the doing of the scout work itself.

5) The Mail Campaign

There are some organizations which almost wholly finance their work through letter appeals. It should be remembered however, that a letter can be "turned-down" much more easily than an able solicitor. Where letter campaigns are used, it is more effective to have letters signed by prominent citizens and sent by them to their friends.

Such appeals should be accompanied (or preceded) by terse, pictorial, attractive, human-interest circular or booklet material, to convey the information and stimulate the interest on which giving must stand. A letter campaign, of course, involves a "follow-up" letter or indeed series of letters. Lists made up of former contributors will usually respond more readily than new lists.

It is sound strategy to continue the correspondence relation during the annual intervals between gifts by letters containing attractive reports or human-interest results of progress of the work.

Literature and letters alike should be brief, epigrammatic in style, virile, and with human-interest appeal. The psychology of attracting favorable attention, turning this into interest, and making interest become active, "on the dotted line" is as true in letter campaigns as in face to face salesmanship—only it is more difficult. Whether these letters should be sent to the individual's business office or to his residence is an important item which should be carefully determined—perhaps individually.

6) Telephone Campaigns

In general what has been said of mail campaigns is true of efforts to secure results over the telephone. Literature or pledge cards on their desks at the time when the friend or other worker telephones, will be of value. The telephone, however, is probably most useful as a follow-up when the interest already exists in part. In the closing hours of campaigns the telephone may be used for quick action toward aggregate goals.

7) The Book Campaign

The "by-mail" circulation of subscription booklets with one page for $1000 gifts—one for $500—$250—$100—$50 and so on. The book containing the names of certain ones who had already signed. The book was returned and then sent to another man.

In larger places, probably 50 or 100 booklets might be in circulation. These were adaptable either to an annual or a continuous campaign. The method was formerly in use by certain local Y. M. C. A. organizations.

8) Renewal Campaigns

Renewal campaigns are significant as they are an initial step toward the creation of a permanent financial constituency in the community.

All of the campaign methods already mentioned lend themselves to use in the renewal efforts.

Indeed if this is recognized in the original pledge (see page 343) the problem is simplified.

It is possible to carry the body of the work on renewals and handle new and extension work by enlisting and developing additional new givers.

9) "Farming-it-Out" Campaigns

The "farming-it-out" campaigns include those where a Commercial Club or Rotary, or Kiwanis, or Exchange, or Lion Club or a lodge or some similar permanent group of citizens undertakes to "raise the budget" for the Council.

Such evidences of interest are of great value provided however, that it is important that such a group should under its leadership call into active participation all of the various elements of religious, business and social life in the community.

Scouting is a community project and its financial support should come from the entire community insofar as possible.

10) The Community Chest

Viewed from the angle of the contributor, the Community Chest has a potent appeal. The name Community Chest, however, should only be used where all the philanthropic and social movements seeking community-wide support are included.

The advantages to the giver are relief from a succession or train of appeals as the Chest does this all at once, and for this reason, the Community Chest will doubtless continue to be in evidence.

From the angle of Scouting, sight should not be lost of the fact, that Scouting with its service to boys, has an appeal to the community more potent than that of many organizations which may be in the Community Chest.

Then too, when in a Community Chest, the Scout Council will be limited somewhat in the part of the publicity which Scouting may use. This will probably make an educational campaign desirable at another time and from a service angle.

If the Scout Council is made up of leading men and if the service of Scouting to the community has been of fine quality and ample quantity the scout movement can participate in a Chest with full safety.

If only part of the community organizations are included or if they have difficulty in securing their joint budget—then the Scout Council should carefully consider the strength of its appeal and the desirability of going before the community alone.

11) Inside or Outside Leadership

While there are occasions perhaps incident to the setting up of permanent investment when a large sum is wanted, when it may be desirable to bring in a campaign manager from without, it is usually unnecessary.

Generally speaking, the head of the campaign should be an outstanding community leader to whom there can be imparted the necessary knowledge of Scouting.

Generally speaking it is sound and economical strategy to use the communities own leaders and usual machinery for raising money.

Usually there has emerged out of the community some outstanding man or group of men who know and to whom has fallen leadership in financial campaigns. He and his group of workers are the logical men to mobilize money within their own community—the Council should use them.

12) Special Devices

In certain cases in response to special needs, special devices have been used to appeal to the interest of the giver.

In other cases, these have been utilized as supplementary means of arousing interest. It seems vital, however, to urge that all devices shall be such as to contribute to a permanent financial constituency.

Among such devices have been the following:

a) "Put a Scout on your Pay-roll"

Among others, Oakland, California, has successfully suggested to the industries and business concerns of the city, that they "place one or more scouts on their payroll"—i. e. that they assume the annual per capita community cost of one, or ten, or fifty scouts—the money, of course, being paid to the council as a contribution.

b) "Scout Daddies"

Dayton, Ohio, Jersey City, New Jersey, and other communities, have asked the men of the community to become "Scout Daddies" by contributing to the scout funds. In many cases the men are also asked to give some service as well as their money.

c) "Preferred stock in Future Citizenship"

Carrying out the analogy of investment has been used by Terre Haute, Indiana, and in pamphlet form by Chicago, Illinois. The illustration herewith shows the form of one such "certificate."

d) "Citizen insurance" represents another business idea adapted to the scout situation, in which the donor takes out a certain "insurance policy" for community citizenship in his contribution.

e) "The Man-Boy Partnership" plan of Pittsburgh represents another form of special interest appeal.

MOBILIZING MONEY

by W. A. Whiting—Former Deputy National Field Scout Executive

"Mobilizing money is a vital problem in connection with the organization, maintenance and management of a Scout Council.

The attempt is made here to point out some of the basic factors in the problem, to supplement the initiative and judgment of those responsible for securing the funds.

Securing money on a community-wide basis is not due to luck nor to "a good idea" which someone chanced to hit upon, but is purely a matter of cause and effect, and we get the desired effect—gifts of money—only when we bring about the necessary causes or conditions.

A Campaign?

A carefully organized procedure is absolutely necessary. Sporadic and spasmodic attempts on the part of several individuals, without supporting efforts appropriately timed and without the advantage of group spirit will almost invariably result in partial or complete failure. Continuous solicitation by paid workers is also unsound.

An organized public financial campaign is analogous to a well-organized sales campaign with its general advertising, its cultivation of customers, its trained and organized selling force, its well-timed and concerted approach to the public and its businesslike and systematic records, follow-up and safe-guarding of the reputation of the commodity involved. Untold millions have undoubtedly been lost by ill-advised, disorganized and incomplete sales campaigns. The same could be said of money-raising campaigns which have not been set up and conducted in accordance with sound principles.

In this respect a campaign is somewhat like the baking of a cake. The omission of even one or two ingredients is pretty apt to cause a failure. And the most unfortunate part is that both processes are alike in that the realization of the omission frequently comes only after the baking is actually in process and it is too late to prevent the whole thing going flat.

Three essential elements are involved in the successful campaign:

- (a) The development of a body of prospective contributors, informed, and favorably disposed toward the Movement.
- (b) A force of personal workers, thoroughly informed and enthusiastic for the Movement. To be effective this group must be organized with competent leadership, committed to a schedule of action and properly equipped.
- (c) These two elements (a) and (b) must be brought together under conditions which will facilitate definite results.

Successful Fund-Raising Summarized—

- 1—Conditions previously made favorable should be utilized by judiciously timed and effectively planned efforts to arouse intense interest, primarily on the part of those individuals from whom it is desired to secure financial aid; secondarily, on the part of the community public.
- 2—With a properly organized, trained and equipped sales force, the merits of community service to boyhood through Scouting must be presented to those asked to contribute.
- 3—If the confidence of the former and prospective contributors has been maintained, and if they feel satisfied with the interpretation or demonstration of the Scouting idea as given locally—in short, if the local council has made good and inspires confidence in the future—then the result of “one” and “two” will be favorable action (gifts) on the part of a reasonably large number of those approached.

The steps therefore are:

- (a) The development of confidence in the cause and Council.
- (b) The focussing of the general attention of those expected to give, under favorable conditions.
- (c) Arousing of personal interest and recognition of merit in the cause
- (d) Securing agreement, assent, and actual positive action.

It will be recognized that these are mental conditions and that to produce them successively in one person in one interview requires real salesmanship. To produce these effects and results without personal interview is next to impossible. Even if accomplished by advertising and mail-order methods, the psychological moment usually passes, and the money with it, unless the dotted line on the subscription card is pointed out in timely fashion.

Moreover, to ask volunteer solicitors to seek to arouse this necessary series of feelings or reactions “in cold blood”—out of a clear sky—is unfair to them, an imposition on their time.

Attention and real interest should be secured in advance by community-wide service and activities, by preliminary distribution of literature, meetings and publicity. The solicitors can then clinch existing interest.

To mobilize the sentiment and attitude of a whole community toward a proposition—resulting in desired action on the part of many—is readily achieved by the application of scientific methods. When so done there is a campaign. Without a campaign, results are very doubtful and almost always seriously disappointing.

Campaign Objectives—

Although the securing of funds with which to carry on a given project may be the first end in view, it is usually true that several other very important objectives must be recognized and reached either as a means of securing the money or in order to make the effective use of the money possible. After all, Scouting is a means to an end and the ultimate objective—service to boyhood—must not be lost to view. The average local council campaign for funds, therefore, will emphasize the following:

First—TO EDUCATE, INFORM, INSPIRE OR WARM UP THE COMMUNITY concerning:

- (a) Boyhood, local conditions affecting boyhood and the specific needs of boyhood.
- (b) The means and effectiveness of meeting the needs shown through the Scout Movement, and the importance, therefore, of supporting and participating in local Scouting.

(This will help to create local clientele and that general sentiment of interest and approval which constitutes one of the necessary elements in a successful campaign and in successful community work.)

Second—THE ENROLLMENT OF INDIVIDUALS IN PERSONAL SERVICE TO BOYHOOD, to the community and to the Nation through participation in the Boy Scout Movement.

(This may involve a mere expression of desire to help, or acceptance of a commission as Scoutleader or Member of Council Committee. It will effectively aid in the success not only of the campaign, but of the organized efforts in the interest of which the campaign is conducted.

(The first service of such volunteers might well be in the campaign, thus creating a campaign personnel of men who will not half-heartedly go through with their part, but will put their whole soul and energy behind the task given them to do.)

Third—THE RAISING OF THE FUNDS necessary to effectively organize and carry on the Scout Movement locally for one or more years.

(This should be in effect community action, for the purpose of enabling the Scout Movement, as locally organized, to function in and for the community.)

Fourth—ENROLLMENT OF THE LARGEST POSSIBLE NUMBER OF BOYS of Scout age as registered Scouts committed to the Scout Oath and Law and subjected to the benefits of the Movement for character-development and citizenship-training.

(This objective should be emphasized before and during the campaign, but action should be deferred until after the campaign. It is the means to this end which the campaign makes possible.)

With the public—and especially the prospective contributors—appealed to with these objectives and by methods which conform to the scientific and ethical laws which apply, the Council budget should be secured easily and with satisfaction to all concerned."

SUGGESTIONS FROM SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGNS IN DISTRICT III

by A. A. Schuck—Regional Scout Executive

"To conduct a successful campaign education and organization are necessary. Education of the community to the value of our movement as a character building and citizenship training program, and the perfecting of a large enough force of campaigners to thoroughly canvass the community in the solicitation of funds:

The procedure naturally divides itself into three sections as follows:

- 1—The Budgetary Survey.
- 2—Pre-campaign activity:
  - 1—Publicity and education
  - 2—Building of campaign organization
- 3—The intensive campaign:
System of operation

The Budgetary Survey

Before compiling the local budget a survey should be made of the local field, keeping the following suggestions in mind:

- 1—Population and wealth of community,
- 2—Strength of existing Scout Organization,
- 3—Possibilities for extension,
- 4—Equipment available: Office furniture, camp equipment, etc.
- 5—Area of field to be covered.

The budget is then compiled to assure an adequate organization with sufficient finances to efficiently operate the Scout program, keeping within the financial possibilities of the community. (For items see page 353.)

It is recommended that the campaign be for a three year budget, contributors pledging an annual contribution for three consecutive years, payable semi-annually. This recommendation is made as a measure of practical economy, as the expense of conducting a campaign for three years is about the same as one to raise funds for a one year budget. It has been found, however, that about 20% of all pledges are for one year only.

Ten per cent per year is added to the total of the first year's budget for the second and third year, to cover increased expenditures, due to larger organization needs, salary increases, etc.

Pre-Campaign Activity:

Publicity and Education.

It is absolutely necessary that the movement be fully appreciated locally before the opening of the campaign, and the doing of this requires publicity and education. A strong publicity committee, organized under a capable Publicity Chairman, is needed.

1—Newspaper Publicity:

The outstanding medium for bringing the movement before the citizens of the community is the newspaper. For at least three weeks prior to the intensive solicitation of funds daily articles appear, including:

2—Demonstrations:

For at least one week, preceding the solicitation of funds, first aid, signalling, knot tying and other Scoutcraft demonstrations are conducted by Scout Patrols on the main streets.

Windows in the most prominent stores are secured and window displays set up, including model fires, lean-to's, knots tacked on a board, Scout Oath and Law cards, etc.

In communities having a number of registered Scouts a small window card, to be placed in the Scout's window at home, bearing the announcement "A Boy Scout lives here" has proven very effective.

3—Posters:

Posters advertising the campaign are circulated liberally and placed in store windows. Automobile windshield posters are very effective when used in quantity.

4—Moving pictures and theatres:

The Managers of all Moving Picture Houses and theatres can be interviewed and permission secured to run slides. It is suggested that one slide have an announcement of the campaign dates, amount, etc., and another have the Scout Oath thereon, etc.

5—Public Speakers:

Starting a few days before the campaign, "Minute Men" appear in all theatres, moving pictures and public gatherings, emphasizing the value of Scouting to the Boyhood of the community.

Every minister, priest and rabbi is requested to preach a Scout sermon on the Sunday preceding the campaign, and literature to be used in preparing same is supplied.

On the same Sunday "Ten Minute Speakers" appear in every Sunday School, to emphasize the value of Scouting to the Sunday School and its members.

Addresses are delivered before all Clubs and Lodges, including Rotary, Kiwanis, Lion and Exchange, Chamber of Commerce, Business Men's Clubs, Churches, Schools, etc.

Progress Sign:

Just before opening of the campaign, a large sign, erected in the most prominent location available, to denote the progress of the campaign, will be of great value. It should be so planned that it will hold the interest of the people all during the campaign. This can be done by having something mechanical, that appeals to the eye.

Four suggestions follow:

1—A perpendicular sign, depicting Scout climbing a ladder. Move the figure up a rung for each certain amount raised.

2—Horizontal sign, numbered across the top from left to right, with figures ranging from $1,000, advancing consecutively by thousands, to amount necessary to be raised. Have a Scout effigy to hang on the face of the sign, which can be moved from left to right across the board, as the indicated amounts are raised.

3—A large clock sign, having on the dial amounts ranging from one thousand consecutively by thousands, to amount needed. Clock hand to be moved to indicate amounts as secured. Caption "You still have time to make a subscription."

4—Clock sign, denoting amounts as above, but having a large Scout in the center, signalling. The signalling arms should be movable, so that they can be raised to point to the amounts as raised. Cloth flags in the hands of the signalling Scout will attract the eye of passers-by.

The effect of this publicity and educational campaign will be to create sympathetic community interest that will insure a successful campaign, but even more important than that, will be the educational effect it will have on local interest in the Scouting movement and its future development, which, even excluding the money raised, would be worth all effort, time and expenditures made in the campaign.

CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION

Citizens' Committee:

The Citizens' Committee is composed of all the leading citizens of the community. An effort is made to have all members of the local Council (if organized), Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Chamber of Commerce and others included.

Campaign Executive Committee:

The Campaign Executive Committee consists of seven to twelve of the most aggressive men of the community. A man capable of leading others, big enough to enlist the support of all leading men and with inspirational qualifications, is chosen as Chairman of this Committee and the Campaign Organization, to be known as the Campaign Chairman.

This Committee is responsible for the planning of the Campaign, through its committees and for the organization of the "Flying Squadron," preferably from its own membership, who will be responsible for securing, by solicitation of large prospective contributors, 30% of the total amount before the intensive campaign opens.

Committee on Prospect Lists:

This Committee is responsible for the preparation of a list of selected contributors. This list should have between 2,000 and 5,000 names thereon, according to the size of the community and the amount to be raised.

Old campaign lists, telephone books, directories, etc., are used in the compilation of this list; but care must be taken that all "dead" names are eliminated. Prospect cards should be prepared in advance, with name, address, etc., thereon, to be used by solicitor.

Suggested form:

NAME.....
Residence.....
Business address.....
Remarks:
Team No.	Worker's Name
.....	.....

Note: If pledge is secured this card can be destroyed. If not, report of reason, etc. should be made under "Remarks" and card turned in to Campaign Committee immediately.

In many campaigns the placing on the prospect card of the amount it is thought the prospect should contribute, for the information of the solicitor, has proven very effective. This is often done in code: e. g. BRICK HOUSE

12345 67890

Publicity Committee:

The duty of this Committee is to carry out the plan of publicity, as outlined in the forepart of this article, under the heading "Publicity and Education." It is recommended that this Committee have three sub-committees, in order to insure the carrying out of the plan in detail.

The Committee on Speakers arranges with Lodges, Churches, Theatres, etc. for speaking engagements, and supply the speakers.

The Committee on Literature, Posters, etc., arranges for the securing of all advertising material and the distribution of same. Uniformed Scouts can be used to good advantage in the distribution.

A Campaign information folder is prepared and printed; this is mailed three days before the campaign opens to every prospective contributor for whom a card has been made. This folder includes several good Scout pictures, endorsements and pictures of the leading citizens, religious endorsements signed by the Protestant Ministers, Catholic Priests and Jewish Rabbi; endorsements of the Governor of the State, endorsements of National Government Officials; an article stating in detail what the money will do, an article explaining the value of the Scout Movement as a civic, religious and social asset, and a list of the names of the Campaign Committee. This folder should be attractive, neat, appealing, to make an impression on the prospective contributor that will be of assistance to the solicitor.

The Committee on Demonstrations in co-operation with the local Scoutmasters, arranges for all street demonstrations, parades, window displays, progress sign, etc.

Workers' Committee:

The Campaign Vice-Chairman is Chairman of this Committee and leader of the Team Captains. He may be called the "Colonel." Under his leadership a strong soliciting organization is perfected. When organizing, the goal is generally at least one team for every Thousand Dollars. $2,000 has been found a good team limit in the average community.

The minimum strength of a team has been five members and the objective ten members. Team Captains have been permitted to select their own workers, and it must be realized that as this is a most important undertaking, real men must be secured as Team Captains and Workers. The following sources can easily be relied upon to furnish the right type of men: Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Lion Club, Exchange Club, Chamber of Commerce, Young Men's Business Clubs, Elks, Knights of Columbus, etc. Remember the more workers secured, the easier the individual's job.

Team spirit must be created, which will result in competition that insures success.

Finance and Audit Committee:

This Committee authorizes all expenditures and also receives all campaign funds and audits Team Captains' daily reports.

It is suggested that the Campaign Treasurer be made Chairman of this Committee.

This Committee generally uses a Pledge Card, to be signed by contributors:

INTENSIVE CAMPAIGN*System of Operation

The intensive campaign is frequently conducted for a three day period. It is suggested that the campaign officially open on a Monday night, with an early dinner, so that the entire evening will be free for the distribution of prospect cards, inspirational talks, etc.

The prospect cards which have been previously prepared by the Committee on Prospects, may be distributed early in the evening. The Chairman should impress on the Team Workers the necessity of every prospect being seen and the card returned if he refuses to contribute, with the reason noted thereon.

Two systems of prospect card distribution are recommended as follows:

1. The cards to be previously sorted, so as to have the prospective contributors grouped geographically into as many packs as there are teams. The teams, as units, to be seated at tables and the Captain to distribute the cards to his men, giving the individual the prospects he can most efficiently and conveniently solicit. This method, unfortunately, enables some teams to get the sections of the city in which more wealth is located.

In these troubled times such human qualities are needed and we appreciate your help in this work.

After the campaign is over a list should be made by the campaign manager of the men that developed as possible good men for the Council organization and turned over to the proper local men. A list also can be made out of effective captains and solicitors for possible use in the next campaign.

2. This system has brought excellent results:

The prospect cards are divided into as many packs as there are teams. Each team captain is handed a pack and given a certain number of minutes to read off the names of prospective contributors thereon. His team workers take those cards they can best solicit. At the end of the allotted time (usually three minutes) all teams exchange cards, the cards remaining in packs, and this procedure is continued until all packs have been gone over by each team. This system stimulates considerable interest among the team workers in their effort to secure the cards of the prospects they desire to see.

Note: The prospect card system does away with the house to house, door bell pulling campaign, and makes it a personal affair, whereby each man can choose ten or fifteen or twenty prospects that he can not only most efficiently solicit, but also usually get best results from.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday are recommended as soliciting days, leaving Friday and Saturday for "Clean-up" days, if the campaign is not "over the top" by Thursday night.

It is suggested that the campaign officially open with a dinner, to be served in the early evening the night before the first day of active solicitation, so that the entire evening will be free for the distribution of prospect cards, inspirational talks, etc. As suggested above the Campaign Chairman should impress on the Team Workers the necessity of every prospect being seen, and the return of the card if said prospect refuses to contribute, with reason written thereon. Someone else may be able to get him.

A strong, inspirational Scouting talk is generally given and pledges taken from all Team Workers before the meeting adjourns.

This three day intensive campaign usually accomplishes better results than one having a longer period of time, as the workers start at once, realizing they must work fast and hard, to put it over in that space of time. This keeps up the enthusiasm.

As many cash payments on the first year pledge are secured as possible and where convenient to the giver.

Luncheons are held daily, at which time reports are received from each team and marked on a large "Team Progress" board, previously made for that purpose.

An inspirational short talk may well be given and challenges between teams worked up, to see which team brings in the greatest amount.

The "Team Progress Sign," above mentioned has proved a stimulus to greater efforts and better returns.

The last day's luncheon may well be held at night, so as to enable the team workers to have a full day for work. The first two days it is recommended that noon-day luncheons be served.

CHAPTER XIV

RELATIONS WITH OTHER ORGANIZATIONS

“The purpose of this corporation (Boy Scouts of America) shall be to promote through organization, and COOPERATION WITH OTHER AGENCIES the ability of boys to do things for themselves and others, to train them in Scoutcraft, and to teach them patriotism, courage, self-reliance and kindred virtues, using the methods which are now in common use by boy scouts, by placing emphasis upon the Scout Oath and Law for character development, citizenship training and physical fitness.”

General Policy

The position of Scouting toward other organizations therefore is clearly set forth in the National Constitution—cooperation is its task—never competition.

Serving boyhood is its business, in which, however, it neither seeks nor desires monopoly. Every agency which resultfully seeks to serve boyhood in character building or citizenship training is a brother-in-effort to be aided. The task of reaching the boy into whose life come too few character building influences is a task which all existing agencies are at present unable to cover.

Scouting and the Home

- (1) The aims of Scouting for character building intimately coincides with the Home aims and prayers for its boys.
- (2) The outcomes of scouting, its “good turn,” its cheery obedience, its worthiness of trust, etc. are to be awaited as results sensed through their being lived in the Home. Frequent visits and conference and understanding between the Home and the Scoutmaster will make possible more effective work by each. Scouting must ever be considerate of the home point of view.

354 Relations with other Organizations

- (3) Scouting does not compete with the Home—drawing boys from it but deliberately seeks to strengthen the home ties.
- (4) Scouting, in the light of past experience, may resultfully look to the home for adult leadership, cooperation, and support in the general work of Scouting. The testimony of scout workers as to “how I became interested in Scouting” points with almost unerring directness along the trail to his own or some other boy.
- (5) The contacts of the Executive with Scout Homes will generally be through the Scoutmasters or through correspondence.

Scouting and the Church

- (1) The aims of the church include the Scout Aims of Character building though the church has traditionally given too little of organized heed to the boy's interest. The relationship of Scouting to the church is that of a developed and tried program, ready and available for the church to use.
- (2) The chief problem is coordination with the church program and this is basically only a problem of personnel; given any scout man who can read and live the 12th Scout Law there need be no problem. The scout leader who disregards the church dates and services in preparing his own troop or city program ought to have trouble. Team play and respectful consideration for the convictions and customs of others leave no ground for trouble. Such difficulties are automatically solved when the church runs its own troop, with its own committee and leadership.
- (3) Suitability of Program for Church Use.
  - (a) Scouting is essentially sound as a Social organization in that it makes the community responsible for and active in meeting its own boy needs. From the viewpoint of the Church this is imperative. No church could soundly use a character building program over which it could exert no coordinating or censoring control.

- (b) Scouting has no great building costs and program and problems with a professional staff working somewhere in their own building and hence apart from the church: Scouting in the church ideally and actually operates under church control, with the church as rendezvous, and with Church Leadership—a volunteer but selected leadership.
  - (c) In small and large communities alike the control of a scout troop inheres constitutionally in the Troop Committee, who represent the institution or group of citizens who are thus actively assuming an organized interest in their own boys or in some other group—preferably their own! The Church's control of its Troop Committee is definite and absolute. The Troop Committee controls the troop through selecting the Scoutmaster and other leaders and through responsibly supervising their activities.
  - (d) The Church finds in the scout group a natural grouping bound by internal ties of other associations and experiences and adventures—upon which may be built a very definite program of religious education.
- (4) The Advantages Scouting Offers the Church
- (a) As just suggested above, Scouting offers a tried, proved program ready for use under conditions of complete church control to reach boys the church wants and needs to reach.
  - (b) Scouting gives the church potentially a seven day grip on the boys leisure and may thus make the church the "Hub" of the boys recreational life.

356 Relations with other Organizations

- (c) Traditional church and school procedure gave scant heed to boy interests. Scouting offers the church a program of activities which grips boy interest, thus making possible to hold him through those restless years of 'teen readjustment whence crime and religion alike recruit their largest numbers.
- (d) Scouting provides a habit rather than a precept basis for morals. The things boys do build their habits and their habits determine their conduct and character. The program builds habits both personally and socially useful.
- (e) The Church has boys or needs them—it has men or needs them—it has a building for troop headquarters use—Scouting provides an attractive task for holding big men in church work as scout leaders.

It can at once provide training for boy leaders which will prove useful in other departments of Church work. This "something to do" applies to the older boys as well.

- (f) "The Good Turn" Habits are builded through exercise. Moral habits are not created through conversation—they result from doing. They are builded into the nervous system. The church then is concerned with giving boys right and altruistic things to do. This is the soundest moral strategy and need. Churches have traditionally afforded too little to do. The "Good Turn" is a typical case, doing it makes it habitual—a part of—man's character.

The Scouting program can thus help the church help the boys build moral habits.

In this doing the church should not overlook the tremendous boy service possibilities which war service revealed and which await mobilization and direction for the services of peace.

- (g) Scouting offers the church a program so sound educationally that Scouting method has, by outstanding leaders quoted elsewhere in this volume, been designated as representing the front rank of modern educational improvement.

Sunday School methods of reaching and interesting boys has much to learn therefrom. † Indeed the Sunday School authorities of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and others, are organizing Scout Troops as a part of Sunday School work—making the “class” into the “troop.”

Scouting and the Denominations

Among Churches there has come a great awakening to the need of activities—purposeful, constructive, yet interest-gripping—for church youth.

Indeed the Church is so natural a “user” of the scout program that in 1919 half the scout troops held rendezvous in Churches.

The far-visioned leaders of various denominations and religious groups and societies have investigated and have officially recommended the use of the scout program among their churches and parishes.

For the use and information of the Scout Executive—the texts of these original resolutions are given herewith.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

EXTRACT FROM THE MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS

“Voted to approve the arrangement by which the Boy Scout program becomes an accepted mid-week program for Methodist Sunday School classes of requisite age.

The detail of adjustment is such that the mutual interests of the two agencies are safe guarded. At the same time the complete resources of each are added to the other. We believe that this will add materially to the attractiveness and effectiveness of the program of our Young Peoples Department.”

BAPTIST CHURCH

Northern Baptist Convention

May, 1918.

"Whereas, The United States of America being engaged in war, we recognize the necessity of safeguarding our youth from the dangers of moral laxity and increase of juvenile crimes, incident to war time conditions, and

Whereas, accepting at all times the obligation of developing our boys along lines of civic and national responsibility and service, we recognize the present especial necessity of boy conservation and citizenship training in preparation for the reconstruction period subsequent to the war, and

Whereas, taking into consideration the fact that 60% of the membership of the Boy Scouts of America is organized in conjunction with churches, and further recognizing the remarkable service rendered by scouts in War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bond Campaigns and in cooperation with the American Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. and other War Service agencies,

Be It Resolved,

First, that we approve and endorse the work and program of the Boy Scouts of America and commend the promotion of the same in every church in the Northern Baptist Convention.

Second, that this conference go on record as desiring to participate in this program by fostering the scout movement as a valuable supplementary contribution to the work of the church in character training.

Third, that the attention of every church in the United States should be brought to this great opportunity for service to our country and our boys by helping to develop the program of the Boy Scouts of America."

RESOLUTIONS ON MEN'S WORK ADOPTED BY UNANIMOUS VOTE OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY COLUMBUS, OHIO,
MAY 20TH, 1918.

"That we recognize the Boy Scout Movement as a great opportunity for Christian service by our Men, realizing the value of this organization to promote patriotic, civic and recreational activities among boys under the influence and in the atmosphere of the Christian Church."

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

Del Vaticano, Oct. 7, 1919.

"The Holy Father has learned with much interest and pleasure that steps have been taken to promote the formation of distinctively Catholic units among the Boy Scouts of the United States; that the movement has the approval and support of His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons and also of so many Archbishops and Bishops and that its chief aim is to build up the Boy Scouts spiritually and physically.

Such a movement is deserving of the highest commendation. His Holiness therefore wishes it every success and gladly bestows the Apostolic Blessing on all those who further the Catholic extension of the Scout movement under the auspices of the ecclesiastical authorities."

J. Cardinal Gasparri.

PERMANENT COMMITTEE ON MEN'S WORK, GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRES- BYTERIAN CHURCH OF THE U. S. A.

"That the General Assembly's Committee on Men's Work emphasizes strongly the importance of boys' organized activity in our churches, and recommends that, wherever practicable, Boy Scout troops be formed and directed by the men of the church. That in doing this, it does not recommend the Scout work as a substitute for that of the Sunday School, or any other organization within the church, but that scout work is to be supplementary to these, offering to the church an agency, which broadens the scope of its work for, and strengthens the hold of the church on its boys. The Committee hopes the ultimate aim will be to lead the boys to Christ, and that no effort will be spared to develop their spiritual life.

That the secretaries of this committee be directed to promote this work by the preparation and use of suitable literature, and also by presenting it in conference as one of the greatest opportunities for service open to men's organizations."

THE UNITED LUTHERAN CHURCH IN AMERICA

"We commend the Boy Scout Movement and Program as a valuable means of contact with the boys of the Church and the Community and as a supplement to other forms of work with boys within the Congregation, provided that the Scoutmaster be a loyal member of the Congregation himself and that the activities of the Troop be carefully regulated by the Troop Committee of the Congregation as provided in recent amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws of the Boy Scouts of America."

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA

"The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, through its Administrative Committee, expresses its deep sympathy with the Boy Scout Movement.

Several of the constituent denominations of the Council have appointed commissions on relationship with the Boy Scout Movement and render earnest testimony of its great value to the Church.

The plans of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America relative to the .....relationship of the Movement with the churches.....are commended to the sympathetic attention of the pastors and churches as offering a valuable opportunity for mutual cooperation.

The attitude of the Boy Scouts of America in their recognition of religion and their loyalty to the Church is cause for deep appreciation upon the part of the churches."

Extracts from Letters from Church Workers

"I consider Scouting a very tangible asset to any Sunday School. The fact that there is a troop attached to a Sunday School naturally attracts boys of scout age to it, and they are generally boys who are anxious to get on in the scheme of scouting, which means they are earnest and steady. The boys soon come to feel attachment to the church which houses them, even if they are not attendants at its services. Those who do attend feel proud that their church is sponsor for the troop. My troop last year saw that our fence was in bad shape, and they raised money to buy new wire, and then painted it themselves. They wanted to have the grounds look well."

REV. JAMES BOYD HUNTER,
Pastor, Faith Reformed Church,
Scoutmaster, Troop 5, Jersey City, N. J.

"I think scouting is providential. It gives the boy what he wants at the time he wants and needs the knowledge in the way he should have it. It cannot help but bring up a generation of boys, who, inculcated with its doctrines, become community assets."

REV. GEO. W. KNEPPER,
Pastor, Central Christian Church,
Member, Local Scout Council,
Spokane, Washington.

"I wish to bear enthusiastic testimony to the value of Scouting as a part of the Church program. . . . I can count at least 5 boys who have joined our Church directly through the Scout influence. In most of these cases whole families have been opened to Church interest. A number of other families have also been interested. Besides these most of the girls of scout age are made much more active in all lines of Church work by their membership in the Scouts. Others who have joined with us were influenced in part at least by this atmosphere of juvenile enthusiasm.

"Certainly no Sunday Class would make a mistake in becoming a Scout Troop—provided it could find a suitable Scoutmaster. The Scout activities encourage manliness, fraternal feeling, and eager enthusiasm for all allied organizations.

"As a mid-week activity I have never known anything better than scouting among the boys."

REV. ROBERT L. BAUSAM,
Pastor, Pimlico Baptist Church,
Scoutmaster, Troop 112,
Baltimore, Md.

"I have found Scouting a distinct asset to the Sunday School. The Scout Law and general program promotes loyalty to the Church. Boys of my acquaintance joined the Church via a Scout Troop. Therefore I recommend the organization of Troops as Sunday School Classes. The rule works both ways. One helps the other. Boys in the Sunday School make good scouts and Scouts make the right kind of Sunday School members. The aims of the Boy Scouts and the Church are fundamentally identical. The only difference is that of method. The Church should back Scouting to the limit."

REV. RICHARD BRAUNSTEIN,
Pastor, Sharon Methodist Episcopal Church,
Special Field Scout Commissioner, Sharon, Conn.

"My position as a minister and a Scoutmaster gives me the liberty and duty of expressing my firm conviction as to the value of Scouting in furthering the practical aims of the church and Sunday School.

"Among the many agencies we employ for enlisting the opening faculties of these boys who are placed under our direction—agencies which in many cases must be laboriously home-made—here is one which has been wisely and carefully planned out for us, the machinery of which has been dictated by the broadest experience, and in-wrought by warm-hearted sympathy. These well considered rules and regulations for organizing our boys combine two valuable qualities, which, in advance, assure us of their complete success, wherever they are given a real and honest trial, namely, that breadth of vision so re-assuring to those who are desirous of leading and improving the young; and, also, that human and practical activity which wins the interest of every red-blooded boy. This method of Christian activity is surely an asset to any community and to any church that will take full advantage of it."

REV. A. M. STOCKING, D.D.,
Pastor, Spencer Memorial M. E. Church,
Scoutmaster, Troop 17, Rock Island, Ill.

THE RELIGIOUS POLICY OF THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

"Scouting presents greater opportunities for the development of the boy religiously than does any other movement instituted solely for the boys. Its aim to develop the boy physically, mentally and morally is being realized very widely.

364 Relations with other Organizations

"The Movement has been developed on such broad lines as to embrace all classes, all creeds, and at the same time to allow the greatest possible independence to individual organizations, officers and boys.

"The Boy Scouts of America maintain that no boy can grow into the best kind of citizenship without recognizing his obligation to God. The recognition of God as the ruling and leading power in the universe, and the grateful acknowledgment of His favors and blessings is necessary to the best type of citizenship and is a wholesome thing in the education of the growing boy. No matter what the boy may be—Catholic, or Protestant, or Jew—this fundamental need of good citizenship should be kept before him.

"The Boy Scouts of America, as an organized body, therefore, recognizes the religious element in the training of a boy, but it is absolutely non-sectarian in its attitude toward that religious training. Its policy is that the religious organization or institution with which the boy scout is connected shall give definite attention to his religious life. If he be a Roman Catholic boy scout, the church of which he is a member is the best channel for his training. If he be a Hebrew boy, then the synagogue will train him in the faith of his fathers. If he be a Protestant, no matter to what denomination of Protestantism he may belong, the church of which he is an adherent or a member should be the proper organization to give him an education in the things that pertain to his allegiance to God.

"All scout officials and men who are given certificates of leadership in carrying out the program of the Boy Scouts of America are required to subscribe to the Scout Oath and Law and Constitution and By-Laws, which include this declaration of principle.

"In thus making available to boys of all classes a common meeting ground where they may play and compete and learn to know that the 'other fellow' is quite as good as themselves, the Scout Movement is performing a distinctive and important patriotic service.

"And again, the observance of the Scout Oath and Law, the tremendous collective volume of 'Daily Good Turns,' and the creation of better feeling among millions of scouts of our own and other lands, constitute a latent but powerful and rapidly growing factor for universal good-will and peace."

The Spirit of Fellowship Hill

Historically, religious sects or bodies have not been conspicuous for their tolerance toward each other. We of the present generation do well to remember that.

1) Associated Charities, 2) Council of Church Boards of Education, 3) The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, 4) The Inter-Church world movement, 5) joining of hands to avoid duplication in the field of Foreign Missions, 6) the fusion of Protestant denomination in certain small communities, 7) a war chest including Y. M. C. A., K. C., Jewish Welfare Board, Salvation Army, etc., in one and the same appeal—these things have come in the present generation.

One Priest with the American Army overseas had a Jew for an organist and a Methodist Chaplain to help him set his altar for service. Why not?

Are the old religious convictions and faiths weakening so that men are more alike in that they have in common relinquished the vital things of their faiths? No—a new spirit has been growing,—The new spirit of Fellowship.

366 Relations with other Organizations

Symbolic of this new spirit was the Sunday afternoon Fellowship Hike at the First National Conference of Scout Executives at the Palisades Park, Scout Camps near Tuxedo, N. Y., Sept. 19, 1920. The three hundred men and numerous visitors went up onto a mountain and on the bald peak of one of the Catskills sat down in the great Cathedral of the Almighty, with a great, inspiring, solemnizing panorama of nature spread in tens of thousands of tree clad acres and blue lakes before them merging in the distance into the deep blue of the sky of a waning but perfect September day.

The speakers stood in front near the edge of the cliff silhouetted against the panorama and the sky—and for what purpose?

Catholic—Hebrew—Protestant in turn pointed the group to the lofty trails of Fellowship in human service to boys.

Monsignor John J. Dunn, Chancellor of the Arch-Diocese of New York—personally representing Arch-Bishop Hayes.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue of New York City.

Dean Howard Robbins, Dean of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine of New York City, personally representing Bishop Burch.

Each in turn inspired and generated Fellowship in a renewed consecration—for each in his own way and faith—to a richer spiritual life to pass on to boyhood recognizing that one cannot pass on that which he does not possess.

Does a Catholic sacrifice anything in cooperating toward lofty ends with a Protestant or Jew? Must he surrender the distinguishing elements of his creed or faith? By no means!

He should possess deep religious convictions. He should work at them too! He should genuinely hold his faith to be the best, the true,—else why hold it—he should be willing even to give his life for his faith—But in the new spirit of Fellowship (the spirit and letter of the Twelfth Scout Law) he will generously and genuinely accord to every other man and his faith the same respect and consideration demanded for his own.

Such a golden rule—such doing unto others what one would they should do unto him—and doing it first means that liberty in thought and religion is a fact—for men may hold differing views and not have to fight about them—but instead may stand shoulder to shoulder in consecration, lofty purpose, worthy example in character and citizenship service to boyhood in which, please God, there is neither Jew nor Gentile, Catholic nor Protestant, White nor black, Bond nor free, Plenty nor poverty—but where the worth of manly genuineness is the spiritual coin of the realm of Fellowship.

This is the message of the spirit of Fellowship Hill.

Scouting and the School

1) The aims of Scouting and the Schools are in part closely related. Each is trying to pass on to the boy something from the experience of the race. Their relations are fundamentally cordial and cooperative. There is no ground for competition as their activities are supplemental and entirely voluntary on the part of the boys and the leaders.

Scouting is fundamentally pledged to express boy life, so among its constructive things, recreation and fun must ever be kept prominent.

Scouting begins both when and where the school day stops as it provides something socially and personally valuable and attractive for his leisure time. Scout use of part of the boys leisure means that the work of the school has been fortified to that degree. The boy has more leisure time than school time in his year and the leisure time activities may nullify character building efforts of the school. Scouting affords for this period attractive activities which compete with the educatively uncensored but operative, street, playground, movie, swimming hole, etc., etc.

2) Scouting, however, must keep its methods, its technique, its spirit separate and distinct and removed from school class room procedure. Scouting should view with grave concern, efforts to teach it by adding it to the school curriculum. Scouting is not a thing to be taught via the four-walls-of-a-room method, it is a program to be lived —and where possible in the out-of-doors.

3) Specific Acts of Cooperation.

a) The free use of school buildings as meeting places for the troop of the neighborhood is widely practiced. School Boards make needed appropriations or arrangements with their School janitors. This is educationally sound as making for a wider educational use of the school plant which often stands idle and unused 16 hours or more out of the 24. This affords the school as a social agency an opportunity to serve and be related to a widened circle.

b) In some places the Board of Education has provided offices for the local Scout Movement and in a few cases have carried their desire to help even to the point of paying the executive salary.

c) The sponsoring of troops by the school as parent institution and the active use of the scout program to reach its boys.

In a recent report of a survey of Boy Conditions in New York City, Mr. W. A. Whiting of the National Council Staff included in his report the following Socially Sound scheme for organizing scouting in the schools of that city.

c-1) The Troop Committee, that bulwark of Scouting efficiency is really the key to the success of the project. How should this be provided to safeguard a mere "teacher and a group of boys" relationship?

There must be some method or device for tying the scout endeavor among the boys of a school, back into the permanent life of the community, even as is the case with a church. (See Chapter I, page 2.)

This the report indicates should be secured from some permanent group of citizens from the neighborhood and tied in some way to their school as center or meeting place.

Among the different groups thus used were "The Parent-Teachers' Association," "The Child Welfare Association" of one school and the Parents, "The Neighborhood Association," The School-Social Center or Forum, etc., etc.

Where no such group existed, a new association was formed along similar lines and known as the Citizenship Training Association of the area in question.

c-2) This group finds the leadership within the group and its geographic or interest constituency—among the finer qualified men of its own peculiar language group.

c-3) The School is the meeting place and the school authorities maintain close relations with the troop, including a membership on the Troop Committee.

The social basis of this method is admirable. It is helping the neighborhood to help its own boys and further ties them to their own school which alike for native and foreign groups is the enabling source of national power and unity.

d) The members of the faculty and officers of the school are widely used as instructors and as leaders. The school superintendent is frequently made a member of the Court of Honor or given other important tasks.

e) The scout group of boys is often used as such by the school for various services or the accomplishment of certain ends within the group itself.

Close cooperation here is much to be desired. The scoutmaster can often help hold a boy up to a higher standard of school work and can help tide him over difficulties which might lead the boy to drop out.

370 Relations with other Organizations

The scout spirit and ideals are invaluable morale elements which can enrich the school spirit with the influence of oft-needed qualities.

f) While the Scout leadership in a community would never take the attitude of telling the school officers how they should run their schools, it is well to keep in mind the psychological soundness of the program and the high rank accorded it by outstanding educational leaders.

A Working Agreement

The following letter is of interest as indicating lines of cooperation projected in Baltimore, Md.

November 1920.

To the Board of School Commissioners,
Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:

Pursuant to the suggestion made at the informal luncheon Conference of the Board of School Commissioners on November 10th, we take pleasure in placing before you the following suggestions bearing upon building better boyhood for Baltimore.

The Baltimore Local Council of the Boy Scouts of America recognize that,

- (1) About one third of a boy's time is unorganized leisure.
- (2) That what boys do fixes their habits.
- (3) That Baltimore is therefore vitally concerned in giving boys a chance to do right things under the leadership of right hearted men.

And therefore respectfully suggests, on behalf of the citizenship and boyhood of Baltimore,—

- (A) That the Board of School Commissioners should co-operate with us in every possible way in helping our boys.
- (B) That the Board of School Commissioners give favorable consideration to the authorization and necessary provision for the opening of school buildings for the use of the Scout troop or troops from the vicinity of the school, as such needs individually arise from time to time.
- (C) That the Board of School Commissioners, through its Executive the Superintendent, suggest to the Principals of the City Schools, that they inventory the boy conditions about their schools and in the light of the facts revealed be prepared to try to help give leadership to having the leisure time of these boys organized and filled with useful things. In the making of such boy condition surveys, the individual principals may call upon the local Scout Headquarters for expert help.
- (D) That a socially sound method of reaching such groups of boys with constructive influences is,
  - (1) Use the Parent-Teacher or Neighborhood Association of the school or a new group made for that purpose, as the permanent group to assume responsibility for thus helping its boys, and as a first step have them appoint a Troop Committee of three men with the Principal as an additional and advisory exofficio member of the committee.

- (2) This group would then select a man of character and influence as a Scoutmaster who would be approved and trained by us.
- (3) The authorization for the use of the building would be sought from the Board of School Commissioners.
- (4) The boys would then be brought together and be given the benefit of the Scout character-building and citizenship training leisure-time program.

Scouting teaches boys to do by doing and teaches them citizenship through serving. The Local Council of Boy Scouts of America of Baltimore, therefore, stands ready to serve the schools and the boys in every possible way and will welcome such opportunity.

Yours for better Boys in Baltimore,

Scouting and Labor

Scouting is concerned with the life enrichment of the individual boy and on that service platform commends itself to employer and labor union and parent and church alike. During its early years, the movement was viewed with suspicion here thinking it savored of militarism, which its uniform may have suggested.

Scouting is in no sense militaristic, indeed that is one thing which it is not. It is concerned with character building, citizenship training, and physical fitness. The few marching formations learned by most troops are solely for parade or safely marching through crowds.

372 Relations with other Organizations

Labor, at first, was concerned about the use of scouts in strikes, but Scouts are not thus used. The result of the clearing up of these two points has been the widespread labor endorsement of Scouting.

The results of the investigations of the Committee on Schools of the Illinois Federation of Labor are included herewith. They should prove helpful to executives in dealing with various labor groups.

Federation of Labor Report on Scouting

Joliet, Illinois, Oct. 15, 1917.

"To the Officers and Delegates, Thirty-fifth Annual Convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

Greetings:

After a careful investigation of all reports, papers and documents available bearing on the Boy Scout Movement, a subject referred to this committee for investigation, we submit the following:"

- 1) Origin of Boy Scout Movement.
- 2) Militarism and Interference with Labor arouses opposition.
- 3) Labor's opposition forces change of Policies.
- 4) Two Boy Scout Organizations in the United States.
- 5) The United States Boy Scouts.

NOTE—(The above paragraphs in the report are not reprinted here as their content is covered fully in the scout literature. They refer largely to the militaristic program of the U. S. Boy Scout organization, dissolved by court action instituted by the Boy Scouts of America as set forth in the Scoutmaster's Handbook (1920) pages 475 to 479.

- 6) The Boy Scouts of America.
- 7) Congress Highly Commends Boy Scout Movement.
- 8) Federal charter & Constitution of Boy Scouts of America.
- 9) Boy Scouts of America Laws.
- 10) Participation in Public Functions.
- 11) Movement is Non-Competitive, Non-political and Non-partisan.
- 12) Movement is not Military.

13) Helpful in reducing Juvenile Delinquency.

14) Comprehensive Educational Plan.

The material in paragraphs 6-14 are not re-printed here as they are already known to the Scout Executive being merely a summary of facts and purposes of the Boy Scouts of America.

The remainder of the report (paragraphs 15-19) is published in full.

15) "Labor's Attitude Not Hostile, but Friendly.

Unfortunately, from the evidence at hand, it appears that the Boy Scout movement has continued to be involved in the discussion of militarism, based entirely upon unmistakable evidence here and there of an unfortunate misinterpretation of the real aims and purposes of the Boy Scouts of America movement, and because of the United States Boy Scouts and other new movements of this character. The workers' opposition to the Boy Scout movement finally resulted in a thorough investigation of the subject by the American Federation of Labor and its approval of the Boy Scouts of America organization.

At the annual meeting of the American Federation of Labor, held in Rochester, N. Y., 1912, the Executive Council, after having completed a most thorough and far-reaching investigation into the aims and objects of the Scout movement, recommended the rejection of the resolutions which had been introduced denouncing the Scout movement in this country, and further recommended co-operation on the part of labor men, and the keeping in such touch with the movement as might help to promote its activities and its purposes to guard against militarism in any form. The report pointed out that the criticism which had been made by laboring people in different parts of the country was largely based upon misunderstanding caused by the United States Boy Scouts and their military program.

One of the Vice-Presidents of the Federation wrote in connection with the investigation as follows:

Since reading your letters and printed matter, besides listening to your interesting talks on the subject, I have experienced a change of heart about the Boy Scouts, and aversion on my part is being succeeded by a lively interest.

The Treasurer of the A. F. of L. wrote as follows:

I am fully convinced of the very great value of the Scout movement to the boys of our great nation. After investigating their work and what they are being taught, the movement has my hearty approval.

It was also because of this confusion that the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor at first condemned the Boy Scouts Movement, but later reversed its attitude, as is evidenced in the following extract from a letter sent last November by Martin P. Joyce, representing the committee to investigate the Boy Scouts of America, appointed by the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, to Mr. Samuel Gompers:

The Committee is going to present the following recommendation to the Executive Council meeting of this organization:

That the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., endorse the Boy Scout Movement and that officers of the C. L. U.'s and local unions shall keep in constant touch with the Movement, so as to prevent its activities or purposes being directed toward any military movement or militarism in any form, and matters affecting the rights and interest of the working people that the Boy Scout Movement be urged to a constantly closer and more sympathetic attitude toward the organized labor movement in its work and struggle for the achievement of a higher material, political, moral and social standard for the toilers of our State.

Our investigation also disclosed the fact that the United Mine Workers of America some time ago adopted a law prohibiting members of that organization from joining the Boy Scout movement. This action of the United Mine Workers of America was evidently predicated upon a similar confusion of organizations, because on May 28, 1917, the Executive Board of the United Mine Workers took the following action regarding the Boy Scouts of America, thus placing its stamp of approval upon this particular organization:

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA

Indianapolis, Ind., May 28th, 1917.

To the Officers and Members,
United Mine Workers of America.

Brothers:

Those in whose hands, for the present at least, are placed the destinies of our nation, have emphasized the necessity of utilizing during the present war all the resources of our nation. Threatened shortage in the world-wide supply of food stuff has been presented to the people of our country and all have been impressed with its alarming nature. Civic organizations of all kinds, as well as individuals, are being constantly appealed to, to contribute toward an increase in the food supply and to render such service as may lie within their power during the critical period through which our country is now passing.

The organization known as the Boy Scouts of America, is one of the organizations whose services are being used in a most helpful manner. The membership of this organization is being encouraged to till the soil, tend gardens, harvest crops and render such other civic service as they may be able to perform. In view of the fact that the constitution of the United Mine Workers provides that those who belong to the "Boy Scout Movement" are not eligible to membership in our organization, many members of our union as well as the sons of members of our organization are denied the privilege of joining the Boy Scout Movement and in this co-operating manner give the service to the community in which they live and our nation as well, which they are asked to perform.

In line, therefore, with patriotic responses which are being made by individuals and organizations in every section of our great country to the call of our nation, the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America recommends to the membership of our organization that the prohibition incorporated in the laws of our organization against members of our union joining the Boy Scout Movement be suspended until the meeting of the next international convention, and that until then at least, the membership of our union and the sons of members of our organization who desire to join the Boy Scouts of America be permitted to do so without interference in any manner whatsoever with their membership in the United Mine Workers of America.

By order of International Executive Board.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN P. WHITE, President.

FRANK J. HAYES, Vice-President.

WILLIAM GREEN, Secretary-Treasurer.

16) Socialists' Attitude.

It would seem that the Socialist party itself has been prompted in its opposition to the Boy Scouts of America by reason of this confusion and misunderstanding and that there exists no real opposition to the Boy Scouts of America. In support of this conclusion we submit herewith copy of a letter sent by Mr. Eugene V. Debs to Mr. Lanfersiek, wherein he distinguishes between the United States Boy Scouts and the Boy Scouts of America, condemning the former organization and approving the Boy Scouts of America movement.

December 18th, 1915.

Dear Comrade Lanfersiek:

Please take the time out of your busy hours to read carefully the enclosed correspondence in regard to the "Boy Scouts of America." Also please examine the literature of said organization referred to in the letter of Mr. West, Chief Scout Executive, which I am asking him to send you if he has not already done so.

Of course, I understand the party attitude and the attitude of Socialists generally toward Boy Scouting so far as it is designed to, inculcate and express the spirit and purposes of militarism and war.

But there are Boy Scouts and Boy Scouts, as appears quite plainly from the reading of enclosed correspondence and the literature of the organization Mr. West represents.

I have long hesitated about this matter because in common with other Socialists I confess to having been deeply prejudiced against the very term, and I think it is due to the same prejudice that the party has been influenced to take its stand against this later and altogether different Boy Scout organization.

A careful examination of the facts presented to me by the officers of this organization convinces me that our party should at least give said organization the benefit of a fair investigation before pronouncing judgment against it. To this end I venture to suggest that you have the matter brought up at the next meeting of the National Executive Committee and see if the matter cannot be reopened and a committee appointed to make the investigation here suggested and report back for such action as may be deemed proper. I think this is but fair to the "Boy Scouts of America" and to those young men and boys who desire to be members of both the Socialist party and the Boy Scouts' Organization.

Of course, I need not explain that if this organization in any manner fostered militarism I should not have the slightest use for it. But it does nothing of the kind. On the contrary, its literature contains some of the strongest articles against militarism, war and bloodshed, and some of the noblest pleas for human brotherhood and peace that I have ever read. This new organization, it seems to me, is suffering the sins of its precursor, the one patronized by Hearst, and which had for its purpose the teaching of murder to the young in the name of patriotism.

Free from all taint of militarism there is much in such an organization for the young to commend it and I confess to a liking for its teaching of manliness, its attention to bodily health and vigor, its stimulating out-doors program and its inculcation of principles of mutual kindness and mutual help among its members. There is much else to be said in its favor and I do not know why it should not be a good thing for young Socialists to join and there mingle with the youth of the land for purposes of common betterment along lines to which I can see no possible objection but everything to commend.

If there is anything in the organization that countenances war or cruelty to man or beast I have not discovered it.

The party, I know, does not mean to be unfair, and if its present attitude is unjust it is due to the general impression it has received of Boy Scouting from the Hearst military organization. I have asked

376 Relations with other Organizations

Mr. West to communicate directly with you and I am sure his claims will have all consideration at your hands.

Thanking you for myself for any attention you may give this matter, I remain, as ever,

Yours fraternally,

(Signed) EUGENE V. DEBS.

17) No Opposition Whatever to the Boy Scouts of America.

September 25th of this year your committee sent out a circular letter to each and every International Trade Union and to every State Federation of Labor, asking them to furnish your Committee with all data they may have on hand, evidencing the attitude of their respective organizations on this subject.

From the replies received and with the exception of the foregoing reports, every International Trade Union and State Federation of Labor having responded, has advised your Committee that their respective organizations have at no time condemned the Boy Scouts of America. The American Federation of Musicians, which has had occasion to complain on several occasions because of competition with the Boy Scouts' bands, advised your committee that the American Federation of Musicians was opposed to the so-called United States Boy Scouts, and other independent Boy Scouts' organizations which have no connection with the Boy Scouts of America, and who are founded on military lines, but they have no objection whatever to the Boy Scouts of America and that this organization meets with the full approval of the American Federation of Musicians.

Mr. Edward P. Usher, President of the Toledo Central Labor Union, in behalf of that organization, also approves of the Boy Scouts of America, and as proof of this statement we submit the following letter sent by Mr. Usher to Mr. J. St. Clair Mendenhall, Scout Executive, situated in Toledo, Ohio:

I desire to offer my congratulations upon the good work the Boy Scouts of Toledo are doing under your able management and direction.

I feel that this organization is doing a service for the boys that merits the appreciation of the general public. It teaches the boy to live morally and to be of service to his fellows and in that way is helping himself to grow into a better man to the advantage of himself and to the benefit of the community.

I wish the Boy Scout Movement every success.

The Georgia Federation of Labor has also investigated this subject, and after a thorough investigation, has condemned the United States Boy Scouts organization, and approved the Boy Scouts of America. In its report, the Georgia Federation of Labor finds that the ideals and activities of the Boy Scouts of America are for peace and the building up of body, mind and character; that the rifle is not a part of their equipment, and that the Boy Scouts of America is an organization that under its present policy is a developer of the best qualities in a boy and a movement that has for its ultimate object the molding of better citizens, and should therefore be encouraged.

18) Attitude of A. F. of L. Approved and Boy Scouts of America Endorsed.

In view of the facts disclosed by the investigation of your Committee, we find that character development is the real objective of the Boy Scouts of America organization, and that every step in its Scouting program is but a means to this end. The variety and interest of, as well as the practical knowledge insured, by its teachings, are after all but a means for holding the interest of the boys under such leadership as will bring about character development. This character development manifests itself in health, efficiency, chivalry, loyalty, patriotism, and good citizenship.

Your Committee is in full accord with the patriotic ideals, having prompted the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America in its recent favorable decision on this subject and as herein reported. We heartily approve the conclusions and recommendations adopted by the American Federation of Labor at the Rochester Convention in 1912, which provide "that we do not denounce the Boy Scout Movement; that on the contrary, the officers of the American Federation of Labor shall keep in constant touch with the movement, so as to prevent its activities or purposes being diverted toward any military movement, or militarism in any form, and that in matters affecting the rights and interests of the working people, that the Boy Scout movement be urged to a constantly closer sympathetic attitude toward the organized labor movement in its work and struggle for the achievement of a higher material, political, moral and social standard, for the toilers of our country."

19) Conclusion.

Your Committee therefore recommends that inasmuch as the movement of the Boy Scouts of America is under the watchful eye of the officers of the American Federation of Labor, that we approve of this organization, and that we be guided by these conclusions until we feel justified in following some other course.

We further recommend that the United States Boy Scout organization be disapproved of and all other independent movements of a similar character, because of their teachings of militarism and blind obedience and subserviency to the employing interests.

In recommending approval of the Boy Scouts of America we suggest that this organization be urged to a constantly closer, sympathetic attitude toward the organized labor movement in its work and struggle for the achievement of a higher material, political, moral and social standard for the toilers of our country."

The Merit Badges

The vocational significance potential in the merit badge program should prove attractive to and be encouraged by labor groups, as they afford a lad the chance to master the rudiments of crafts and thus expedite his mastery of the trade or profession of his choice.

378 Relations with other Organizations

The labor unions contain many skilled Masters of merit badge subjects who are available, if otherwise suited, as special subject instructors.

Scouting and Men's Societies

There are a number of groups of picked men in our communities, which are taking an active interest in boyhood.

Conspicuous among these are Rotary, Kiwanis, Lion Clubs, Chambers of Commerce and others.

These groups stand officially ready to cooperate in programs of boy welfare. Their service to Scouting and other Boys' work efforts has been tremendous and is potentially more so.

Lodges, unions, and many social groups are often glad to render non-partisan service to the boys through the scout program.

Scouting and Other Boys' Work Agencies

"Scouting neither seeks nor desires a monopoly in boy service." Relations with Boys' Clubs, Woodcraft League, special church and Sunday School Societies, Settlement House and Community Center Clubs, Y. M. H. A., Y. M. C. A. and K. C., etc., are fundamentally relationships of fellowship and co-operation. With all these in action, there are still myriad boys untouched.

In the main, the relationships to other boys' work agencies have been happy and co-operative. Naturally in some instances there has been friction, due principally to misunderstanding and to personalities. In order to bring about a much clearer understanding of the motives and work of the Boy Scouts of America and the Y. M. C. A., the Boys' Workers of the Y. M. C. A. at their conference in May, 1920, at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, adopted the following resolution:

"Recognizing the splendid contribution which the Boy Scout program is making to the boy-life of the nation, it is recommended that the Association maintain a policy of cordial friendship toward and a spirit of co-operation with the Scout Movement.

We recommend the appointment of a joint National Commission of representatives from the National Boy Scouts of America and from the Young Men's Christian Association for the consideration of methods of co-operation and relationship between the two Movements."

The Boy Scouts of America gladly responded to this invitation to participate in the Joint Commission and the Commission will at an early date issue a joint statement on relationships.

Organized for Service

The policy of the Boy Scouts of America is one about which there can be no doubt—it is fixed by the constitution of the Movement as well as by its ideals of service.

- 1) The Boy Scouts of America neither seeks nor desires monopoly in boy service.
- 2) Its purpose is clearly to "cooperate with existing agencies" in every possible way toward the welfare of boyhood. Every genuine, fair and honest agency has a right to such cooperation.
- 3) When the Movement is invited into a community by that community, its duty is to serve the boyhood to the best of its ability—indeed it is its duty to serve better than any other agency has done, if that be possible—but competitive criticism or mud-slinging or opposition should be clearly left to someone else to do. Let the Scout Executive stick religiously and efficiently to his job of serving boys! The Community will recognize where merit exists.
- 4) Where difficulty has arisen the Scout Executive and his council should search with care their own hearts and acts to see that they themselves consistently live the Golden Rule and do no ill and give no cause for offense.

CO-OPERATION WITH AMERICAN LEGION

Ever since the war veterans and posts have in individual cases sponsored scout troops and provided leadership but more recently a definite concerted effort has been made by the Legion under the direction of its National Commander—Hanford MacNider, himself a local council member and firm believer in Scouting—to develop a nation-wide plan of co-operation with the Boy Scouts of America in organizing new troops and in working to strengthen troops already formed.

There are at present (1922) some 6,600 communities in the United States which do not have any scout troops. It is hoped that the Legion may be successful in reaching these communities, which are for the most part in rural districts, where problems of leadership are particularly difficult. Much is hoped from the proffered service of the 11,000 Legion Posts throughout the country and the Scout Executive and the Local Council should make an earnest effort to get in touch with local post commanders and interest them in Scouting.

In turn it goes without saying every Boy Scout troop will gladly hold itself prepared to serve the Legion in every way within its power. A good example of such service is the remarkable work done by Scouts of Kansas City and vicinity during last year's Legion Convention, when a thousand or more boys were on duty as traffic aides, guides, messengers, guards of honor and so forth during the whole period of the convention, doing their task so well that the Legion voted them a resolution of appreciation in addition to a resolution endorsing Scouting and urging Legionnaires to become active workers as Scoutmasters, Troop Committeemen and so forth.

CO-OPERATION WITH ROTARY, KIWANIS, ETC.

Boy Scouts are also well equipped for co-operative service with Rotary, Kiwanis, Exchange, Lions Clubs, Elks, Masons. etc.. and as many of these clubs and fraternal orders as possible should be interested in Scouting and drawn into active sponsorship where conditions warrant.

Women's Clubs, Auburn Societies, Save-the-Flowers Clubs, Humane Associations and many other institutions and groups will find it possible and advantageous to use Scout Service from time to time, and will in turn give loyal support to the Movement if properly approached and interested.

THE SCOUT OATH

On my honor I will do my best—

1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

CHAPTER XV

COMMUNITY SERVICE

Scout Executive A. D. Jamieson, Detroit, Mich.

“Community service is always possible to any troop anywhere.

Conditions vary but there is always work to be done by the troop that wants to do it.”

“The rule for Scouts should be:—Render service for service, give good measure, and do it first.”

Handbook for Scoutmasters.

Citizenship Through Serving

“To be Helpful to Other People at all Times”

Service to others is a fundamental principle of practice in Scouting. Not only are important personal habits builded thereby, but citizenship itself is best taught and developed through actual service to the Common Welfare.

READINESS TO SERVE is the working attitude demanded of those who would live in and help maintain a real democracy. Such an attitude is builded by actual service.

Scouting Serves in Peace or War

Boy Scouts rendered such splendid service during the war period that many people came to regard the movement as existing only for such service. A prominent war-worker in a large city remarked on Armistice Day, “Well, what are the scouts going to do now that the war is over?” This question is an index to much of the favorable impression aroused by the Scout Movement by its extensive and varied war service.*

This war service accomplished real results for the winning of the war, and it did more—it set a new pace for Scout service in peace time. And if, as we claim, we are peace Scouts, we must be no less aggressive in our peace service than in our war and pre-war service. Happily, reports from far and near indicate that the "Good Turn" means just as much to scouts and leaders now as during the hectic days of 1918.

The By-Product of Service

Just as the individual good turn becomes a vital part of the boy's scout life, so the troop or community good turn became a vital part of Scouting in the community. "Do a good turn daily," while no doubt intended originally for the boy, has come to apply to the patrol, the troop and the entire scout community, and indeed the whole movement. The effect of this policy of "helping others at all times" has been what might be expected—the development of a community spirit among the troops just as the single "Good Turn" develops a corresponding phase of the boy's character and produces in him a desire to be of service constantly.

So the effect of scout service is two-fold. Like Shakespere's quality of mercy, "It is twice blessed. It blesseth him that gives and him that takes." The outcome of the practice of the daily "Good Turn" is the daily strengthening of character, be it in the individual, the troop or the whole body of Scouts.

It is well for the Executive to keep definitely in mind that there is no publicity as effective as high-quality human service. No other single factor will put Scouting before the community as quickly, favorably and permanently as community service. Those communities which are consistently and adequately served, rarely disappoint the Council and Executive when finances as needed.

Types of Service

The troop and community "good turns" are now so universally practised that a lengthy treatment on the subject is unnecessary here. A partial summary of the diversified services rendered by troops, singly and in groups, during recent years will no doubt have value and be of interest. For clearness, the service is classified:

1. Campaigns (other than War Service) as Clean-up, Safety First, Etc., Participation in,

2. Civic celebrations, Parades, etc. (General Participation in,
3. Civic celebrations, Parades, etc. (Holidays or other Special Days), Participation in,

Some Typical "Good Turns"

The annual reports of every troop and local council give interesting descriptions of many good turns. The following are taken at random from these reports:

Omaha, Nebr. Scout Speakers Squadron gives four-minute talks at schools, churches and theatres on Humanity to Animals.

Waukegan, Wis. Scouts distribute window cards advocating good roads.

Indianapolis, Ind. Scouts participate in Clean-up and Paint-up campaign and in distribution of Christmas gifts. Also many troops do definite work in building and placing bird houses.

Meriden, Conn. Protecting the woods surrounding city from forest fires so efficiently that requests have come for repetition of this work. Discovered two missing persons in territory surrounding town.

Portsmouth, N. H. Decorated soldiers' graves on Decoration Day. Conducted strangers to hotels at time of convention.

War Service Record

Here is a very brief summary of the war achievements of the Boy Scouts of America throughout the country:

Located 20,758,000 board feet (5,200 carloads) of standing black walnut for gun stocks and aeroplane propellers.

Collected over 100 carloads of fruit pits, enough for 500,000 gas masks.

Conducted more than 12,000 war gardens and farms.

Distributed over 30,000,000 pieces of Government literature.

Rendered invaluable services for the Red Cross, the United War Work Committee and other national organizations serving the Government.

Served well in Food and Fuel Conservation.

Confidential service for the Third Naval District.

Performed countless individual acts of service to the Government, not recorded under any special classification.

Presented a united front of patriotic zeal in every community, which in itself was of incalculable value to the nation.

Nearly 20,000 Scouts earned the Treasury Department Medal in the Liberty Loan Drives. Almost half that number qualified for bars, in addition: 16,026 achievement buttons have been awarded for War Saving Stamps sales, also 8,221 ace medals, 18,886 bronze palms, 1,726 silver palms, 212 gold palms.

Translated into dollars, this means that the 400,000 Scouts sold about $50,000,000 worth of War Savings Stamps, each Scout, therefore, sold an average of $125 worth. In the four Liberty Loans they secured close to 2,000,000 subscriptions, totaling over $300,000,000. If all the boys of scouting age had done as well as the average Scout, they would have sold $7,500,000,000 worth of bonds.

This exceeds the first two bond issues combined

West Orange, N. J. Scout Headquarters served as employment bureau.

Morris, Ill. Scout Executive leads in supervised play for entire town.

Bucyrus, O. Scouts made six mile hike out of city to bring back Community Christmas Tree.

Scranton, Pa. Assisted Curator of museum to label 100 trees in park, furnishing tin labels properly lettered and put up.

Detroit, Michigan. Scouts regulate pedestrian traffic on busy corners at Christmas time, also act as safety guides in directing school children across busy streets.

Reciprocity

Scouting not only seeks to help boys to serve their community but also to have the community serve its boys.

Habits in either case only result from actual doing. It is to the advantage then both of the boys and of Scouting as a Movement to give the community actual opportunities to serve the scouts.

The "How" of Community Service

By far the greater amount of such service is rendered in response to definite requests for the help of the Boy Scouts. The City, the State and Nation, the Church, the School, Chambers of Commerce, Community Funds (Peace Chests) all call upon the scouts for service, from distributing posters to hunting for lost children. How shall such requests be met? Shall the Executive alone be responsible for approving or denying such requests, or shall he seek the advice from his council officers or his scoutmasters before agreeing to furnish scout aid for the undertaking in question? The answer to this question depends on circumstances.

The Executive's Decision

When a request for service or cooperation involves a local or national policy which is clean cut in its bearing on the case, the Executive may well save the time of his officers by deciding at once how to treat the request. In this class are numerous requests for cooperation in marketing various commodities, ranging from sheet music to coffee, all of which, according to promoters, are being offered for sale for the sake of "aiding the Boy Scouts." The Constitution and By Laws of the National Council offer very definite pronouncements on such matters. In Art. XVI, Sec. 1. of the By Laws, we read:

"No members of the Boy Scouts of America, troop of scouts chartered council, or any officer or representative of the Boy Scouts of America shall have the right to enter into a contract of relationship of a commercial character involving the Boy Scouts of America unless duly authorized by the Executive Board and then only in connection with the carrying out of the purposes of the Boy Scout Movement. Nor shall any local council, troop of scouts, or group of boys enter into a contract or business relationship with a business which may be construed as using the Boy Scout Movement for commercial purposes. This is not to be interpreted however, as interfering with any scout earning money for his own scout equipment or for his troop."

and Sec. 2.

"Boy Scouts, collectively or individually, shall not be used in the solicitation of money or the sale of tags or other similar methods of solicitation of money in connection with efforts to raise money incidental to the expenses of Scouting."

The executive's duty in such matters is to avoid commercializing the movement without interfering with the privilege of the individual scout.

Likewise if approached with a request for scout help in advertising the merits of candidates for political office, even though the boys serve as private citizens, the Executive must consider Art. III, Sec. 2 of the Constitution:

“The Boy Scouts of America shall not, through its governing body or through any of its officers, its chartered councils or members, involve the Boy Scout Movement in any question of a political character but each official and member shall have freedom of thought and action as an individual.”

In many cases the executive's experience will enable him to say “Yes” or “No” at once in answer to a call for help, but he should not hesitate, if he finds himself in a quandary to consult his council officers regarding such matters, especially the scout commissioner and council president or his committee on Community Service.

The Committee on Community Service

In many Councils a standing committee of the Council has been most valuable in passing upon requests for service in which the use of scouts is involved.

Such a committee may consist of three or five men, familiar with the established policies of the movement, eager to maintain the integrity of the “good turn” idea and close enough to troop work to sense the desires of Scoutmasters and boys in responding to calls for help. Better still, let the committee include in its makeup one or two representative Scoutmasters.

The function of the Committee is to pass judgment upon requests for the services of Boy Scouts. Inasmuch as such requests usually come directly to the scout executive, it will be his duty to see that they are passed on, in one form or another, to the committee. In so doing the executive may find it necessary to call the attention of the committee to those provisions of our National Regulations which stamp the Movement as non-political, non-sectarian, and non-commercial. He must insure the good name of Scouting by keeping before his committee, the proper criteria for judging the necessities for good turns. Such criteria include the National Policies already mentioned and, in addition, these considerations:

- (a) Can Boy Scouts render this service more effectively than any other agency?
- (b) Is the service such that every scoutmaster will give his whole-hearted support to it?
- (c) Will the parents of the Scouts agree that the service is a necessity and permit their boys to engage in it?
- (d) Has sufficient time been allowed in which to prepare to render the service on the basis of quality and efficiency?
- (e) Is the service so important as to be rendered in spite of the fact that scouts may have been burdened with other duties in the immediate past?
- (f) Will the service requested be effective in keeping before the scouts the idea of "helping others at all times" and doing their duty to the Country?

Formal Application Should be Made

Many councils have adopted a formal procedure in handling service calls which seems to be effective in more ways than one. A written application, upon a form provided for the purpose, must be made by the person or society requesting help. Such application gives full particulars as to nature of service requested, time and place, guarantee of possible expense and endorsement of a responsible person. Depending upon circumstances this formal application may be passed upon by the Executive or referred to the committee on Community Service. In either case it produces these desirable results—(1) Elimination of many projects that are not even definite enough to put on paper. (2) Advance notice of need for service instead of last minute calls, always a bugbear to the Executive and his leaders. (3) Helps put Scouting on a more efficient basis.

Efficient Execution of Community Service

The efficient execution of a Community Service by Boy Scouts naturally depends upon the leadership which the undertaking receives. After an application for service has been received and approved, the responsibility for the next step usually devolves upon the Executive. He should realize first of all, that he is to be a real leader in the service himself, exercising his leadership in such a way as to get the work done by others and not undertake it himself. In other words he functions as an executive and avoids the danger of becoming a detail man.

With this in mind he must realize that his chief concern is to get the scoutmasters behind him in his endeavors to carry out the service. Methods of enlisting the active co-operation of scoutmasters for Community service vary according to the size of the Community. It may be done by telephone, by personal calls or by mail. Once the interest of the scoutmaster has been secured he becomes the intermediary between the executive office and the scouts. The executive should never invade the province of the scoutmaster and deal directly with the scouts. Needless to say there are exceptions to this important rule, but in the main it should be rigidly adhered to.

The extent of the service to be rendered will determine the number of scouts or the number of troops to be reached, but if the service is extensive, every troop should be given an opportunity to participate, even if its participation is limited to one or two scouts. In this way scouts from various troops are brought into contact with each other and the occasion itself may serve as an element in the 100% duty records of the Council.

After the scoutmasters have been reached, and while they are arranging for the participation of their scouts in the service, the executive and his staff must see to it that the necessary preliminaries are carried out. For instance, in the case of poster distribution, there would be involved a geographical layout of the entire city in districts so that each pair of scouts might be assigned to a definite territory. Similar conditions would obtain in the case of Saving Stamp Campaigns, vacant house surveys, check-ups on the census and other city-wide services.

Give Due Credit to Scouts and Leaders

It is quite important in this connection to insure accurate records of the troops and scouts participating, so that proper acknowledgment of the service rendered may be made either in local newspapers, in scout publications, or at scout rallies. While a boy derives great satisfaction from the doing of a "good turn," he feels a natural glow of pride at seeing his name in print or hearing his service acknowledged in public.

At the conclusion of the service, the executive should not neglect the important factor of reporting the success of the undertaking to those persons for whom the service was rendered, as well as to the scoutmasters and boys who made it possible. The executive should make use of these opportunities to express appreciation for the scout service which they have rendered to the whole community, and he should so congratulate each scoutmaster who has cooperated in the service, that he will be eager to participate when the next call is made.

The above statements strive to emphasize that quality is a most important element in the rendering of Community services and that business-like methods will result, not alone in efficient service, but will produce a very favorable impression upon everyone who witnesses that service. Let us never be careless in accepting responsibilities which we can not discharge, nor undertake, on behalf of our field, to do work which will be too much of a burden upon them. But once the word is given, let us proceed with careful preparation, common-sense, and an earnest desire to carry out the principles of the Scout Oath and Law.

Volunteer Good Turns

Requests for community and national service became so numerous during the war that the respite after Armistice Day was more than welcome. The psychological effect of the "good turn" upon the scouts themselves, however, was not lost sight of, and many executives planned volunteer "good turns" which are most commendable. There is a very definite reaction in a boy which comes from participating in a community activity. He senses the fact that he is living up to the Scout Oath and carrying out the Scout Law. Any executive who lets an indefinite period elapse between community “good turns” is not alive to the possibilities of the “Good Turn.”

A few examples only may be cited to emphasize this point. Important community service which was volunteered by scouts as shown by council reports includes the following:

“Clean Up” Days,

Building and erecting Bird Houses,

Aiding police instead of Marching in Parades,

Making and Distributing Toys,

Taking Lead in Community Life Saving and Swimming Campaigns,

Removing nails and glass from streets, etc., etc.

The practical value of such activities to a movement whose chief objectives are character-building and citizenship-training will be recognized at once by every leader.

“INTO CONGRESS THRU A GOOD TURN.”

Hon. James Davis, for years representing Missouri in Washington—where he has been active in scout work told this story last year at a Washington Scout Celebration. He said: “One morning when I was about 20 years old, I was riding my horse into “town,” when by the road side, I came upon a boy, a mule, and a fallen sack of corn. The boy was helpless to reload. I got off my horse—removed my coat—loaded him and the corn on the mule and went on my way forgetting the incident.

A score of years had passed and I was candidate for Congress, in the primaries. I had heard that in one corner of the “enemy’s country” there was a fellow who was getting votes for me but I did not know him. I was nominated by 47 votes. At the county seat speech-making which followed, a big, sturdy, young man elbowed his way through the crowd to the stand, and extended his hand, saying: ‘I don’t suppose yew remember me,’ and I said ‘No, I do not.’ ‘Well,’ he said, ‘do you remember a boy, a mule, and a sack of corn in the road some twenty years ago—and you, the fourth man to pass, stopped to help me on my horse?’ ‘Well,’ he said, ‘I’m that boy, and I vowed that day that I’d repay you some day and I’ve done it. We gave you a majority of 68 votes in our township.’”

SCOUTS AS SERVICEABLE CITIZENS*"Learning by Doing"*Gleanings from 1920 Troop Reports

In Kansas City, Boy Scouts annually participate in the sanitary survey of the city conducted under the auspices of the Health Department. Over 800 Scouts turned out last spring for this service which included a census of fire hazards and health menaces throughout the entire city. Similar service is being rendered in many other cities by Scouts.

Among other things, Erie, Pa., Scouts built bird houses, conducted a Learn to Swim campaign, contributed to the Marne Memorial, aided in Salvation Army and Community Chest drive, acted as aides at Rotary Club Convention, decorated soldiers' graves, co-operated with the State Game Warden in planting walnut trees and distributed invitations to foreigners to attend Americanization classes.

Troop 1 of Florence, Alabama, took school census, aided Chamber of Commerce in checking up Federal census, and instructed 2,500 people in the use and location of fire alarm boxes.

Scouts of Casper, Wyoming, have formed an official "Sanitary Squad" which undertakes to see that the school yards and buildings are clean and sanitary.

Scouts of Bucyrus, Ohio, made an efficient collection of outstanding library books for the public library, conducted a clean-up in an old cemetery, resetting stones and markers, acted as guides and messengers for over 400 delegates at the State Young People's Conference.

Four hundred and three cases of efficient first aid rendered by Scouts during 1920 is the record of the Boy Scouts of St. Louis.

In Arlington, Mass., Troop 6 supplies a chain of bird stations with food during the winter.

In Trumansburg, N. Y., Troop 2 bought lumber, paint, etc., and made and placed village street signs.

St. Paul Scouts distributed in one day 30,000 handbills and 5,000 windshield stickers for Good Roads bill.

Boy Scouts of Riverside, Cal., took a tree census, reporting not only numbers but species and location of each. For five years past they have guarded and patrolled the trails leading to the summit of Rubidoux Morning on the occasion of the Easter sunrise service.

Scouts in Louisville, Ky., are organized as "Guardians of Property" and have taken a pledge to safeguard property at home, church and school.

Detroit Scouts helped direct traffic during holiday rush, and are regular appointed traffic aides, operating in shifts near school buildings, using semaphore signals at bad crossings.

Over 7000 Boy Scouts are registered as Forest Guides in the State of Pennsylvania, pledged to protect the wild animal and plant life of the state and practice and spread the doctrine of fire prevention.

Tulsa, Okla., Scouts carried on a "Spring offensive" against the bayworm and collected nearly a ton of glass, sharp pieces of metal and other debris from roads in the interest of tire safety.

CHAPTER XVI

PUBLIC OCCASIONS

Asst. Executive A. H. Townsend, Queens, N. Y.

The prestige of Scouting in a given community is dependent on the public appearance of the scouts as well as upon the lives they unconsciously lead. Troop exhibitions, parades, rallies, community good turns, mass meetings, and all scout activities witnessed by outsiders have a direct reaction on public opinion. Worth while public occasions, wisely planned and successfully carried out will help educate the public and thus widen the service range of Scouting.

Community Service

The Community "Good Turn" by scouts often in connection with a public occasion such as a County Fair, a Clean Up Campaign, a local celebration, or a public holiday, affords an opportunity for the Scout Movement to appear before the Public in the very best light. This subject has been treated on pages 219 to 227 of the "Handbook for Scoutmasters" and is also covered in this volume, Chapter XV.

This chapter, however, will not concern itself with those public functions in which the scouts render services to other organizations or to the community but will confine the discussion to those occasions in which the program is primarily or entirely in the hands of the Scout organization.

The Scout Rally

Public meetings of scouts with a program of scout activities are commonly called rallies. A Parents' Night by the only troop in a small country town is a rally just as truly as the annual gathering of hundreds of troops in a metropolitan center.

Rallies usually consist primarily of scoutcraft demonstrations and scout contests. A review or inspection of troops may be included. Most rally programs include one or more special features, such as a big game of "Flag-Raiding," the award of scout badges, or a talk by a prominent personage.

There are several variations of the rally, such as the Wild West Round Up, an Indian Pow Wow, a Water carnival, a Jamboree, etc. As a rule they follow the same general lines as the ordinary scout rally, but with a special emphasis on some one activity.

Morale and Publicity

The rally has a two-fold aim:—first, to educate the participants and build morale; second, to educate the spectators and thus accomplish worthwhile publicity. This two-fold purpose must be kept in mind in preparing the program. The activities should be educational and measurably spectacular for the benefit of the spectators. At the same time they should provide interesting and profitable opportunities for participation by every scout.

The Objectives

In developing plans for the rally, the first essential is a definite objective. Is the rally to be primarily for the benefit of the spectators? If so, contests, demonstrations and other features must be devised to interest and educate the public. Is the rally to be primarily for the benefit of the scouts? If so, is it to consist primarily of contests or are there any new troops for whose benefit demonstrations of elementary scoutcraft should be included? What part of the program should be given to activities whose prime value is entertainment? What, if any, place shall purely athletic contests take in the program? What, if any, big feature shall be included in the program? Upon the answers to such questions depend the site, program, and organization of the rally.

Balanced Program

The program of a rally should be balanced precisely in the same manner as a troop meeting program. There should be a formal opening, then perhaps a formal review, next a period when all or nearly all of the scouts are engaged in games and contests, then demonstrations and special features, and finally a patriotic close. See the Handbook for Scoutmasters, page 240 and page 398 of this chapter.

Rally Organization

A Scout Executive, in preparing a rally, must certainly live up to the scout motto—"Be Prepared."

The steps in organizations are approximately these:

Determine date, place, general nature of rally—in committee or otherwise.

Send out preliminary announcements.

Plan program in detail including rules of contests, etc.

This is best done in committee.

Send out detailed notices to all scout troops at least one month before rally.

Send out publicity at least once a week for month preceding rally.

Appoint complete staff of officials—judges, referees clerks, "police", etc. and make certain that each one accepts and understands his duties.

Send out "follow-up" notice to all troops ten days before rally, giving explicit directions how to reach the place of the rally and where to report. In case of out-door rally, provide for postponement in case of rain.

Get local reporters on job at rally.

Start rally on time and keep it moving fast.

After rally, take a vacation and sleep it off.

The following suggestions are from National Field Scout Executive H. A. Gordon:

Selecting the date

Perhaps the first item is the date for any particular event. In the setting of a date for a public occasion, consideration must be given to school work, the predominance of troop meeting nights, whether or not it is to be an indoor or outdoor affair, whether it is to be held during the day time or in the evening, and the proximity to the summer camp opening or closing. It will be found that the headquarters officials are often so crowded with work, preparatory to camp, to such an extent as to lessen their effectiveness in putting over a successful public occasion. A day selected following too close to the end of the summer camping season, will meet the obstacle of troops reorganizing and re-forming for the winter and in a more or less state of disconnectedness so far as their troop communications are concerned. In general, conflict between the rally and any other important scout activity is to be avoided.

Scouting has attained such a vital relationship to the boy life of the country that religious holidays and meetings must be very carefully noted and the doings of scouts so arranged as to not interfere or give offense in this respect. The going ahead with a large scout activity without care in considering other large civic gatherings, very often not only hampers the actual working out of the program due to the Scouts being tied up with the other civic occasion, but in many instances alienates the good will of those in charge of the other civic gathering.

Assembly hour should be set only after determination of the point of mobilization, the distance to such point, the transportation facilities, physical conditions governing mobilizing inside and outside the grounds, whether or not there is opportunity to dispatch participating units simultaneously or in lesser numbers.

The length of the program should not exceed two hours. While it may be possible to retain your audience, the program should close before the audience has tired—and close with a climax of interest appeal.

In the actual running of the time schedule, everything should be so planned as to prevent interest-killing, trouble-inviting delays.

Program Content

The following kind of events may be considered either public or semi-public occasions:

Scout field days, annual encampments, Courts of Honor, Formal demonstrations, emergency calls, Indian hunts, bear hunts, scout maneuvers, pageants, indoor rallies, Father and Sons' Banquets, jamborees, dramatic presentations, corn roasts and camp fires.

Where possible it is well to have a formal opening of the occasion. At most out-door and many indoor affairs, this may assume the nature of a grand march, a formal review, massing of colors, and in fact anything which the facilities at hand will enable the management to produce a formal effect with a large moving mass. A short opening address may be used advantageously with emphasis on the "short," formally introducing the officials in charge.

In the games and contests used, care should be exercised to avoid complications or difficulties in the interpretation of rules. As far as possible the games should enable a large number of scouts to participate. Due care should be taken to see that the element of danger does not become hazardous.

Demonstrations should be so staged as to make them easily seen and understood by the spectator.

The use of the diagram of the actual site in the layout of the program, will be found most beneficial. Perhaps one of the most difficult phases of a public occasion is the arrangement of scout exhibits so as to insure their being looked over by the spectator.

In most instances, where the audience is not invited to look over the exhibits until after the main events have taken place, it has been found that very few retain sufficient interest to take the trouble to inspect them. The practice of the circus, undoubtedly the result of evolution, of so arranging the layout as to require the public to pass through the menagerie before reaching the "big top," is a sound principle and one worthy of being followed in scout events. There is often some delay before the program gets under way. It seems wise to use this period for the public to view the "inanimate exhibits."

It has also been found to be of value where a good scout band is available, to have one or two selections fitted into the program.

The opportunity for cheering in mass by the various divisions or by the entire group should not be overlooked.

Paraphernalia

A careful list of all possible articles needed to properly carry out the program should be made. This should take into consideration signs, tickets, programs, wood for fire building, utensils for cooking, water for waterboiling contests, potatoes for potato races, spoons and eggs for spoon and egg races, sacks for sack races, etc. The big thing is to be sure that such a list is made up and someone given definite responsibility for it.

Another essential for the Scout Executive is a budget appropriation, sufficient to make any necessary purchases or incur any other expense necessary. Amounts to be spent never seem as large to an Executive Board when the Scout Executive asks for authority as they do when he has spent the money without authority and is asking their approval.

Paraphernalia to be used will be found to be divided into that which it is necessary to purchase and that which you can borrow. The time element in delivery should not be overlooked as well as means of transportation to the site and last but not least, what disposition is made of this paraphernalia after the event.

Site

Whenever seasonable weather permits, scout public occasions should be held out of doors. The indoor affairs however, draw bigger crowds and are less liable to be interfered with by weather conditions. In the selection of an out-door site, the ability to police the grounds so as to control the spectators and the general public must not be overlooked. The search for a proper site should include the investigation of water facilities, seating of spectators and lighting facilities. Fire and panic hazards should not be overlooked, as well as the securing of police protection against the possibility of annoyance or interference by hoodlums.

Pre-Event Organization

The long headed Scout Executive will have included in his coming year's program, date and other considerations and have them read before his council Committee and approved for execution. If in a large council, the Scout Executive should after the main features, such as main objective, site, date and general program have been decided, turn the details over to an Assistant Scout Executive. This should of course, be the Assistant who is in charge of activity. After the details of the program have been worked out as far as possible by the Headquarters staff, they should be laid before a Committee of Scoutmasters so that the details may be understood by them and advantage taken of any suggestions which they may have to make.

Considerable benefit may be derived from a public occasion in the publicity which it is possible to secure. The public is interested in knowing who your chief judge is, for instance, where the affair is to be held, when the troop which won the championship last year made its entries for this year's events. They are interested in seeing a picture of the scout who in the previous year's event carried off the most points. They will read with interest that the scoutmasters have met and considered and approved the general program.

All of these things, if there is not an employed publicity agent, should be fed regularly through the Committee on the Council charged with the responsibility of handling publicity.

Schedule

In all undertakings involving the many items of detail such as arise in the successful execution of a large public occasion, the value of a schedule cannot be over estimated. The following schedule is given not with the idea of its completeness, but more with the idea of giving an example of what such a schedule is. Preceding year included in coming year's general schedule:

90th day preceding—	Take up question of site.
60th “ “	—Begin preparation of detail program.
55th “ “	—Notify field of date and site.
45th “ “	—Open with publicity. Call meeting of Scoutmasters' representatives.
35th “ “	—Hold meeting of Scoutmasters' representatives.
34th “ “	—Print or type rule and entry blanks.
28th “ “	—Send out outlines of program and rules with entry blanks.
27th “ “	—Compile list of paraphernalia.
26th “ “	—Place orders for all necessary purchases.
25th “ “	—Negotiate for all loaned material.
24th “ “	—Complete organization of event personnel.
23rd “ “	—Place copy of program in final shape for printing.
22nd “ “	—Order awards.

18th “ “	—Preparation of general orders.
16th “ “	—Check delivery of printed program.
15th “ “	—Check acceptance of the event officials.
13th “ “	—Follow up to troops giving directions.
12th “ “	—Delivery of all signs.
11th “ “	—Formal invitations to council members, subscribers and prominent citizens.
10th “ “	—Confirm site arrangements.
9th “ “	—Start daily publicity in each paper, giving part of the entries, etc.
8th “ “	—Publicity story.
6th “ “	—Conference meeting of all event officials. Publicity story.

5th day preceding	—Close receipt on entries. Publicity story.
4th “ “	—Publicity story. Check receipt of awards.
3rd “ “	—Publicity story.
2nd “ “	—Publicity story. Call all papers and invite reporters.
1st “ “	—Final check on paraphernalia, phone or scoutgram to each event official.

With the above it is not difficult for anyone to see how it can be applied to the working out of any public occasion.

Advertising

There seems to be a consensus of opinion that the best way to attract the public in addition to newspaper publicity, is the issuance of tickets and the wise distribution of them. Each scout should be given at least two for his family, and indeed it will stimulate scout attendance if each scout to get in has to have a ticket. Particularly should tickets be sent to council members, subscribers and prominent citizens.

In the development of the printed program, there also lies opportunity for considerable publicity. The programs are usually of two styles, souvenir style and a plain working style. If the financial policy of a local council does not prohibit, considerable revenue may be secured through securing advertisements to be printed in the program. It might be well to say here however, that grave doubts exist as to the advisability of soliciting advertisements for a scout program because in many instances it has an undesirable effect upon the big effort made to secure money to run the council at home.

These programs should of course be sent one to each scout-master previous to the actual taking place of the event. There does not seem to be any particular advantage however, in sending programs to your special guests, as they do appreciate a fresh program handed to them at the site with which to follow the events of the day.

In this day of moving pictures and news specials, a publicity campaign is not complete unless all moving picture people are notified and means sought to insure their being on the ground to secure films.

The impression of many council members and prominent citizens of very excellently conceived events has been very much lowered in the past due to the lack of competent reception committee to meet them when they arrive at the site. It must be remembered that scout affairs are still a novelty, about which the public is still not thoroughly informed, and it goes a long way towards properly preparing a person's mind if some affable scout man meets these folks on arrival and shows some concern over their being properly seated and made comfortable.

Prizes and Awards

Prizes and awards are very much like high grade, keen instruments,—will do splendid work if properly used, but in the hands of inexperienced are apt to do much damage. The following is quoted from the book “The Boy Scout Movement as applied by the Church,” by Richardson and Loomis.

"The granting of prizes necessarily makes a distinction between one and several. It pre-supposes a competition or engagement of some sort with others and implies uncertainty as to the outcome. Wherever it demands of one what cannot be attained by all it becomes a mockery and a joke. Only can it serve to show who among several is most skilled. A prize therefore, at its best, is nothing more than a recognition of the attainment by one of what all may, or at least should try to attain. It becomes an evidence of success on one hand, and on the other, of failure."

With this in mind the Scout Executive should proceed with the formulation of his point systems for any contest events in such a way as to inspire the largest number of the whole to make some effort to attain the prize. The value of 1st—2nd and 3rd place in point contest is so generally known that it seems unnecessary to treat it in this chapter.

It is the personal opinion of the writer that material prizes in the way of equipment, etc., are not of the same value that tokens of achievement are, such as medals, ribbons, cups, etc.

Editorial Note:—The use of troop prizes or District awards strengthens collective unity.

Rally Records

Entry blanks should be provided which will give the name, troop number and so forth, and sufficient other information to identify the scout or team for the entry in which they are to go. It is always well also to include on this entry blank, the restrictions which may pertain regarding the entrance, particularly regarding age, weight, rank of scout, etc.

A tabulation of these entry blanks should be made up and placed in the hands of the marshals and of the clerks of the courses.

In the meeting of judges and officials previous to the date of the event, it should be thoroughly agreed and understood from whom the clerks of the courses should receive announcement as to the winners.

In the Scoutmasters' Handbook, there has been written a very thorough set of standard rules under which to conduct various contests which are of a nature to be used in a large public event. It is recommended that these rules be used as a standard for a meet and in case any contest is not so covered, that either the scoutmasters representatives or the officials and judges should previous to the meet, formulate the standards under which the contest shall take place.

Event Organization

The organization for the actual performance for a public event more particularly those involving contests, divides itself into four groups, namely, mobilization, property, medical and records. The Scout Executive or his first assistant should be the Director of the Program. Assistant Directors should be appointed for each of the four groups outlined above. Under Mobilization should also be an official announcer, official starter, cheer leaders, bugler, orderlies, chief judge and at least two other judges, and a referee.

The referee should be the final authority on whether or not a team has complied with the conditions as agreed upon regarding handicaps, weights, equipment, etc.

The Assistant Director in charge of property should be responsible for seeing that all equipment and other paraphernalia which the scouts were not requested to bring, shall be on hand. He may have under him a Director of Exhibits, and if there are any concessions to be granted, they should be classified under this group. Care ought to be taken to see that sufficient scouts are assigned to this department to handle the moving of this material whenever that is necessary in the course of events. Placing and changing of all signs shall be handled by this department.

The Medical Department may be in charge of a competent first aid man or physical Director with at least one able team of scouts on duty all of the time.

The Record Department should be in charge of an Assistant Director who shall be responsible for keeping a correct score of winners, etc.

The Director of the entire program should place himself in such position as to enable him to see as much as possible of the entire performance and will be in easy communication with all parts of the field. If the number of participants is large, it is not advisable for him to move at all from one point. He should have as many orderlies as there are district units with an orderly assigned to each unit, carrying only messages to and from that group.

It will be recalled that in the schedule given previously in this chapter, the preparation of general orders is mentioned. These general orders have to do with the various matters which take place on the floor, or field, and can be prepared long before the date of the event. These general orders should cover such things as instruction to announcers to call assembly to order, instructions to the Mobilization Director to begin the grand march, instructions to the marshals to get the different teams for the next event, instructions to the leader of the band to play upon receipt of the order, and the like.

It can very readily be seen how these general orders can be made to keep the entire assembly moving smoothly and simultaneously and without interruption with a minimum amount of study on the part of the Director at the time they actually happen.

Large events of this sort are usually successful in proportion to the amount of time and study spent in advance upon such details."

County Rally Suggestions

The following suggestions based on County Rallies in Monmouth County, N. J., by Executive M. L. Oxenham, while touching some points already mentioned, contain much valuable experience.

The democratic principle of having the scoutmasters of competing troops participate in the making of arrangements, rules and standards will go far toward understanding and smooth going.

"Early announcements should be made as to the date and other details of a council rally. Every Scout official should be urged to send in suggestions, noting particularly the errors made in any previous rally.

Most councils form a committee of scoutmasters to cooperate with the Scout Executive and the Commissioner in managing the rally and in drawing up detailed rules in advance. Preliminary publicity may be done in several ways. In our own council, we have used small posters and two color circulars, which are distributed to all troops, schools, churches and posted in public places. Invitations are prepared and mailed to officers of the council, subscribers and two for each scout to hand to his friends. We have found it advisable to print tickets also, which are distributed in the same manner.

About fifteen days before the rally, we issue a preliminary program, which gives the outline of the rally in detail, showing the time when each event is to be run off. This is usually sent to the troops with the entry blank, which is required to be filed about a week before the rally. It is hard to have the Scoutmasters understand that these entry blanks are needed, but is very necessary that they should be submitted when a large number of troops are concerned.

As soon as possible the committee formulates the detailed rules, pertaining to the rally and submits them to the scoutmasters. Upon their receipt, usually questions will arise which will cause these rules to be revised. For this reason, we have usually issued "final orders" a day or two previous to the rally, which contain any amendments to the rules and special notices for the attention of the troops.

In framing up the final program, it has been found decidedly helpful to make a diagram of the field, and sketch out step by step the various events, marking them on the portion of the field to be allotted to that event. By thus imagining each move of the rally, serious mistakes have sometimes been prevented from occurring on the day of the event.

Then from the diagram sheet, a time table program is made up, sometimes divided into ten minute periods, and with these two helps, the diagrams and the time table program, the committee can decide on the final program. This final program is printed and sent to each scoutmaster, scribe and senior patrol leader at least two days before the rally, besides being distributed free at the rally.

From the entry blanks received, a check list is made by listing each event on a separate sheet and showing the number of contestants who are to enter. This check list is used by the judges when the event is to be run and is marked by them as to the results.

At a rally, there must be no divided authority. The director must direct, and when he pushes the button the machine must work. With audience and boys waiting for things to go, there is no time for squabbles over rules. Play the game over before hand. Figure out how the event will run off if there are three entries and how if there may be thirty. Whenever possible, reduce the number of entries by district elimination contests, or by running the events in "heats" if the district plan is not feasible. In this way you can keep your entries down to a small number at the final contests and bring to the line contestants who know the rules and do not have to waste a lot of time in having them explained. What is more important, it will make it possible for the judges to decide the winners in a clear and fair manner, and besides put before your audience, experienced teams presenting a more high class exhibition.

The director should station himself at a central, strategic view point, with his orderlies nearby. When it is time for the first event on the program, the director gives the signal for the bugler to blow the call agreed upon. The battle is on, and thereafter the director acts as the general and orders up his infantry, artillery, etc., according to the time table printed on his program. The director should not leave his station.

The aides to the director should be responsible for getting the various teams up to the line for the events. Each team should be ready at least one event ahead of time. Allow no excuses for late arrivals. Start every event when it is scheduled. Should it become necessary to change the schedule as to time, keep the same order of events if it is in any way possible. Once the order is changed around, confusion sets in.

It is well to have the judges check over the entry list before starting the event and read the rules over to the teams. Ask for questions and have everything clear before starting. If there are any protests or misunderstandings, the time to bring them up is before the contest begins.

Watch carefully that all agree well in advance on such questions as to equipment to be worn, breakage, slips, coaching or leading by commissioned officers, etc. A number of councils now have the rule that no commissioned officers can command, coach or go on the field during the rally. Boy leaders only are what they desire.

Prizes and awards may be given in various ways. Some councils assign certain points for first, second and third in each event, and give a point trophy (sweepstakes) to the troop getting the most points.

The Monmouth County council at its outdoor rallies has given separate prizes of scout equipment for each event, and three trophies for first, second and third, in the total number of points.

Contest Records

An effort was made coincident with the preparation of this chapter to assemble the best time records attained by scouts and teams in rally contests. Unfortunately, practically every local council had its own set of contest rules and so the records available are in no way comparable. The new "Handbook for Scoutmasters" provides detailed rules for sixteen standard rally contests. Before any comparison can be made of the contest efficiency of scouts in various centers it is essential that they follow the same rules, the same standard regulations."

Athletic Field Day

It is doubtful if purely athletic contests have a place in the program of Scouting sufficiently important to devote an entire field day to them. There are so many scout contests, games, and sports which afford opportunity for physical competition and at the same time provide more or less valuable training in Scoutcraft, that is doubtful whether a scout organization is justified in promoting a track and field meet as such. A few of the usual athletic contests—sprints, jumps, relays, etc.—may, however, be included in a rally program. For rules, etc., consult Spalding's Athletic Handbooks, also Handbook for Scoutmasters, page 331.

The Pageant

During the past few years the pageant as the expression of community spirit has come to play an important part and is, no doubt, destined to play an even greater part in years to come. The Scout program lends itself particularly well to this kind of dramatic expression. The lives of the fine old pioneers and historic heroes dear to the hearts of scouts may well find a place in play and pageant. The various arts and crafts represented by the merit badge service, the dramatic rendering of a realistic "make believe" rescue or signal service, an impressive camp fire scene, all offer splendid opportunity for pageant treatment. These pageants may be made a striking feature either of an indoor or outdoor rally.

The most impressive feature of the part of the Boy Scouts of America at the International Jamboree at London, August 1920, was the pageant depicting the demonstration of Scouting, as developed in America. An outline of this follows on page 418.

Dramatic Presentations

In small communities and in districts of large communities "shows" of one sort or another have been presented, often with worthwhile results. The co-operation and intensive effort required in "putting on a show" are real builders of morale. In some cases the proceeds of the entertainment have gone to some special project, such as a log-cabin.

Any entertainment given by scouts should be made up largely if not entirely of features depicting the scout program and its products. Perhaps the most popular and adaptable entertainment is "A Day in Camp." The major events of a day of out-door Scouting may be compressed within a two hours entertainment, beginning with "Reveille" and setting-up exercises and closing with a council fire and "Taps." First aid, signaling, pyramid building, fire by friction, and many other scout activities may be demonstrated.

Comic features may be interspersed to prevent monotony. First aid or life-saving may afford a moment or two of tense drama. The evening council fire may include songs, stunts, speeches, jokes, contests and may even take the form of a minstrel show. "A Day in Camp" is perhaps the most useful and elastic skeleton around which to build a scout entertainment.

The Scout Supply Department has in stock several dramatic playlets which may be readily and successfully staged by boy scouts.

Special Scout Occasions

Several types of public occasions are inherent parts of the scout program. First and foremost, of course, is the Court of Honor meeting. The public investiture of scout badges with a suitable ceremony has already been recommended in the Handbook for Scoutmasters (See pages 45 to 49).

It will in most cases be wise to include in the program of such a meeting attractive features, such as an illustrated talk on some feature of Scouting, a few contests in scoutcraft, a scout band or orchestra, or some other forms of entertainment.

Father and Son Dinners or affairs have been conducted by many councils and troops.

Special Ideas

Quite a number of distinctive and out of the ordinary public scout meetings have been conducted by a number of the local councils.

Aurora, Illinois, held a big camp fire in one of the public parks, following a regular scout camp fire program with three Sioux Indians as a special attraction. Scout Executive England reports, "It not only was a great night for the boys but proved to be a fine publicity stunt, for there were more than 15,000 people there."

Aurora also conducts an annual "Camper's Reunion" in December or January.

St. Joseph, Missouri, Council included in the printed program of its "Scout Revue" a Troop Directory and an application blank for boys not scouts. The program was divided into two parts. Part I portrayed the usual activities of a scout meeting, including calling the roll, awarding badges, investiture, first aid, signaling, knot-tying, drilling, etc., Part II featured Camping and Woodcraft, including tent pitching, fire-lighting, cooking, wireless, life-saving, bridge and tower building, wall scaling and a council fire.

At the "May Scout Efficiency Meet" of Cincinnati, Ohio, tickets were distributed to the troops for the use of parents and friends and points were given each troop for the number of its friends who attended as well as for the contests.

Omaha, Nebraska, conducted a "Nani-Ba-Zha"—a fall festival "including the Indian Scalp Hunt and the Dedication of the Totem Pole, attended by appropriate Indian ceremonies."

The Syracuse, New York, Scouts were the guests of the Optimist Club of Syracuse at a "Old Time Barbecue," with a roasted ox and suitable trimmings. This was held out-doors in February in connection with the anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America.

Providence, Rhode Island, conducted a Christmas good turn rally. The scouts brought new and used playthings, outgrown clothing, and other gifts which were later distributed to needy children.

Oak Park, Illinois, at two recent rallies has awarded points for essays on one or another point of the Scout Law.

Buffalo, New York, conducted a special out-door meeting for first class scouts, known as "Flap Jack Flip." A contest in flap-jack making was the main event, although contests in chopping wood, whittling a tent peg, judging distance, lassoing, and throwing the life ring were included.

Suggested Programs

The following actual rally programs are included as they afford valuable suggestions for the planning and conduct of rallies.

The Newark Program is really too long for an average audience as two hours is a safe average, but it is of interest as it really runs two rallies; one for new, and thereafter one for older boys.

Exhibits

Many scout organizations have presented worthwhile exhibits of scout craft at public affairs such as county fairs and conventions.

Next to active demonstrations by scouts, photographs and products of scout craftsmanship form the most valuable material for such exhibits. A very attractive scout booth may easily be included in a county fair. A list of suggested exhibits follows:

A camp school, with scouts in action—camping, signalling, etc.

A tableau booth—scouts in tableaux such as “Swearing in a Recruit”—“A good turn”—“Doing First Aid”—“On Hike”—, etc.

“The Scout and Law”—visualized through scout craftsmanship with rustic wood work, rope, stones or wood carving.

Scout made maps, drawings, photographs, cabins, fires, camps, etc.

Natural history collections—butterflies, leaves, etc.

Craftsmanship—bird houses, basketry, box furniture, wireless and heliograph outfits, whittled paper knives, etc.

Merit badge work—exhibit of work done for various merit badges.

Mohawk Indian Village

A uniquely interesting type of scout exhibit was presented at the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Massachusetts, in September, 1920. This was developed by the Junior Achievement Bureau of the Exposition in cooperation with National Headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America and the Springfield Council. A replica of a Mohawk Village of lath huts was erected and forty scouts from as many different scout centers were present during the exposition, rendering public service and demonstrating scoutcraft.

THE INTERNATIONAL SCOUT JAMBOREE

by Clark E. Schurman, Former Editor of "Scouting"

The international Jamboree program was built out of short acts by different nations. The time allowance for any one act was fifteen minutes and during this time the Arena was to be "filled"—that is, approximately 150 scouts were to be participating. To demonstrate physical exercises of the modern type the Boy Scouts of America put on an act under the old old name of "A Day in Camp." At the sound of Reveille, boys strayed on to the stage through a center door dressed in pajamas and in the act of sleepily stretching. They formed in double rank along the front of the stage at five-foot intervals and indulged in the following mimetic exercises. Everybody stretch. This was done with much rubbing of eyes and grunting.

Let's saw some wood. Front and rear ranks faced each other and grasped the handles of an imaginary saw, the rear rank taking the first pull and the boys "shish"-ing with each cut of the saw. As the saw went lower and lower through the log the boys' backs bent to the task. Then laying down the saw each boy picked up and placed one end of the log to be split.

Let's split this wood for the breakfast fire. When the wood was split, each boy working his own and getting excellent twisting exercise, the wood was gathered and piled, a fire built, an imaginary match being scratched, pancake batter was stirred up, a pan greased and held over the fire, batter poured in, the pancakes flapped with many a "ka-tunk" and then some of the humorists in the crowd pretended to eat them.

Now let's go for a row. The boys sat on the ground as if in boats and rowed "doubles" and then stepped out of the boat and faced the leader who asked if they wanted to go in for a swim which, of course, led to a yell which was not mimetic. At the word the boys stripped off their pajamas, removing the nether garments first and the upper garments starting at the throat first. The audience gasped with relief when it was finally revealed that they had on scout shorts rolled up to make swimming trunks. Then there was a mimetic swim toward the audience, a turn and a return, then the boys broke for the exit. The second division opened with the entrance of the Pine Tree patrol, center stage, unloading cart and making camp. As soon as their first unloading was finished there came in two single files of big fellows with Rover packs on their backs. Each file was whistling "The Long Trail," and each wound into a big circle at either side of the Pine Tree area. They unslung packs at command and passed them around into one big stack on the side facing the audience. Then they played medicine ball games using two packs as medicine balls, passing them overhead, between their legs, alternating, around the circle football style, and also passing alternately a pack and a scout knife, trying to stick some one fellow with both articles or get someone to drop one or the other and so be eliminated. Then all the packs were reissued and placed on the ground as at terminals of the spokes of a wheel so that each boy had a pack behind him on which he could sit down. Then started the chase around the circle at the command of the leader who snatched two packs out of the circle and gave the order "Seats." This, of course, resulted in a scramble and left two fellow in the central discard. At each circling of the remaining group two more packs were withdrawn from the seat row.

While these Rover games were in process four patrols ran into position at each end of the Arena at open spacing and played Crows and Cranes as introduced by Charles F. Smith of Columbia. This is a game in which opposite patrols do any physical or humorous stunt at the mention of their names, using their partners as victims, and in which individuals are similarly pitted against individuals.

When these five rings of the circus had been going a total of six minutes from the entry of the Pine Tree, there came another thin line around each end of the Arena running down to the center in front of the acts that were going on. These forty-eight boys carried bow and drill sets for fire making. As they halted and knelt in a single line facing the audience, the Rovers stacked their packs back stage and with the Crows and Cranes fell into a standing line behind the fire makers and drew from their pockets flint and steel sets and tinder. This gave a kneeling line of forty-eight boys and a standing line of ninety-six boys all making fire, and many of them succeeded in getting as many as three flames in the 3½ minutes in which this act held the audience's enthusiastic interest. It was terminated by the sounding of assembly at which the Pine Tree patrol stood at attention and the other one hundred forty-four boys formed in twenty-four men units and one at each end and four across the center of the Arena in a single rank, backs to the audience. The colors were then brought in through the central door. To The Colors sounded, the pledge of allegiance to the flag being given as the last note of To The Colors ceased.

At the sound of recall these single rank lines faced to the center and started at double time in the building of two big circles of seventy-two scouts each, one at each end of the Arena. These circles closed in until the boys had their arms around each other's shoulders and alternated in the Boy Scout yells. This produced something of the camp fire illusion and this illusion was heightened as Call to Quarters was blown and immediately after it Taps. After the bugle had sounded Taps the boys released each other's shoulders, and as an echo call of Taps on a bugle off stage came to the audience the boys backed away from the scene of their imaginary camp fire singing "Day is done, gone the sun, from the lake from the hills from the sky, all is well, sweetly rest, God is nigh." They left the stage without crossing the circle around which they had been standing, the friction fire and Rover men recovering their properties which were left near the entrance without breaking the hush produced by the music.

Anniversary Week

Anniversary Week is celebrated each year to commemorate the formal organization of the Boy Scouts of America. A typical program—the one outlined in SCOUTING for the 1921 Boy Scout Week—is here given:

February 6 to 12

Scout Anniversary Week—Eleventh Year

The universal custom is for troops to re-affirm the Scout Oath at 8 P. M. each February 8th; or at least at 8 P. M. on the troop meeting night in this week. The second tradition is that families, friends and the un-uniformed good scouts of all ages be asked to warm the old world's heart with good turns each day of this week.

Sunday, February 6th, Scout Sunday. Church troops may well arrange for special services, enlisting the congregation in good turn work and explaining the ideals of the scouts. A report for the year, to the parent institution is appropriate. In some denominations, troop committeemen and scouts have active parts in the services. In almost all, the troop attends church in uniform. Other possibilities are: union services; visits by scouts to hospitals; scouts teaching their Sunday School classes.

Monday, February 7th, Home Folks' Day. Fathers and mothers entertained by troop at dinner. One way to assure a good program of short talks is to give over the speaking to the boys:

Troop and patrol flags, candle shades decorated with patrol animals, Scout-Law post cards at each place, and center-pieces of model bridges, towers, lean-tos and rafts are interesting.

The policeman on the neighborhood beat and a fireman from the nearest station, in uniform, will be honored guests. A bit of rope at each plate and knots to be tied at each course will "break the ice." Substantial food, camp style, is least expensive and makes the best menu.

Here again the scribe's and senior leader's reports for the year make good numbers and the troop's wag has his day. The new song book abounds with jollity for this occasion, and a parody with local hits, belongs.

Tuesday, February 8th, Scouting's Birthday. Preferably out-of-doors; and a community rally and demonstration, with the Oath in solemn setting at 8 P. M. For the rally the new troop may exhibit massed semaphore drill to music; first aid work in a large way—big bandages, stretchers, fire rescues and carries; several boys should work at once, preferably above the heads of the spectators. Placards as used in vaudeville houses to announce acts, are a help to the crowd. It is well to use the un-uniformed members as patients, implying less disaster to the scout and his better preparation for emergency service. Those games the boys shout in and laugh at most, are good to show the play side; use many boys instead of a few in the games. Close "too soon" with a color ceremony and yells.

For older troops: drills; pyramids; games; jumps into a life net borrowed from Fire Department; resuscitation (several at a time); tent pitching contests, Indian ceremonial dances; historical Scouting pageantry; a pantomime play; lantern slides of troop camp and hike pictures; and Morse code drill by at least a full patrol, using flashlights, timed to music; bridge building; Colors.

Wednesday, February 9th, School Day. Fire drills in schools, led by scouts. Safety first talks and first aid demonstrations in schools. Explanation of merit badge course by leaders to schools. Appreciation to teachers by scouts—possibly by scouts and parents mailing letters to reach teachers on this day.

Thursday, February 10th, Community Day. This day may be either the beginning or the climax of whatever community goodturn is most desirable for your troop or council to attempt. Among those that have been notably successful in more than one city are; efforts to free the pavements from "puncture possibilities," collecting bits of iron and glass in a pile in front of the City Hall; catching rats for the prevention of epidemics; organizing the town in block groups to free it from the waste paper disgrace (this may be done by half patrols of scouts going from house to house and enlisting each family in the endeavor to make the city beautiful); taking down from trees and telegraph poles all the election signs; freeing the storm-water gateways in the streets of rubbish so that they can function properly through the winter rains and thaws; getting permission to harvest down-wood in timber lots for the benefit of families who will be short of fuel this winter; getting permission to make scout window displays in any stores that may be vacant, as a means of improving the appearance of the street and at the same time advertising walk-rite, safety first, and clean-city ideals in these valuable window spaces; cleaning up vacant lots and back yards and enlisting the community in a special effort to clear the alley ways in anticipation of the coming congestion by snow.

It is quite possible to get the Mayor and other city officials to lead the scouts in some big community good turn on this annual occasion. Is there a bit of road to some favorite grove on the edge of the town which needs improving so that mothers and children can get to the grove? Is there some group of old unsightly buildings which the city really wants removed? By enlisting the Rotary Club, or the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club, the city officials, or the men of your church and getting the proper permission from the right authorities or owners, such undertakings can be put over on Community Day during Good Turn Week.

Friday, February 11th, New Member Day. Give the local papers on this day a summary of the scout situation in your community, the number of institutions with which troops could be connected, the number of boys naturally associated with these institutions which could be enjoying Scouting if men would make it possible for them. Enlist all of your forces in a campaign to recruit scoutmasters and scouts on this Friday. Have open house for strangers at all troop meetings, advertising the full list of meetings held on this night.

Saturday, February 12th, American Day. The ideal for large communities is undoubtedly the presentation of a pageant showing the development of pioneer resourcefulness in the early Americans. This may suitably begin with Indian ceremonials and dances and go through the presentation of buckskin men, prairie schooner and stage coach parties, the laying of the first railroads, the building of bridges, and finally the massing of boy scouts under the national standard for all emotional expression of patriotism in the Color ceremony and singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

In the International Jamboree, Pageant Master Chauncey Langdon had such a procession reviewed by the figure of Miss Columbia and Miss Britannia or France or Belgium. The women who played these parts came upon the arena from opposite directions accompanied by small honor guards of scouts in the uniforms of their country. They met in front of a dais, embraced each other, mounted the steps and were seated flanked by their honor guards and still holding their flags. This centered the picture for the audience as the various eras of American development passed in review before these ideal figures.

Where such pageantry is not possible it undoubtedly is still possible to have a great city game or hike or barbecue. One that is particularly appropriate is an all-city hike to some local point of historical interest. This is a good time to undertake a photographic treasure hunt to such a point. The plan for this is as follows:

The scout leaders prepare, weeks in advance, a series of photographs of land marks identifying a trail which leads away from the city and circles back to a camping spot rather near the city line. The idea of this course is to give the boys their main hike in the morning and have them near home for the return, when they are tired. Duplicate sets of these photographs are printed and numbered, and multi-graphed sheets to accompany them, tell the compass direction to be taken from the point pictured in each print. (To lay out such a trail it is best to work backwards and to have someone check over the course to make sure that the directions are actually what the trail-maker intends they should be, as nothing is more discouraging to the boys than unfairness or inefficiency in such directions.) On the morning of the hike, form the boys in parties of from eight to twelve, mixing them so that troops will get acquainted with other troops, and town boys who do not belong will be attached to each party but not allowed to go without scouts as leaders. Assign the photographs and direction sheet to the senior in each such party and start them on the way with every instruction written on their sheet.

To verify the work of each patrol, have painted somewhere upon land mark number 1, inconspicuously, the last word of a counter-sign sentence; upon land mark number 2, the next to last word and so on to the end of the trail. At the last land mark arrange to have this message as picked up on the trail, sent in its logical order by either semaphore or Morse code to the camp, where dinner is to be served. Each party that has the entire counter-sign and is able to signal it into the camp is allowed to come into camp at once and is used to strengthen the guard line around the camp. Any party which fails to collect the entire counter-sign or is unable to signal it after having gotten it is put to the bother of finding its way into camp by the expedient of running the guard line. Its arrival is not complete until all members get in.

If each patrol is given a name which includes its starting time as 9:00, 9:05, 9:10, 9:15, it is possible without very much bother to determine which patrol makes the best time on the trail and to award a prize of an extra cake to the winner. This puts a premium upon the ability to pick up the message and to signal it in, because no patrol can be counted as in camp until all of its members are within the guard line (and a guard line made up of scouts who have come in through the open door will work mighty hard to keep out the "enemy"!)

This will furnish a big experience if it done as well as outlined. It was tried four years ago in Grand Rapids, Mich. Five hundred and seventy boys went on the hike, and it was an unqualified success. Following this big thrill one or two good story tellers, who confine themselves to American historical heroes, in an afternoon camp fire, will make a big day, out of doors.

CHAPTER XVII

BOY SCOUT CAMPS

By L. L. McDonald, Director Dept. of Camping

I The Scout Executive's Relation to Camping Problems

Camping is one of the most tangible evidences of the need of council organization and is commonly used as a convincing argument at the first presentation to the community of the new council's appeal for funds. The popularity of the camping idea and its publicity value alone would lead every executive to consider carefully his own personal relation to this form of Scout activity. But the intimate and vital part which the Scout camp plays in the life and growth of actual troop work demands that the Executive, even though he be an expert camper, give much attention to the camp as a measure toward efficient Council administration.

The Choice of a Committee on Camping is important.* (See Model Constitution Scoutmasters' Handbook, Page 582.) Its plans and policies affect directly every scout troop and eventually every Scout in a more direct and impressive manner than those of any other standing committee. The combined personnel of the Camping Committee must reflect actual experience in

- Organization of leaders
- Preparing of work and play programs for boys
- The Scout Advancement Program
- Sanitation and Health Inspections
- Building plans, materials and construction
- Camp equipment,—selection, purchase and care of
- Transportation
- Provisioning; choice, purchase, storage, cooking
- Water sports and Life Saving
- Wood craft, Nature Study, Forestry Engineering
- Business management and accounting

It is not expected of course, that a specialist will be found on each but the list can be kept in mind in choosing the five or more men best suited to serve on the committee.

An influential spokesman who can present most forcefully to the council, the committee's best advice and recommendations makes a good chairman. It is often difficult to secure prompt council action on committee recommendations especially if they involve expenditure of large sums of money on a subject so little understood as camping. The spokesman for the committee should therefore be chosen with much care.

b. The Executive must cultivate in each member of the committee through interview, correspondence, literature, enthusiasm for sane Scout Camp Methods. "Hobbyists," you are sure to have, but prejudice must be offset by a general knowledge of camping, as interest is created in other important branches of the subject.

The man whose hobby is "roughing it" will profit by the information he gets from the "health and sanitation" expert. The "no paid help" enthusiast will learn by questioning scoutmasters who have reached the limit of independent leadership with their boys and must depend on professional advice, and so on through the list of "Camp must pay its own way" the "all canvas," "all cabin," "military drill," "initiations" and the "Indian Ceremonial" hobbyist each will profit by knowledge that the other man's method sometimes brings success.

c. Assignments of definite tasks to each member for study and report with recommendations is most effective in creating and holding interest. Assignments are usually made by the chairman of the committee after conference with the executive, the latter using all his professional skill to make the best of the opening thus created. Reference to the experience of local scoutmasters can often be used to advantage in working out such assignments and keeping committee-men away from merely theoretic conclusions.

2. Discover local needs. What boys go to camp at all? To what kind of camps? When? If possible note the result. Do farmers and owners of camping places complain of "tree hacking," fires, poor discipline? Are your scouts interested in becoming first class? Are Scoutmasters discouraged and attendance at troop meetings irregular? What are general health conditions among Scouts and other boys as well? Are Scouts inclined to be lax on questions of moral conduct—cigarettes, profanity, obscenity?

How can these conditions be improved by a well directed scout camp or a service of short term outings? The Executive must help the Committee to find all this out.

3. Develop a constructive plan or policy which will be approved by the local council and enlist the support of Scouts and troop officials. In order to do this the plan must be!

a. Far-sighted—taking into account the future of Scouting two, three, or five years ahead.

b. Democratic—or inclusive, providing for time, program and good fellowship, with equal appeal to boys of all ages and all conditions from which Scouts are to be recruited.

c. Specific—setting forth plainly what is to be done, the cash outlay, amount of labor and supervision required. Also as nearly as possible what results may be expected.

d. Business-like—involving good business methods, economy, accurate records, check on all expenditures and fixed responsibility for operating the camp.

4. The plan then adopted becomes the Executive's authority to proceed along definite lines to create actual camps and enroll boys. He must actually purchase camp equipment, must explain to all Scoutmasters conditions under which it is to be used and create such publicity as will appeal to parents as well as boys to be enrolled. He must secure appointment of leaders, issue their instructions, and receive from them satisfactory reports.

The Camp Committee is now only an interested on-looker, ready to be called in for consultation, but the case is legally in charge of the executive and his staff, with such volunteer help as he may be able to command.

5. The Camp Director, if employed, is assistant to the Scout Executive, and reports to the council through him and not to the Camping Committee direct. In choosing a camp director, the Executive naturally seeks the advice and approval of the Camping Committee, but his success or failure in operating the camp is chargeable to the Executive. Camp Committeemen while in attendance at the camp, are in no respect his superior officers unless designated by the Council action or by the Council Executive.

II Fundamental Principles and Characteristics of the Boy Scout Camp

1. Capable adult leadership is required in proportion of one man to every sixteen boys. These leaders if not actual scoutmasters are men considered in every way eligible to receive commissions as such, if desired.

2. Instruction is eagerly sought by all campers. Every scout works to advance his grade while in camp. Little time is given to formal class work and much to individual instruction and practice.

3. Patrol and Troop Organization function even in the largest camps as a means of developing in boys the ability to lead and direct. Team work assignments with a boy responsible for the team's activity, are used in all departments of camp endeavor.

4. Much importance is attached to the boy's ability to do things which help others. In camp, scouts participate in all manner of camp-craft duties to help each to become an all-round camper, able if need be to care for more than themselves because of campcraft training.

5. Teaching useful knowledge through games and team competitions is common to all Scouting. Games which familiarize campers with tree, plants, trail signs, the compass, signalling, etc., are used in scout camps everywhere.

6. Class distinctions are never present. The uniform and the prescribed program in which all are equally interested are helps toward this end. "Spending money" is limited to a small daily allowance to teach thrift and prevent conspicuous spending, just for show, by boys of means. There is only one grade of quarters, food, table service; camp rules apply to all including junior and adult officers.

7. Work is an honor and not a disgrace in Scout camps. No work is assigned as punishment. Even the wood detail and kitchen police are possible stepping stones to a profession and not millstones hung around the necks of unwilling workers as a badge of disgrace.

8. There is always a recognized relation between the camp and life or progress of the at home troop after camp. The camp is the means toward an end rather than an end in itself. Troop leaders, troop traditions and where practical troop equipment are used to encourage troop loyalty. Any Scout camp which does not help to make the work of the home troop more productive can hardly be called a success even, though large numbers of boys are enrolled and many examinations given for higher individual grades.

9. Nature study is given much emphasis but is usually taught through games, contests, camp work assignments, amateur museums, nature hikes, etc., instead of the ordinary text book, class room and laboratory methods.

10. Religion has its place, not conspicuous and formal, but none the less genuine. Non-sectarian so far as the camp management is concerned, but for the individual or home group, complying with the chosen faith of the boy's church home. Grace is said at meals. Place is made in the daily time schedule for morning or evening devotions by individuals. Sunday is always observed as a day of worship in which the Scout's "Duty toward God" is given expression.

11. In no other boys' camps are the fundamentals of American citizenship developed with greater care or more serious purpose. Loyalty to country and expressions of true patriotism are taught through formal respect to the flag, local historical land marks, choice of names for camp trails, introductions of National heroes in song and story at camp fires, in dramatic programs, rallies, and instruction classes.

12. Volunteer adult leadership and volunteer work by boys help greatly to reduce the expense of operating the camp, and invaluable benefit is derived from the spirit of helpfulness and good fellowship which their good example creates. Nothing is more fundamental in all Scouting than volunteer service for others. Nowhere can the spirit of such leadership be more indelibly impressed on the lives of the boys, than in camp.

III Camping Responsibility as Fixed by the National Constitution and By-Laws of The Boy Scouts of America

1. The Troop Committee "shall secure suitable opportunity for the members of the troop to spend one or more weeks in camp with adequate facilities, and supervision." (See By-Laws, Art. XI, Sec. 1, Clause 5, Paragraph 9.)

2. The Institution to which the troop charter is granted, "Such applications (for charter) shall oblige the institutions to provide adequate facilities, supervision and leadership for at least one year, and to make an effort to provide the members of the troop with an opportunity to spend a week or more in a summer camp conducted according to the prescribed standards." (Art. XI, The Troop Charter, Cl.)

3. The Local Council duties ("*** to provide adequate budget for the maintenance of the local headquarters, the conduct of a Boy Scout camp, etc." (Art. XI, Sec. 2, Cl. 1.) They shall provide means for securing and training men to serve as Scoutmasters and assistants and endeavor to provide facilities and leadership in order that boys under their jurisdiction may have an opportunity to spend one or more weeks in camp, in accordance with the prescribed standards for scout camps." (Art. XI, Sec. 2, Cl. 10, Para. 4.) Council Committee on Camping provided for in model constitution. (Article XII, Sec. 4, Scoutmasters' Handbook, Page 582.)

4. The National Council.

a. Committee on Camping consisting of seven or more members (Art. IV, Sec. 1, Cl. 5.)

****shall serve as advisors to the Executive Board in establishing and maintaining regulations for the conduct of camps of the Boy Scouts of America and shall supervise the work of the Department of Camping." (Art. IV, Sec. 2, Cl. 5.)

The Department of Camping shall be responsible for the development of plans, programs and literature for the help of chartered troops and local councils in giving boys an opportunity to receive the benefits of camp life under the most favorable conditions and in the most economical and efficient way. It shall define and maintain regulations for the conduct of camps for boy scouts and shall be specifically charged with the supervision of all boy scout camps and enforcing the minimum requirements prescribed for leadership, facilities, program, sanitary arrangements and menu.

IV Ways of Evaluating any Camp for Boys

The Scout Executive because of the prominence of his position in the community is often called upon by parents and friends of boys and by officers of other organizations to give his expert opinion on the value of Scout or non-scout camps which their boys wish to attend. The following outline is presented as a basis for analyzing any camp in terms of values which will be recognized by the four principal factors directly interested, the boy, his parents, the group or institution conducting the camp, the community at large (local and National).

A PROPOSED MEASUREMENT OF CAMP VALUES

An attempt to find a fair standard by which a camp may be tested and measured by L. L. McDonald in American Youth, June 1920

A camp is not a place but a community of people which offers advantages to the individual. The values are intrinsic (practical or market value based on cost) or sentimental, imagined.

With the growing interest in camping, hiking, and outdoor activities for boys, many new camp projects, summer schools, and systems of camping are being developed to the extent, in some sections, of bewildering the conscientious parent. The natural hesitation of parents to enroll boys in a wild woods camp, which takes a boy into unfamiliar conditions and beyond the immediate observation and care of parents, is made even greater by the experience of neighbors whose sons were sent to the wrong camp last year.

It becomes the responsibility of all leaders of organized educational, social, and welfare work for boys to advise parents wisely; and to give the subject of camping such publicity in the community as to inform even the many parents who would not come for advice until some sad experience had driven them to do so. It is with this responsibility in mind that the following material is submitted as a basis on which parents or boys' work leaders may form proper judgment of any camp for boys.

Types of Camps

The development of camping has brought about many types. In point of time they may be classified as short term over-night, week-end, summer and winter training camps, or permanent—private and school camps, in which boys enroll for a period of from eight to ten weeks. With reference to activities, camps may be anything from a mere recreative playground to a few days of an extended gypsy trip, canoe cruise, fruit harvesting expedition, or an all summer contract with the United States Government for fire patrol under the supervision of forest rangers.

Main Considerations

The main things to be considered are, first, the needs of the boy; second, whether or not the camp will supply the boy's needs adequately; third, whether the benefits offered are within the means of the boy's parents; and fourth, is the camp worth the price.

The camp can be declared a success if it achieves its main objective. Secondary benefits are not to be overlooked, but if the camp does not accomplish the main purpose for which it is operated, it cannot be listed as successful. A camp must be satisfactory from four main points of view in order to reach its real goal of efficiency in the development and training of boys.

1. From the boy's own point of view

The camp to be a success must guarantee:

a. Plenty of fun; recreation, games, contests, wit and humor, and something of general hilarity.

b. Good and plentiful eats—plain wholesome food well prepared and served in a manner to satisfy the boy's appetite. A well fed party of campers will be willing to overlook many short-comings and defects along other lines, while hungry boys' appetites will ruin the morale of the best equipped and most carefully selected camp.

c. Thrills and adventure. These must be a part of the camp or the boy is not satisfied that the camp is really genuine; mountain climbing, swimming, boat and canoe trips, life saving and watercraft exhibitions and stunts, guard duty at night, fire fighting or camp fire stunts and programs.

2. From the parent's point of view

The camp must provide:

a. Safety, proper adult supervision, good shelter, absence of unnecessary hazards and proper medical supervision, etc.

b. Opportunity for growth and physical development; proper nourishment, exercise, and sleep.

c. Educational and moral teaching which will in no way lower the ideals which the parent has carefully endeavored to establish and maintain, even though at home the boy may not have lived up to his best opportunities.

d. Social advantages. Every parent desires that his boy be associated with such boys as will be helpful companions.

e. Economy. Most generally the lower-priced camp is most popular with parents, although in many cases the value of the camp is measured by the fees charged and selection is made merely on the basis of probable high standards because of high prices. Even this conclusion is based on the idea of economy in spending more money as a supposed guaranty that the boy will secure greater value.

f. Discipline. No camp can be made to appeal even to the most indulgent parent which allows every boy to do as he pleases and which does not enforce its own rules and regulations. Safety, health, and happiness of all concerned depend on discipline and how it is secured.

From the point of view of a few "so-called" parents, the camp is a success, almost regardless of cost and every other consideration, if it provides a safe place to check a boy as light baggage for the season with reasonable assurance that the boy will be returned to them when called for without undue wear and tear.

3. From the Director's or institution's point of view

The camp should be able to:

a. Develop group loyalty, strengthen friendships and leadership of the class, club, or society.

b. Train and develop leaders in their relationship to the group after they return from camp.

c. Train campers in certain technical knowledge of woodcraft, personal health, social, educational, and religious subjects deemed important to the director or institution.

d. Better the physical condition of campers.

e. Give the spiritual growth and inspiration.

f. Provide sufficient financial return to permit the operation of the camp without exhausting the resources of those responsible for its maintenance and operation.

4. From the point of view of the community at large, both local and national, the marks of success of a camp are:

a. The development of vocational interest, which helps toward the choosing of a profession or life work.

b. Community pride as expressed in loyalty to the ideals of one's home town or institution.

c. Improvement of personal health and general physical development.

d. More strict observation of the laws of the community and improved general conduct and discipline.

e. Actual work accomplished, fruit harvesting, gardening, forestry development or protection, improvement of trails, bridges, fences, or other construction work.

f. Patriotic observances and evidence of training in the fundamentals of American citizenship.

Any true valuation of a boys' camp must be a composite of the foregoing points of view. Boys, parents, director, and general public must all have their demands met by the camp before it can be its best and accomplish, for the boys whom it serves, the largest benefit.

In grading camps for boys as Minimum Standard, High Grade, and Superior or Maximum, the minimum standard grade, below which no camp should be countenanced by a reputable leader of boys, includes sufficient merit in each of the following essentials to guarantee safety and a certain degree of improvement to the boy as a result of his stay in camp. The high grade camp is in all essentials of the camp appreciably above the minimum standard as relates to benefit to the physical, mental, social, and religious life of each individual. The superior or maximum grade has provided in every department extraordinary advantages and in addition serves to generate the spirit of unselfishness by having campers perform some task which accrues to the advantage of others than themselves and which during the camp, or immediately following, produces for the community at large some concrete and tangible return. The main essentials of the camp to be considered are:

1. Leadership and Personnel

a. What adult leadership is provided, considering education and social training, experience in camp life, knowledge of children, and fundamentals of boy training? What are the ideals as expressed in the personality and conduct of the director and his staff?

b. What boys are to attend—their ages, health, training and social advantages?

c. Visitors. Is the camp operated wholly in the interest of the boys or for the entertainment of parties of visitors?

2. Camp Site

a. Is it desirable, considering location, accessibility, sanitation, and drainage? Has the camp site natural advantages for nature study, water sports, assembly, drills, and games? Is it free from unnecessary hazards, such as dangerous cliffs, streams with swift currents, liability of flood, dangerous dead timber, open mine shafts, poisonous reptiles, poison ivy, poison oak, mosquitoes, or other insect pests?

b. Are there undesirable neighbors or other frequenters whose influence will be harmful to campers?

3. Equipment and Buildings

a. Are they adequate? Is there sufficient shelter to protect boys from severe storm or sudden change of temperature? Are sleeping quarters properly ventilated? Are dishes and cooking utensils of substantial material, such as will permit sanitary preparation and serving of food?

b. Is the camp site over-improved to the extent of destroying the pioneering wild-woods atmosphere of the camp?

c. Is equipment so arranged that boys can participate intelligently in the operation of the camp, especially in the kitchen, dining room, and sleeping quarters? Are implements provided for camp making, such as rakes, shovels, and axes?

d. Does the equipment include such safety devices as life preservers, boats, fire extinguishers, signal devices, telephone, telegraph, or other means of rapid communication to be used in case of accident?

4. Program

Are the following included in the program:

a. Recognition of the religious life of boys in some form of religious service or observance.

b. Formal physical and disciplinary drill, calisthenics, marching, gymnastics, aquatics.

c. Definite instruction in campcraft designed to teach boys the ways of the woods and develop resourcefulness and self-reliance.

d. Assignment of daily routine work which will develop in each camper some sense of responsibility for the welfare of the camp.

e. Recreation and games, preferably those which have some educational value, but by all means appealing to boys as being full of enjoyment. Water sports should be a definite part of the program where possible, but some camps, especially winter camps, mountain, and industrial camps, can be made very successful without this feature.

f. Patriotic observance in some form of flag ceremony and recognition of such patriotic holidays as come during the season.

g. Regular time for meals, for rising and retiring, with sufficient allowance for rest and sleep.

h. Inspection—personal, tent, and grounds.

i. A regular wash day.

j. Regularly arranged camp fire and stunt programs.

k. Regular time for letter writing, reading, and formal studies.

5. Health and Sanitation

a. Are camps protected against contagion? Are conditions such as definitely to improve health?

b. Does the routine of the camp develop habits which will tend toward continued practice of the laws of personal health?

c. Is the supply of drinking water ample and free from contamination? Has it been analyzed by a credited bacteriologist? Is the water in which boys swim pure? What is its source? Do others than campers bathe in it?

d. Garbage disposal. Is garbage properly incinerated or disposed of by removal in a sanitary way which prevents spoilage and attracting of flies?

e. Are kitchen and dining room properly protected or free from flies and other insects? Is the camp free from mosquitoes? What precautions are taken to avoid them?

f. Are there proper latrine facilities and rules regarding use and care of same?

6. Food Supply

a. Is the selection and variety of food suitable for growing boys?

b. Are professional cooks employed, and if not, are those responsible for cooking competent? Do boys have a chance to learn anything about the preparation and selection of food?

c. Is proper arrangement made for cooking and serving of food? Are foods handled and kept in a sanitary manner while waiting to be prepared for the table?

7. Business Management

a. Is the camp financially sound and able to make good the advantages advertised for campers?

b. What is the camp reputation regarding prompt payment of bills?

c. Are business arrangements required of applicants equitable and fair to the boys who enroll?

d. Are the business dealings of the camp with the boy businesslike and such as will teach him good business methods?

e. Are boys required to keep within their allowance and practice proper economy?

f. Is the camp worth to the boy the amount charged by the camp organization in fees?

g. Does the camp management guarantee any refund on fees paid in advance? If not, why not?

THE IRREDUCIBLE MINIMUM*A yard stick of safety for new leaders

by L. L. McDonald, National Camp Director

The following condensed statement of Minimum Standard Requirements for Boy Scout camps is presented by the Department of Camping with the belief that few Scoutmasters will be contented to remain in the Minimum Standard class. It is not an ideal. It is confessedly negative in that respect—but it has this valuable use: The National Council, as chartered by Congress, has accepted the responsibility of establishing and maintaining such standards as will guarantee all boys the necessary safeguards and facilities to make all camps effective in developing a sense of responsibility, resourcefulness and loyalty to the principles set forth in the Scout Oath and Law.

Under these rules no Boy Scout leader may assume the responsibility for taking boys into camp without having on record with the local troop committee or Council authorities a full and complete statement of the plans and purposes of the camp, which in the event of accident, unfriendly criticism or interference will stand as evidence in court, if need be, in defense of his motives and forethought in behalf of the welfare of boys entrusted to his care.

1. Leadership:

- a. A competent adult leader (registered on troop application blank) in charge with full power to enforce discipline.
- b. Additional adult leadership in proportion of at least one man to every 16 boys in camp.
- c. Boys with sufficient strength and knowledge of Scouting to serve as patrol leaders, and for all positions of leadership and responsibility as far as they are able to bear it.
- d. A system of organization and discipline which will insure safety, efficiency, and economy, with emphasis on self-discipline.

2. Camp Site:

- a. A place so situated so as to give proper privacy, sense of independence, and freedom from outside influences.
- b. So located as to make the cost of transportation not above 20% of the total cost to each camper.
- c. Plants, trees, and animal life serviceable for Scouting instruction and practice.
- d. Water supply ample and not contaminated, and natural camp drainage.
- e. Absence of unusual and unnecessary hazards—dangerous whirl-pools, swift streams, open mine shafts, cliffs, reptiles, cattle, poison ivy, flies, mosquitoes, and high water.

3. Equipment:

- a. Tentage or housing, for sleeping quarters, allowing for each person not less than 18 square feet of floor space and free circulation of fresh air at all times—from outdoors.
- b. A place outside of sleeping tents for preparing and serving meals.

c. See Catalog Scouting for equipment for a Scout Summer Camp. Special lists of equipment for Red River or Pioneer Cart, Back Pack, Horse Pack, Canoe, Sea Scout, Auto or Bicycle trips, will be furnished on request.

d. First aid and Life Saving Equipment.

4. Program: (A daily routine program including the following):

a. Regular time for early rising, meals, and retiring.

b. Time for swimming and water sports.

c. Scoutcraft instruction.

d. Health and sanitary inspection.

e. Calisthenics, and pasture drills, and games.

f. Patriotic and religious ceremonies.

g. Free time.

h. General routine (work).

i. Camp fires and fun.

5. Health and Sanitation:

a. A certificate of health showing condition of heart and lungs, and statement as to general health must be presented by each camper.

b. Individual health inspection at least once each week by a regular licensed physician to detect any symptoms of communicable disease.

c. Grounds must be carefully drained.

d. Every reasonable precaution must be taken to prevent and exclude flies and mosquitoes.

e. A sanitary latrine which is fly proof in so far as possible contact of flies with excretia is concerned. The seating capacity should be not less than one unit for each sixteen boys in camp.

f. All garbage and slops must be disposed of by incineration, or removal from camp. Cans for collecting garbage must be fly tight, and must be kept covered with fly tight lids, and sterilized with boiling water or treated chemically daily.

g. Particular care must be given to clean and sanitary condition of kitchen, store room, dining room, tables and dishes.

h. Cleanliness of person and clothing must be taught and practised.

6. Food Supply and Commissary:

a. Ample supply of plain wholesome food, not less than 3000 calories daily per boy.

b. Cooking, which makes food wholesome and appetizing and at the same time not extravagant or wasteful.

c. A system of serving which guarantees equal and economical portions to each.

7. Business and Records:

a. Parents' written consent is required.

b. A careful and impartial record of all receipts and expenditures, food received and served, the number served at each meal, the amount and description of equipment and to whom issued.

c. A record shall also be kept showing general activities and progress in camping and scout advancement.

d. A copy of these records and reports will be submitted to the troop committee and a copy sent to National Headquarters.

e. Roll call as definite check-up—twice daily.

Desirable but Not Required Objectives

Here are points of worth in the making of scout camps. These are not requirements; they are ideals. They are factors in good camp work by which you can determine whether your camp has gone on to a self realized "second class rating" or far on, to a consciousness of "first class" work.

1. Leadership, organization and enrollment:

a. The camp in charge of a camp director, who has been a commissioned officer of the Boy Scouts of America for at least one year, with at least two months' experience as Director of a boys' camp, to be assisted by adult officials in proportion of not less than one adult to sixteen boys. The organized camp staff of junior officers accepting definite responsibility as head or associate directors of five main departments of camp—(Quartermaster, Commissary, Recreation, Court of Honor, Health and Sanitation).

b. Camp enrollment consisting of not less than 80% of Scout membership in troops or council jurisdiction represented in camp, 75% of those actually enrolled in camp to be accompanied by Scoutmaster or other adult official connected with local troop from which boys come.

c. A life guard with an expert swimmer over twenty-one as instructor or organized to comply with the requirements of the Sea Scout Manual and achieve at least the degree of Schooner Class before the close of the camp.

2. Camp site and improvements:

a. Scout organization to own permanent camp site or to execute a formal lease for a period of not less than from three to five years to insure permanence and justify permanent improvements.

b. Improvements to camp site added during the current year will involve one or more hours of labor per day for each Scout in camp, or an investment from fees paid by boys of money which they have earned amounting to not less than $2.00 per boy.

c. The Camp site to be used for a period of at least five days when Scouts are not in camp for other campers under the direction of Scout leadership, who would otherwise not have the opportunity of camping out, enrollment in such a camp to be at least 50% of the capacity for daily enrollment of Scouts.

d. Clear and mark a trail to some point of interest, build a rustic bridge of native material, at least twenty feet in length after a design approved by practical builder, or improve a trail or roadway as directed by property owner or local road commissioner, this work to be done beyond the limit of the camp, and for the principal benefit of others than Scouts in camp, and require an aggregate of not less than one hundred hours of actual labor to be done by Scouts without remuneration.

3. Equipment and buildings:

a. Have at least one permanent building with floor space of not less than 10 x 24 feet built by Scouts according to a plan approved by a recognized architect or civil engineer, 90% of actual work done by Scout labor without pay.

b. Permanent tentage and movable camp equipment owned by Scout organization to the amount of $5.00 or more per boy purchased from funds provided by boys themselves by other than public subscriptions.

c. Make while in camp, tents, teepees, or other portable shelter to be used on hikes and short term camps to provide suitable shelter for twenty or more boys.

d. Construct a life raft or float and equip same with life preservers, the floats to have a capacity of twenty or more boys at one time.

e. Each patrol in camp to be provided with one or more first aid kits, including material both for practice and for emergency in first aid work.

f. Fire fighting tools and equipment for use in forest fire burning building, etc., to be used during the camp for actual camp emergency or outside of the camp limits for the benefit of others not connected with the camp. In preparation for work regular fire drill at least twice a week to be practised by an organized group in camp.

4. Program of activities and Scoutcraft advancement:

a. The daily program to include at least two hours of formal instruction, which prepares boys for advancing their grades in Scouting or passing merit badge examination, formal provision made to allow boys to complete their examinations for first class or for merit badges while in camp.

b. One or more hours daily to be given to the practice of campcraft methods which design to make all Scouts in camp proficient in camp sanitation, tent pitching, camp cooking, use of knife and axe, fire building, etc.

c. In addition to the daily routine of camp, prepare all campers to participate in the dramatization of some feature of local history to be given for the benefit of those living in a neighboring village or the home community of Scout campers, no admission being charged except as entire receipts for admission charged are to be given for some philanthropic or charitable enterprise.

5. Health and sanitation with the boys:

a. A complete record of the weight, physical measurements, and general health of all boys and adult campers at the time of arrival in camp, two weeks later, and at time of leaving camp.

b. Have resident in camp, for the entire period, a camp physician, who will give daily instruction in bandaging, first aid, health, and sanitation, and who will make daily sanitary inspection of quarters and food supplies, and who will give a written report of same to the Camp Director.

c. Freedom from mosquitoes, flies, and other insect pests where such work can be accomplished by care or activity of Scouts in camp.

d. Distribute in the vicinity of the camp to farmers or residents of some village printed circulars on health, sanitation, and first aid, and give a demonstration attended by twenty or more neighbors living in the vicinity.

6. Food and commissary:

a. Estimate in advance of camp within 5% of amount of food required for the entire camp season. Limit the quantity of candies, and other luxuries to not exceed 10c. per day.

b. Produce either at home or on a plot of ground near the camp $10.00 worth of food used by the camp commissary, all work of production and harvesting to be done by Scouts.

c. Keep a complete daily record of amount of food issued to cooks, the number of meals served, the quantity of food left off in serving, and the actual cost per day, with suggestion for improvement based on each day's experience.

d. Prepare while in camp for use in the camp commissary a whole sheep or pig as a means of instructing boys in methods of preparing meat, selection of different cuts, etc., keeping record of the weight of the animal before and after dressing, the cost of the animal on foot, and the cost of the dressed meat at local market prices. At least one meal per day or all meals for two full days to be prepared for the whole camp by an organized group.

7 Business management:

a. Present a financial report showing record of all business transactions including forms of contract with the employees, owners of property purchased, from whom equipment is rented, form of application and receipt issued to campers, vouchers used in payment of bills and other blank forms or reports, as evidence of good business management.

b. Make up all records, forms, and financial statements for troop committee, parent institution (church or school where troop has its headquarters) and send copy to Department of Camping for record and comparison.

CHAPTER XVIII

THE SCOUT EXECUTIVE AND SEASCOUTING

by James A. Wilder—Chief Sea Scout

A. The Objective. TO EXTEND THE SCOUT MOVEMENT.

1. The executive or squadron pilot is in exact relation to seascouts as he is to shore scouts, for Seascouting is an integral part of Scouting.

Pilots are expected therefore to urge the naming of "ships" (registering of seascouts) as a means of extending the Scout Movement in the United States among boys and men.

The Course. HOW FOLLOWED.

By an appeal for adult leadership in the tried and true course to good citizenship—Scouting—of which Seascouting is the official graduate course. The appeals for both men and boys are several:

(a) An appeal to the watercraft instinct. Undoubtedly woodcraft is the best bait in the scout program—but there are rivers to cross, lakes to navigate, and watermanship, seacraft, boatmanship, seamanhood,—are acquired on water and in the big outdoors holding the same charm for a certain type of man and boy as woods and campcraft have ever held for their devotees, the "woodsies."

(b) The appeal through new and more dangerous experiences in boats—under oars and under sail. The seaman is a woodsman fully prepared. To be prepared on sea as well as land as a part of a man's education, this calls men of the seagoing blood.

(c) The appeal of a new series of handicrafts and of special knowledge acquired only by actual practice with small boats, and then after many trials, practical application of the old adage "Through failure to success"—

"To take arms against a sea of troubles, and by opposing, end them."

(d) The appeal of a new and quite original program of a progressive "ship" or group promotion, including a novel assignment of duties, new badges, new flags and a fresh start all round for boys over fifteen. Our scout statistics show that not over three or four years of land scouting are had by the average scout and any program that attracts or holds on to the interest of the older boy is now greatly needed and Seascouting may claim to have these by actual experiences in the field. The only plea is that it works!

(e) All the old appeals that Scouting has developed—spirit of service, adventure, love of country, character development are to be found in Seascouting, adding a larger measure of fraternity and social amenities. The older boy wants these.

B. National Need

(a) The country wants seascouts because they are brought into sympathy with the life of the sailorman. Our greatest national urge today, is towards the sea. We can find peace and plenty by way of ships and trade in far oceans, and we must teach love of the sea among boys, to bring this about. Moreover, in Seascouting we have time to teach with seamanship a noble code, the Scout Oath and Law—and can actually measure growth in physical fitness, mental alertness and best of all, morale—for any man or boy who succeeds in Seascouting has fought a good fight and is well on his way to a splendid manhood. He will be, if a true seascout in the SHIP class, a man well started.

So this is the executive's first duty—to know what Seascouting stands for, what it offers, and to believe in it. His next is to push it, for all he is worth.

THE LOCAL COUNCIL AND SEASCOUTING

All in the Same Boat

Since Seascouting is but a part of Scouting the local council has the same functions toward it as it has for shore Scouting.

The local council is the power behind our sea program and they must be quite sold to it, its place in Scouting and its successful functioning in their areas.

The added danger of navigation in small boats and the consequently more exacting requirements make enlightened supervision a prime factor for the lasting success of Seascouting in any area. Neglect and ignorance of the program will surely hold it back. Sympathy and study of it should make it work and extend it.

The Seascout Shipping Board

The committee given the work of looking after the seascout program is called the shipping board. It functions precisely as would a committee on Camping or Training. It is an integral part of the local council and follows the Constitution. When this is understood, everything is simple and easy.

The Chairman

The chairman of this committee is often a man of sea-experience, a retired shipmaster, say, with a broad view of seamanship in general. The executive officer, the portmaster, is a deputy commissioner or assistant executive. It may happen that neither has any great amount of sea-experience, in which case they must get advice from any source available. As the shipping board and portmaster's co-operation with the local council are necessary for good Seascouting, they should be allowed all seamanship decisions—and within our plan, all kinds of leeway.

Plans for training schools for "skippers" or seascout "bases" for annual training of seascouts, and so on, are carried out by the shipping board.

This board sees that every available boy in their area knows what Seascouting offers. With the seascout program they approach parents, shipping firms, institutions, yacht clubs, churches, schools endeavoring to make the plan serviceable to big boyhood.

They present the plan to old scoutmasters who need a fresh start and try to interest new blood. They come to know, in their areas, such good men as can be asked into "ship's" meetings as sea tutors, until such time as our officers know enough to work "on their own."

They must also plan for meeting rooms, wharfage, boatyards and cover; equipment; squadron activities, such as one "flotilla" drill a year—for the fun of it—They must look about for a "ship" museum too—a place where seascouts can find, see and examine rope work, models, charts, "ship" furniture of all sorts—pictures and most important—an 1½ inch to the foot model of the seascout drill mast, made by some seascout "ship" for the benefit of all. "Nautical walks" along the wharves—visits to shipyards, navy yards, yacht building yards have been very successful in stirring up the sea ardor of boys of seascout age.

The local council could further develop contacts with shipping firms so as to encourage qualified seascouts of the upper grades to spend vacations on coasters as a finishing school.

Seascout appropriations have usually been 20% of the main budget.

Portmasters when receiving a salary are assistant executives, when volunteers, deputy commissioners.

(See the Seascout Manual for details p. 18).

Seascout Problems. Portmasters and skippers.

These have been so far mostly problems of leadership; where to find the right sort of portmaster, and how much to expect of him. The portmaster, in turn, is hard put to it to find suitable skippers. In this work the whole community must lend a hand. Honest public opinion, appreciation, backing, is all that is needed to procure these leaders.

Problems have arisen as to the proper boat for a locality and the "style" of seamanship (river pilotage, open sea work, lake, shore, etc.). They may be settled locally, though the National Office will gladly advise.

Some local councils have been tempted to soften our regulations, to make it easier for the boy to take to water. They do this at their own risk. Other councils have made safety first regulations even more drastic than ours. For instance "that all seascouts shall pass an 85% quiz and written exam, besides a practical demonstration showing 99% efficiency in boat handling (according to grade) before promotion" is more stringent than the National Council's sailing rules.

There are problems of maritime law and custom, which are settled in the usual manner, i. e., by asking in someone who knows. Wharfage laws, and costs, harbor dues, towing contracts, housing agreements must be fairly understood by the local seascout shipping board. A loosely worded towage contract made by the over trustful C. S. cost the seascout cruise "Curlew" $300.00! So look out!

"Ship" rooms are a distinct trouble for shipping boards. Room enough, cheap enough, near enough—No place is really quite shipshape without its carpenter's bench, sail locker, bosn's locker, storeroom, main deck, flag hoists and galley. A "ship's" library and pictures of the sea heroes is bound to build deck-morale. We are trying for this, remember.

Boats

The Bureau of Construction and Repair, under General Order No. 18, Feb. 27, 1913, will loan condemned boats to the use of bona fide B. S. A.

"SCHOONERS" or second-year men ("SLOOPS" do not rate a boat) provided the request is signed by the Chief Seascout. Freight is at the expense of the local B. S. A. "ship." The boat equipment consists of two painters, two boat hooks, set of oars, oarlocks, and tillers, and one coat of paint, usually grey. On delivery these boats are painted "blue and tan" or khaki with blue trimmings. This identifies a seascout flotilla.

Fine Points of the Seascout Plan

The community represented by the local council and executive, the seascout shipping board, chairman and portmaster are the foundations on which rests this program.

Seascout shipping boards (a committee of the local council) work out a sea policy and the portmaster carries on—executes these policies.

The portmaster should often, in a large area, institute a skippers' school, for skippers and mates. This is organized according to local requirements, and would follow the usual method of learning by doing. It is suggested that the school be organized as a B. S. A. "ship" of the Sloop class, and push up a grade every three meetings. This superficial training can be fortified (intensified) by extra work on the part of the skipper in the subjects most needed by him. Seamanship is common sense mostly,—simple, when you know it—and baffling, even terrifying, when you don't.

In Seascouting the patrol system is intensified, and in the billet system immensely emphasized.

Should a boat be cut off from the shore (in fancy, or in fact) the crew is organized not only to propel and manage her, as a pulling and sailing team, but they are fully organized to meet the human needs of the group. In this boat each man plies his own particular hobby, plays his part, for the benefit of the boat's crew, and so, for the "ship's" company. (Many units make a people, many peoples the world.) This recalls the rhyme "The butcher, the baker, the candlestickmaker." Every needful profession is found in a boat—four are found in each full "ship of the line." Each boy is leader in his department, the coxswain is a director over all departments, the skipper is the chief executive, working out the program under general directions of the shipping board and portmaster. And so on up to the Executive Board and the National Council.

This arrangement has proved most acceptable to men and boys alike both in 1919 and 1920. Once the billet system is adopted and worked (it never appeals full strength until tried in the balance of actual practice) it is never, has never been abandoned.

The young leader begins to lead—and each man in the boat begins to lead his department—at the first meeting of the "ship." The motto is "This is up to me," and does away with bossing. The full "ships" have four of a kind and these artisans learn to work for the "ship," first, as regular sailormen, secondly, as billet men—not from without, by driving, but from within, for the fun and love of it. This is no longer experimental. It works!

Expenses at first are no more than for a scout troop. At the "schooner" $50 per year, at the "Bark" $100— at the "Ship" $200 would cover outside expenditures.

The finest point of all with the boy is in exercising strict justice tempered by mercy. The seascout must make good or drop it. Seascouting is man's work, like real life, and as such must be played earnestly and according to the rules of the game, if its fine values of manly habits are acquired.

PIONEERS

CHAPTER XIX

THE PIONEER DIVISION

For Boys in Sparsely Settled Districts

by W. A. Perry, Formerly Chief Pioneer Scout

Within the boundaries of many local councils—especially county councils—live boys who cannot join troops. Usually the reason is the scarcity of boys of scout age in the neighborhood. Such boys may become Scouts by joining the Pioneer Division.

The Pioneer Scout is not related to any troop. As a candidate he prepares for his tenderfoot tests by using the Pioneer Information Bulletin. When ready to take the tests he secures a Local Examiner. Preferably this examiner is a man—a school principal, teacher or superintendent; a pastor; or the leader of an Agricultural Boys' Club. But many women are serving acceptably. Among these are school teachers, Sabbath school teachers, and rural welfare workers.

Sometimes a candidate presents evidence that he lives on an isolated farm or ranch and cannot secure an adult examiner outside his own family. In such a case a parent or some other relative may be accepted as an examiner temporarily, in order that the boy may become a Scout, but reports of tests are scrutinized closely and the scout is urged to secure at the earliest possible moment an examiner who is not a relative.

As isolated boys frequently lack opportunities for earning money, the Pioneer Scouts are supplied with "Scout Helps" free of charge to encourage progress. The leaflet on the second class tests goes forward as soon as the scout registers. When the local examiner certifies that the scout has passed his second class tests, a copy of the leaflet on the first class tests is sent with the letter of acknowledgment.

The work of the Pioneer Scouts is supervised by the National Council through correspondence. But a Pioneer Scout under a local council should have assistance from its officials. Each local council which has sparsely settled districts under its jurisdiction should appoint an assistant executive or a deputy commissioner to deal with the problem.

This official should be a man who is already in touch with the isolated districts. The local council will be fortunate if it can secure for this work a county leader of the Boys' Club organized through the cooperation of national and state departments of agriculture and the agricultural colleges. County Agricultural Agents are good leadership material also, though their work with adult farmers sometimes prevents their interesting themselves in the boy problem.

The securing of a real rural leader to supervise the Pioneer Scouts accomplishes two purposes:

1. It gives the boys a leader who understands their needs and inspires their confidence and
2. It establishes a relationship between the scout organizations and the rural organizations which enables them to cooperate effectively.

The Red Cross, Anti-Tuberculosis Society, County Y. M. C. A. and other rural welfare agencies have workers who gladly cooperate with the scout organization.

Work with isolated boys has a significance much broader than generally is recognized. The numbers reached are always small in proportion to the expense and effort involved, therefore this field receives little attention. At the 1920 conference of the American Country Life Association the fact was brought out that no comprehensive study of our isolated inhabitants ever has been made and that rural organization seldom if ever extends beyond the rural centers of population and the territory near them.

The neglect to make the farm boy's life more interesting has resulted in an apparently irresistible flow to the city. The present Agricultural situation is far more serious than the city dweller realizes, in spite of his protests against the high prices of farm products. The percentage of farmers in our country has dropped from over 60 to less than 30 in the last few decades and the rate of flow to the city is higher now than ever before. Experts predict famine conditions within ten years unless some force now unknown operates to keep the farmers on the farms.

In spite of these conditions, governmental and welfare budgets for work among rural people are the last to be expanded and the first to be cut. Apparently leaders are more interested in financing work for boys in congested districts, suffering from under-nourishment and lack of fresh air, than in promoting work for farm boys which will prevent over-crowding and its results.

Pioneer Scouts can be given one piece of service to perform which is interesting and well adapted to their conditions. This is the securing and distribution of weather reports and other information sent out by U. S. Navy wireless stations. Boy Scout and other amateur stations receive this information daily. Local councils are expected to maintain receiving stations of their own, or connection with other stations, in order to serve their territory. The Pioneer Scout should be urged to secure the news by telephone or mail and post it at creameries and other places which farmers visit daily. The value of this service hardly can be appreciated by the city man who receives his daily paper before breakfast. To the rural dweller the fact of wireless communication with the outside world means an immediate raising of standards and a loss of the feeling of isolation.

Pioneer Scouts should be invited to attend camps, rallies and other gatherings. They might reciprocate by inviting troops to hike to the farm to fish or gather apples or nuts. The fact that city scouts were interested in visiting his farm would give it a new value in the mind of the Pioneer Scout. Whenever opportunity offers Pioneer Scouts should be invited to display at city exhibitions the results of their scout work and the project work which they do as members of the Farm Boys' Clubs. Such project work, so far as it applies, should be credited toward scout tests.

At state and county fairs local councils should have exhibitions and literature for interesting rural boys and rural leaders in Scouting.

A State Director of Farm Boys' Clubs suggested that rural organizations be invited to elect boys to become Pioneer Scouts, secure the U. S. Navy and Boy Scout wireless service for their districts, and render such other scout service as might be needed.

Pioneer Scouts should be the forerunners of troops in territory where troop organization is possible. Many troops have been saved through the registration of a few of the best members as Pioneer Scouts during periods of troop inactivity. Always, in local council territory and elsewhere, the question of Associate Membership in a troop should be considered in connection with each Pioneer application. In most cases if it is possible for him to attend a meeting once a month or oftener.

Some confusion has been caused by the publication of a "Handbook for Pioneers" by the Y. M. C. A. This book contains "A Program of Christian Citizenship Training for Boys Twelve to Fourteen Years of Age," which includes some Scouting activities. The term "Pioneers" was not used by the Y. M. C. A. in connection with a section of its membership until about two years after the organization of the Pioneer Division of the Boy Scouts of America. There is no organic connection between the two, but cordial co-operation should be established.

Local Councils, whether they have Pioneer Division material in their territory or not, can help farm boys by cultivating local, state and national leaders of agricultural movements. Such a leader, if invited to serve on a local council, soon will want to extend the benefits of Scouting to rural boys.

CHAPTER XX

THE VETERAN SCOUT ASSOCIATION

by F. Executive C. A. Edson,
Hyde Park-Woodlawn Dist.—Chicago

As scouting is primarily a matter of character development and as character development, being a matter of habit formation, requires time, time is an essential element in the full fruition of the scout training. In other words no matter how many tests a boy may pass, he has not had an opportunity to get the full benefit of scouting unless he has been in it for a long time—a period of several years. On the other hand, no boy has been in scouting for a considerable period can be considered as getting the real benefits of scout training unless he has shown sufficient interest in the scout program to make consistent progress through the various ranks. Every fully trained scout should therefore be at least First Class.

When a scout has had this all around training, being thoroughly grounded in the scout work, and well developed, through long continued service in the scout movement, it is but fitting that some suitable recognition of that fact be made. This is provided for through the establishment of the VETERAN SCOUT ASSOCIATION.

There are three conditions of membership in this Association.

- (1) That the scout be at least a First Class Scout.
- (2) That he have had a total of at least five years service (not necessarily continuous).
- (3) That he agrees:
  - (a) To live up to his scout obligation,

(b) To keep local scout authorities in the community in which he lives informed as to his availability for service to the community in case of emergency, and

(c) To take an active part in the promotion of the cause of Scouting as the circumstances and conditions in his case permit.

Just as scouts organized into troops can do more effective work than as isolated individuals, so Veteran Scouts, when organized consciously into a Veteran Scout Association can do effective work.

In some cities the members of the Veteran Scout Association have been organized into "troops," either tentative or official, and based upon the third requirement for membership in the Association, have been given advanced instruction and leadership training, and have then been used as instructors, etc., in their own and other troops.

A very effective organization of Veteran Scouts, however, is that in Philadelphia which is described elsewhere.

Registration as a Veteran Scout, at a cost of $1.00 entails life membership in the Veteran Scout Association and entitles one to a Veteran Scout pin free. It also, of course, entitles one to wear the embroidered Veteran Scout badge on his uniform.

The Veteran Scout Association not only organizes the older boy, but it is also a means of extending to those scout officials of a total of five years' service a well merited recognition of their long and faithful service to boyhood. This is a bit of recognition which most men would highly prize. It would be well for all Scout Executives to keep a record of the length of service of all their local council members and other scout officials, and say once a year, see to it that all who were eligible became members of the Veteran Scout Association.

This registration of scout officials jointly with the older boys as members of the same association gives an opportunity for very helpful contact between these boys and those men whose experience is richest in scouting, and thus serves to make the influence of scouting upon these boys most effective.

One good measure of the effectiveness of a troop or local council is its ability to retain scouts and officials from year to year. A low turnover indicates high efficiency. Registration in the Veteran Scout Association of all those eligible visualizes low turnover.

Indications are that approximately 10% of the total scout registration—counting local council members, troop committee members and other scout officials, as well as scouts—are eligible for membership in the Veteran Scout Association and thus have served for at least five years. This would give approximately 50,000 of the present membership of scouting as being eligible. If an approximation of that number were actually registered as members of the Veteran Scout Association it would be a splendid thing for the movement.

The registration of members in this Association, and the activities of the Association offer splendid opportunities for very helpful publicity.

Not only should the public, through proper publicity be made aware of the fact that thousands of men and of boys each year take up volunteer service in scouting, and find it sufficiently worth while to continue so to serve year after year, but the scout organization itself should be made aware of this fact. It will serve to encourage the new scoutmaster to see that these others have won out despite all difficulties and discouragements, and it will raise the morale of the entire organization.

Again a large Veteran Scout registration, and organized Veteran Scout activities, gives to the Association a prestige with the younger scouts which makes it a real incentive to stay in scouting in order to become eligible to join.

To sum up, the registering as members of the Veteran Scout Association of all those eligible.

- (a) Gives deserved recognition to man and boy.
- (b) Helps to solve the older boy problem and thus to reduce scout turnover.
- (c) Otherwise strengthens the effectiveness of the organization.
- (d) Increases the prestige of Scouting in the community.

It is therefore both the privilege and the duty of every scout official to—REGISTER THE VETERAN.

The possibilities of scouting are far from exhausted when a boy or man has been in the movement for five years. "ONCE A SCOUT ALWAYS A SCOUT" is more than a slogan. As scouting enters its second decade there comes a rapidly growing body of men who have been in the movement for full ten years, either as officials, or first as scouts and then as officials. These are the pioneers, the men who builded scouting, doubly Veteran Scouts. All honor to them. No man should be permitted to have served these ten years without being suitably recognized through his registration as a ten year Veteran. All who so register are presented with the new ten year service pin.

Ten year registration, and the ten year service pin cost but $2.00. All men so registering who are not already members of the Veteran Scout Association are enrolled in it without additional expense. However, if the Veteran Scout (five year service) pin and certificate are desired, they must be purchased separately (cost $1.00).

To answer any questions which may arise regarding eligibility for ten year registration a statement of policy in question and answer form is given below. The same principles apply for eligibility to membership in the Veteran Scout Association after five years' service.

POLICIES REGARDING CREDIT FOR TEN YEAR SERVICE

(1) Q. What constitutes service to be credited for the ten year service registration?

A. Formal registration at the National Council Office of the Boy Scouts of America, in the case of scout officials; formal registration at the National Council Office, in the case of scouts, for all service since October 1st, 1913, or membership in a troop whose scoutmaster was so registered for service prior to that date.

(2) Q. What governs in determining registration?

A. The records of the National Council Office.

(3) Q. Is there any exception?

A. No, but if preliminary search of the records as the National Council Office does not verify the record claimed, evidence may be submitted to prove that the records in question formerly existed but are now mislaid. All such cases will be handled on the merits of the evidence submitted.

(4) Q. Is there any exception to the requirement of actual registration as stated in question 1 above?

A. Only when such failure to register is clearly due to no failure on the part of the man concerned but to the fault of a superior official or office.

(5) Q. Are troop committee members and local council members eligible?

A. Yes, as they are officially registered members of the Boy Scouts of America.

(6) Q. Does service as a troop instructor, camp leader, or expert examiner count for the ten year service?

A. No, not unless the man was commissioned in some official capacity with the Boy Scouts of America, e. g., as an Assistant Scoutmaster, Field Executive, etc.

(7) Q. Does service in an independent troop organized prior to the establishment of the office of the Boy Scouts of America and using the British Scout Manual count for ten year credit.

A. Yes, provided the troop affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America.

(8) Q. Does service in other scout organizations than the Boy Scouts of America prior to the affiliation of such organizations with the Boy Scouts of America count towards ten year credit?

A. Only in case the organization as a whole affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America.

(9) Q. What is the earliest date from which it is possible for ten year credit to start?

A. Feb. 8th, 1910, the date of incorporation of the Boy Scouts of America.

(10) Q. Does the ten years of service need to have been continuous?

A. No, there must have been a total of ten years' service, but it may have been discontinuous.

(11) Q. Does service during the war in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps count for ten year credit?

A. Yes, any one who was a scout or scout official prior to the war or prior to joining the Army, Navy or Marine Corps may receive credit for all service in any of the above in the period April 1917 to September 1919 inclusive, and if he re-entered the Boy Scouts of America within three months following his discharge, for the intervening period of readjustment. This credit applies only in case the scout or official re-entered scouting after the war.

(12) Q. Does service in the Army Y. M. C. A., K. of C., or similar war service organization count for ten year credit?

A. Yes, service in any of the recognized war service organizations counts in exactly the same way as service in the Army.

(13) Q. Is it necessary for a ten year service man to re-register annually if he retains active connection with the movement?

A. Yes, in the regular manner for the position he holds, but not in order to retain his ten years registration, which holds for life.

CHAPTER XXI

THE OLDER BOY

Where Are They?

The theory of the physical, mental, and social problems of older boys is discussed in the Scoutmaster's Handbook and will not be repeated here.

Where are the Older Boys? Are they still with us—or have they gone? A study of the present age distribution of Scouts gives pertinent and unmistakable testimony.

PERCENTAGES OF SCOUTS OF EACH AGE
(Compiled from 100 Councils, Oct. 1920)

The falling off comes rapidly after 14. If the scout movement held perfectly there would be no loss and if recruiting were regular and uniform there would be  $12\frac{1}{2}\%$  of the Scouts in each year above. Instead of that we have fewer older boys and a "piling up" at the younger ages. Not only have older boys been permitted to drop out of Scouting in large numbers, but an analysis of the data given in the Tenth Annual Report indicates that the present membership has made but modest progress through the Scouting grades.

CITIES IN CLASS	Percentage of Boys in			Number of Scouts for each
	Tenderfoot	Second Class	First Class	Merit Badge Scout
A	58.7%	22.2%	5.9%	21.3
B	62.0%	24.8%	10.6%	16.7
C	69.3%	21.3%	6.6%	14.3
D	66.7%	30.3%	9.8%	16.8
E	70.0%	27.2%	9.0%	13.8
F	69.0%	27.2%	18.9%	18.3
Average	67.9%	25.5%	8.4%	13.8

In other words  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the scouts are Tenderfoot and only 8.4% have gotten beyond second class.

The merit badge program with all of its rich interest appeal and potential vocational significance is reached by only one scout in 14.

While these figures are very significant, there are certain very vital factors which they do not reveal:

- 1—Why did the scout drop out?
- 2—How old was he then?
- 3—What was his Scouting rank?
- 4—How long had he been a scout?

Where such careful facts have been collected and made known, the fact has stood out sharply that the tenderfoot is the critical age. In certain of these studies 80% of the scouts dropping out have been only of Tenderfoot rank. Indeed such scouts have only been exposed to a part of the full scout program of activities, having merely taken its initial step.

Men active in Scouting are agreed that the rule is to find that the Oath and Law and the spirit of service have borne fruitage in habits in proportion to the time during which the boy has been an active scout. This points clearly to the conclusion that progress is a vital factor as well as age.

The gross facts of loss indicated above give no direct testimony as to the effectiveness of the leadership which the boys received. This factor is also probably more significant than the age of the scout.

These facts lend support to the words of Executive A. A. Jamieson of Atlanta, Ga.:

"I am thoroughly convinced, after many years observation and some experience, that the only "special device" that will hold older boys is "efficient Scouting." I am entirely out of sympathy with any plan which contemplated adding an organization or club to the Scout Movement for the express purpose of catering to older boys, because I believe the aim will not be realized. In my opinion, the Scouting program, properly and efficiently conducted meets all the requirements of older boys. Let us stick to Scouting, and not be running after 'special devices,' most of which have already been tried long ago and found wanting."

Livingston, Montana, Executive W. V. Evans offers his older boys:

1. Advanced Scouting by the system of Merit Badges.
2. Training in leadership of the younger boys.
3. Longer and harder trips if they want them, at mountain climbing, skiing, etc. We have much opportunity for this sort of thing."

Galveston, Texas—Executive T. E. Murray:

"Using the regular Scout program, but getting scout leaders in charge of older boys who can dignify and magnify the program to fit the 'nature of the critter.' In other words, they make it more of a 'Man scout' program than a 'boy scout' one."

THE REPORT OF THE OLDER BOY COMMISSION AT THE FIRST NATIONAL CONFERENCE SCOUT EXECUTIVES IS ALSO SIGNIFICANT

"First—While in some sections the percentage of boys 15 years of age and over is shown to be as high as 25 per cent of the total scout enrollment, there is, generally speaking, a demand for help in meeting the Older Boy problem. Therefore, we believe that local efforts by way of experiment to meet these needs be encouraged, provided that such efforts are in harmony with the principles and purposes of the Boy Scouts of America, as evidenced by the definite authorization of the National Council; and provided further that under no circumstances should innovations or experiments be undertaken at the expense of the regular program.

2—The Program of the Boy Scouts of America as set forth in its Official Hand Books, is sufficient to meet the needs of boys 12 years of age and over. Failure to hold older boys may, generally speaking, be traced to (a) Inadequate leadership, (b) Lack of opportunity to deal with the older boy in such a specialized way as to maintain his interest in the troop organization.

3—A greater number of older boys than heretofore may be retained in the troop through a study and progressive application of the present program as set forth in the new Handbook for Scoutmasters.

4—We recommend that a commission be constituted to continue the investigation of this subject in the future.”

The above facts also give strong color to the claim of Executive F. O. Belzer of Indianapolis Council.

“Efficiency in leadership seems to be the determining factor in holding the older boys in Scouting, rather than ‘schemes.’ We are finding that our out-door activities seem to contribute to this end. Our ranking system in our Camp program is bringing results.”

It will be of value, however, to look at certain of the so-called “Older Boy” programs now in use in different parts of the country.

In studying these and in learning of their alleged “success” in meeting the Older Boy problem, one can look for the cause of this success in one element they all have in common.

Whatever the “program” used or activities followed those men who succeed with Older Boys are those who

- 1) Cultivate Older Boys
- 2) Give them worthy attractive things to do
- 3) Give them Companionship around things they want to do
- 4) Give them leadership suited to them.

Many men secure these results through a full use of the present scout program.

It is pertinent in the following special troops, to carefully determine the desirability of pulling the older boy away from his original troop. Many men have safeguarded this by requiring continued service in the old troop as well, where possible.

The experience of Executive Northrup of Waterbury, Conn., bears on this point of the use of the scout program:

"We have just started an older boys' troop, limited to boys fifteen years and up, at least second class in rank. It is registered with the scout commissioner as scoutmaster and three deputy commissioners as assistants, the four men working in pairs in rotation. The response was good. The surprise was that the boys are unanimous in wanting, not primarily dances, nor hikes, nor contests, but merit badge work. The group covers scouts all the way from second class to Eagle."

Bakersfield, California—Executive R. E. Dye:

"Have one troop entirely of older Scouts under a very competent 'older boys man.' We are organizing under the direction of our Committee on Instruction a Merit Badge Club with meetings semi-monthly and special instructors each time—allow Scouts who have Merit Badges to give preliminary Merit Badge examinations in the subjects in which they have qualified. Organizing a Boy Scout Fire Department under the direction of the Assistant Fire Chief for Scouts above the rank of second class."

The Sea Scout Program is the most generally adopted older boy program. A half hundred cities have organized "ships" with 1,000 boys and are making progress through the various ranks. Orange Mountain Council, N. J., was the first ship (Oct. 1920) to reach the Barkentine Class. Executive Jones says:

"We are using the Seascout program for older boy work. We have not lost a single boy above fifteen years old in the last year. The loss seems to come in case of boys being unable to become First Class. In our observation the Seascout program has proved of sufficient interest to spur many of the slow Seconds on to become First Class so as to become Seascouts."

Muskegon, Michigan—Executive J. R. Lamb:

"Where a city is bounded by water, and has one of the best ports on the Great Lakes then the only solution to the older boy problem is, 'Sea Scouts.' Sea Scouting affords all the real man making-stuff that the boys of the ages of 15 to 19 like. They like to be men and are men in the making, and therefore we lay all stress on the Sea Scouting program!"

Data on 672 seascouts (Oct. 1920). Re-registration lists of about 100 are in the field, in process of re-registration. 150 others are organized, but not formally registered here.

Does 'not desire to be a distinct organization only a training.' Tribes now in Dayton, Ohio; Evanston, Illinois; Gary, Indiana; Saginaw, Michigan; Logansport, Indiana; Terre Haute, Indiana; Easton, Pa.; Newark, Ohio."

Albany, N. Y.—Executive (the late R. W. Corley).

"The Aboriginal Moundbuilders of America, a scheme 'for developing scoutmasters out of older scouts,'—is for first class scouts and uses scout material and progress in an Indian ritual developed by Professor A. G. Parker, State Archaeologist—Chairman of the Court of Honor. Merit badge, vocational, and social activities supplement 'active membership in a scout troop.'

"Mounds have been organized also in Brooklyn, Queens and Syracuse."

Portland, Maine—Executive W. E. Smith:

"A practical course in Forestry conducted by the Forestry Department of this State."

Omaha, Nebraska—Executive G. M. Hoyt:

"Try to hold older boys in a limited way through Seascouting, through the wireless class; through horse patrol at Camp, and through system of using Scouts under eighteen as Aides to the Scoutmasters. Think we will try a 'seannoit' club. My idea is, no one program will hold very many older boys. Must have diversification."

Chippewa Co., Mich.—Executive C. D. Maddox:

"Our Court of Honor is made up of the Superintendent of Schools, The Principal of the High School, and six others. Credit in High School is given to boys becoming First Class. This is offered as an inducement to the older boy and operates in connection with older boy troops, Ages 15 to 18."

Pasadena, California—Executive T. H. Trask:

"The outstanding method of holding the older boy in Pasadena is an organization called 'The Merit Badge Club.' No Scout may be a member of the organization without first being in good standing in his troop and second, having attained at least three Merit Badges. This organization meets twice a month in the city Courtroom and is always well attended. We endeavor at each meeting of this organization to have one of our Merit Badge examiners give some phase of the subject for which he is examiner. We find that the candidate, Tenderfoot, Second and First Class Scout work harder, looking ahead to the Merit Badge Club as a goal."

SPECIAL STUDY AND ACTIVITY UNITS

As set forth in the 1920 Scoutmasters' Handbook (pages 285-6) and as indicated in the above special device group, there are numerous study or activity units such as:

Signal Corps Squads, Hospital Squads, First Aid Units, Ambulance Corps, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Junior Fire Department, etc., while some groups have undertaken special study of astronomy, wireless, citizenship, etc.

The Secret

It is well to recall that of all these various schemes the successful ones have one vital element in common.

In each case, the older boys have been cultivated, have received attention and companionship; they have received the opportunity to do and be something which has appealed to their sense of worth.

Without these no device will deliver results—with these, few programs based on scouting will fail even with but average leadership.

CHAPTER XXII

TURNOVER

Turnover in Leadership

Its volunteer leaders are the life blood of scouting. Their loss therefore is serious indeed.

A troop gets nicely started, boys and parents interested, all working well, when—Bang!—the Scoutmaster has resigned or left.

What can be done to remedy it. Such unfairness to the boys cannot justly be condoned.

Loss by death or removal, of course, cannot be avoided, but loss by desertion, by “abandoning ship” should be prevented either through selecting better men or through better maintaining their morale.

The following facts are significant:

- 1) Change of leaders usually involves waste. The exception to this is in the replacement of poor personnel.
- 2) More Care in Selection will forestall much loss.
- 3) Helpful Training will reduce Turnover.
- 4) Strong Group Morale will tend to hold scout-leaders.
- 5) Where troop Committees function and secure leaders from within a parent institution, the group pressure for “sticking” is stronger than if a “hand picked” leader has been imported from outside.
- 6) The Appeal of the boys may become a potent appeal for holding good men.
- 7) Multiple Leadership is “accident insurance” for the troop. If the scoutmaster has as associates two or three assistant scoutmasters with him, his own “dropping out” finds someone prepared to take his place.

8) Veteran Scouts as leaders are being used more and more as the movement grows older. Leaders who have "come up" as scouts and now are taking their places as Scoutmasters. Such leaders tend to permanency.

WHAT ARE THE FACTS OF SCOUTMASTER LOSS?

WHAT ARE THE CAUSES?

On the following page the study of dropped, active and total scoutmasters registered for the year ending December 31st, 1919, shows losses entirely too high.

The significant thing for the individual Scout Executive to do is to count the "chairs made vacant." He started out with so many scoutmasters—how many of them did he hold to the end of the year. Losing a dozen and getting a dozen new ones do not cancel each other.

Why did these men drop out?

A careful inquiry and recording of these facts will soon reveal dominant causes which can be avoided in the replacements which the Troop Committee shall be helped to make.

Turnover in Troops

The Local Council which loses 10 troops in a year but which added 10 new ones has apparently "held its own" statistically. But it has not held its own—it has lost its character building contact with two or three hundred boys. The 10 new troops probably represented merely a normal growth. Effective Scouting then involves not only recruiting but holding and serving boys as well.

Here again the sound method of correction is to carefully ascertain what the facts are, what the causes were, and on such knowledge to base improvement. It is good administration, however, to count no troop as dead until its failure to reregister has been "followed-up." Many local councils have found that such "follow-up" reduced their loss by one-half. That this is one important task of the Executive, is quite generally conceded.

639 troops lost in one year from four states represents an actual wastage of troops which is very serious indeed and merits careful effort toward correction.

The way in which "follow-up" may operate in such cases is indicated by the following attention given certain over-due troop registrations in territory not under council.

Turnover in Scouts

The facts and the proposed remedies for troop loss in general apply to losses of scouts—except that the unheeded loss of individual scouts is probably much higher.

The facts of the loss of boys is clearly brought home by the following circle indicating the relative percentages of scouts of each age year from 12-19.

Percentages of Scouts by Ages
(Compiled from 100 Councils 1920)

Percentages,	23.25	26.16	22.24	14.62	7.92	B.92	1.62	0.58
Ages,	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19

The figures have been compiled directly from 100 Councils (October 1920).

These figures do not indicate the losses and replacements within the 13 year group for example.

The following commission Summary is an initial study—preliminary to a more extended investigation.

REPORT OF COMMISSION ON SCOUT TURN-OVER, NATIONAL CONFERENCE SCOUT EXECUTIVES

1. We regard turnover as a net loss in troops and scouts.

2. Causes of turnover.

- A. Individual failure to register.
  - 1a) Failure on the part of the scoutmaster to properly interpret and work the Scouting program, resulting in a lack of interest on the part of scouts.
  - 2a) Single leadership.
  - 3a) Failing to start the Tenderfoot right.
  - 4a) Parental ignorance and indifference.
  - 5a) Influence of street gang.
  - 6a) Logical turnover to be expected.
- B. Troop failure to reregister.
  - 1b) Failure of institution to discharge its responsibility.

3. Remedies to reduce turnover.

- A. Better selection, more careful training and systematic supervision and inspiration of scout leaders with greater emphasis on the out-of-door program.
- B. Sell the institution and troop Committee their responsibility.
- C. Commission finds a deplorable lack of effort at follow-up and a lack of information as to facts regarding turnover.

4. Estimated inevitable turnover 20%—Basis of scouts staying 3 years at least in movement.

It will be of interest for Council to see how far below 20% loss, they can bring their individual turnover of scouts.

Any thorough study of loss involves the following facts:

WHAT RANK HAD HE ATTAINED?

HOW LONG HAD HE BEEN IN THE MOVEMENT?

Exec. Jameson of Detroit investigated 166 scouts dropped and found 100 Tenderfoot, 60 Second Class, 6 First Class—while 80% of the group had been in scouting less than two years.

He says: "If we could keep a boy long enough to be a first class scout, presumably two years or longer, that we had him 'for keeps'."

Such facts covering each loss would soon enable Scoutmaster and Scout Executive to find the leaks and stop them.

Facts like the above may be summarized on an AGE—RANK—SERVICE table like the one on page 495, which will show one at once when the losses come.

THE SCOUT EXECUTIVE AND RECREATIONAL READING— THE BOY'S INDOOR SPORT

By Franklin K. Mathews, Chief Scout Librarian

* * * * *

In the execution of its purpose to give educational value and moral worth to the recreational activities of the boyhood of America, the leaders of the Boy Scout Movement quickly learned that to effectively carry out its program the boy must be influenced not only in his out-of-door life but also in the diversions of his other leisure moments. It is at such times that the boy is captured by the tale of daring enterprises and adventurous good times. What now is needful is not that his taste should be thwarted but trained. There should constantly be made available recreational reading the boy likes best yet always that which will be best for the boy. To meet this need, the Magazine and Library Departments were organized.

One of the managers of the Circulation Department of the Curtis publications was asked what premiums in their "Book of Prizes" were most popular with the tens of thousands of boys who sell their publications. With more than five hundred articles listed, all chosen especially to delight the boy-heart, the boys, he said, asked for books oftener than for any other one thing. In a survey made in Rochester, N. Y., when the question was asked of the school children as to what they did between Friday afternoon and the following Monday, it was discovered that they spent the largest percentage of their time reading. A study was also made of the "hobbies" of 923 boys, and again it was found that boys spend more time reading than in any other recreation.

It is not too much to say that aside from personality, the chief vehicle for the conveyance of truth to the child mind is through the story book; by this means the child is more profoundly moved than by any other. We have not yet reached the same conclusion regarding the recreational story books of the early and middle 'teens, still thinking of these as "just a story", when the fact is that boys and girls are doubtless as much influenced by these as by the stories of early childhood. To no little extent, it is our neglect in failing to recognize the worthwhileness of these later story periods, that our American youth is being so terribly exploited, on the one hand by the "thriller" in its many forms, and on the other, by the salacious story which increasingly is being read either in book or magazine by young people in their middle 'teens.

Some of us recall the delicious delight of reading such books as, "The Reveries of a Bachelor" or "Dream Life." Better far at this period that our young people should have their sentimental interest fed by even such "poor literature" as the books of E. P. Roe than that they should be nourished by nasty stories, made nice by almost perfect literary art. Some day we will stop laughing at our youth because of their interest in the sentimental story, giving it serious consideration and, by careful analysis, discover how important a place such stories have in the mental and moral development of our boys and girls.

Our special interest, however, is in the adventure story and the other recreational reading interests of the boy in his early 'teens. At this period boys are likely to read more books than at any other time, some of them reading as many as three or four books a week. What is true for boys is also true for girls, for they have a similar interest in the story of adventure, though at this time boys are not at all interested in the stories of sentiment that girls read so readily.

Here is a hint as to one of the reasons why boys are so much interested in adventure stories, that is, in a story possessing the appeal of action, or "pep", as the boy would say. There are two experiences, common to both sexes just before and during the early 'teen age, the one of unusual physical growth, and the other of a differentiating of sex. Beyond a doubt, it is this condition of the body that explains in part at least, both boys' and girls' interest in the story of action. Now "stirs the blood to bubble in the veins," and it is this exhilaration within the muscular and nervous system that excites the average boy's or girl's interest in a story in which there is "something doing" all the time.

Some day a very careful study will be made to discover just how far the adventure type of story serves as a prophylactic for the adolescent at the critical time when youth needs to be safeguarded at every turn. Meanwhile, it is safe to propose that careful consideration be given to this suggestion and that, just as far as possible, boys and girls be guided and directed in their choice of books at this time.

Moreover, it is these experiences of the body that give a physical basis for the rise and growth of the imagination, making necessary proper exercise for its wholesome development. In a word, what the paraphernalia of a gymnasium are to the body, books are at this time to the imagination—the means by which through exercise it finds adequate expression. Right here, it is important for us to notice that the test as to the worthwhileness of these adventure stories is not as to whether they teach morality but as to whether, like gymnasium equipment, they are of the best sort for the purpose intended. That the adventure story is of the realest service in the boy's character development there can be no doubt, but at the moment let us think alone as to the importance of the story in providing a kind of mental gymnastic paraphernalia for the exercise of his imagination and emotional nature.

Unfortunately, we usually associate the uses of the imagination with that other-worldliness which leads away from the day's work and the worship of the "God of things as they are." We are a practical people and demand the kind of education which reaps rich reward in the market place. But is it not true that imagination awakened and well-developed does for us that very thing? What are some of the supreme qualities that distinguish successful men? May we not count the chiefest among them initiative and resourcefulness;—and whence come these except as men possess creative and constructive imagination?

So may it not be true that when boys are reading their story of adventure, if it only be of the right sort, that this is what is taking place. The greatest possible service education can render is to train the boy to grasp and master new situations as they constantly present themselves to him; and what helps more to make such adjustment than a lively imagination; and what are the best stories of adventure but the records of resourcefulness in the face of what seems to be insuperable difficulty? It is this element in "Robinson Crusoe", "Swiss Family Robinson", "Masterman Ready", and similar tales, that make them fresh reading for every generation.

"Fresh reading for every generation", for there is a time, the period of the early 'teens, that nature has set for the development of personal initiative and self-reliance. Heretofore, the child has been largely influenced by what some educators call "the race mind." But now a transition comes, and nature provides conditions to make something better, perhaps something new. Says Professor Edward St. John in his "Stories and Story Telling":

"It is now that he needs the exceptional and the sensational to spur him on to do deeds that have never yet been done. Nature now seeks to stir in every one the impulse to rise above the common level and do surpassing things. Hence the impossible hero does not repel and may have a real pedagogical value."

Is it too much to conclude, then, that when boys read stories of ADVENTURE (# 1, Page 514) of the right kind, that these books will stimulate such initiative, awaken such resourcefulness as will aid the boy to change capacity into capability and so vocationally help him to find himself. Not that the tale of adventure alone will do this, but rightly, purposefully used, it is sure to do its share.

In their recreational reading, boys find delight in books other than the tales of pure adventure. Increasingly, they are interested in what may be termed THE WHAT-AND-HOW-TO-DO BOOKS, (# 2 Page 514) that is, books on handicraft, machinery and applied electricity. The relation between the story of adventure and THE WHAT-AND-HOW-TO-DO BOOK is most intimate—through these creative imagination aroused, seeks to express itself, following the natural law of impression then expression.

A striking illustration of this connection between these two types of books, was found in a newspaper and magazine shop where a man had observed this same relation. In the center of the store he had arranged a table, on one side of which were the nickel thrillers, and on the other side, what he called his sentimental "slush-trough." To fill in the rest of the table, he had placed immediately in front such magazines as Popular Mechanics and Popular Electricity. He said that watching this table, he had discovered that while it was usual for boys to read first the "nickels" and then dip into the "slush", in many instances, the brighter boys turned very quickly from the nickels to read Popular Mechanics, etc. And it is said upon very good authority that the publishers of the nickel novels count such magazines their biggest competitors.

Companions of the mind

Here is a hint as to how to help solve the problem of boys reading too many stories, a common claim made by those who have to do with the directing of their reading. Boys should be given opportunity to read the very best stories but equal opportunity should be presented for them to secure those books which will make it possible for them to express themselves wholesomely and practically through some work of their hands.

The temptation is for boys to indulge themselves in the reading of stories simply to satisfy their craving for excitement. A legitimate desire, and one that should be satisfied, but it is for leadership to see that something better and more permanent than mere feeling results from the experience. For we have now not only the awakening imagination to assist us but the instinct for construction or destruction as well, and it is a matter of supreme importance that ample means be supplied the boy to assist him in the proper expression of himself. Not that he must needs become a mechanic, but in this period of mental and physical readjustment, he should develop skill in the mastery of his fingers and through exercise build up a system of well coordinated muscles.

Only recently we have learned how to mend morals through the activities involved in making muscles. In reform schools, manual training is working many miracles in the transformation of boys' characters. And we are latterly learning that what has such merit for the bad boy is of equal worth for the good one. He, too, may be as profoundly influenced through the work of his hands; he, too, may through his "hobbies" exercise application, neatness, initiative, resourcefulness, carefulness, honesty and many more of the elemental moral qualities.

Again, as we study boys' recreational reading, we discover that when, with insatiable appetite he is demanding a story, there is developing in the boy a hunger for facts, a thirst for knowledge. In guiding the boy's reading we must, therefore, keep constantly before us this two-fold need of the boy's developing mind—that it needs just as much fact as fiction; and moreover, that in his fiction, in his adventure tales, we should give him only such as represent facts in the form of fiction, not those that represent fiction as fact.

The boy of today is being deluged with a flood of cheap, story books that are as destructive of things previous as a Johnstown Flood, the menacing element of all these stories being their gross exaggeration.

That is the best story for boys which in every sense is most true to life and human nature. But in almost all of this "mile-a-minute fiction" some inflammable tale of improbable adventure is told. Boys ride on aeroplanes as easily as though on bicycles; criminals are captured by them with a facility that matches the ability of Sherlock Holmes; and when it comes to getting on in the world, the cleverness of these hustling boys is comparable only to those captains of industry and Napoleons of finance who have made millions in a minute. Insurmountable difficulties and crushing circumstances are as easily overcome and conquered as in fairy tales. Indeed, no popular character of history or legend or mythological story was ever more wise, more brave, more resourceful, than some of these up-to-the-minute boy heroes are made to appear in the Sunday supplement juvenile stories.

In the judgment of the writer, such books debauch and vitiate the imagination as the body is debauched and vitiated by strong drink. A mother writes: "My son has just obtained a book 'Boy Scouts of the Air at Eagle Camp' which is very much in demand by the boys here. This is a story of refugees, smugglers and rewarded captures, all improbable adventures, and altogether too exciting for children at any age." Another mother complains: "So many books are loaned to our boys, full of excitement, but absolutely lacking in anything that calls out the nobility and manliness that is so ready and waiting to be awakened in every boy."

To negate the influence of any or all such modern thrillers boys may read, and to help conserve the good results of the story books that develop in the boy the creative imagination, we should constantly arrest his attention with those books of INFORMATION (#3 Page 514) that will familiarize him with things as they actually are.

Such books to delight the boy must be more than a wooden digest of facts. He will read even those occasionally, but what moves him mightily, captures his mind completely is narrative or description in which facts are as much alive as his red-blooded heroes. Here is a fine field for the most gifted writers—the prospect of making facts appear to the boy as fascinating as fiction; the possibility of fitting fact and fancy so well together that the fact, heightened and colored, is made for the boy mind tasteful, appetizing as a good meal, and as satisfying to his hunger for knowledge.

In order that boys might derive from their recreational reading the benefits suggested above, I would propose that whenever a collection of books is made for boys, that these three chief reading interests, with their relation, be borne in mind. One way to do this would be to assemble, say one hundred such books, placing them all together, perhaps naming them, BOOKS BOYS LIKE BEST. Such an arrangement would have the decided advantage of keeping constantly before boys all three types of these books. A very important matter indeed, for it is almost absolutely essential that if a boy is to secure the best values for his reading, it will be only as he has the benefit of all three kinds of books. On the one hand, the STORIES awaken and develop his imagination and on the other THE WHAT-AND-HOW-TO-DO BOOKS make possible a wholesome and practical expression, while the BOOKS OF FACT AND INFORMATION serve to modify imagination by always reminding a boy that he is living in a world not of fiction but of hard and stubborn reality.

So far in our study of the worth of a boy's recreational reading, we have considered some of the causes that lie back of these reading interests, their relation to each other—how they provide in turn a stimulant and a restraint and a medium by means of which the imagination and the emotional nature, the instinct for construction and inquiring mind, find material for their proper exercise and wholesome satisfaction. In a boy's moral development, the contribution made by his recreational reading is not less marked.

We know so well, are reminded so often of the power and influence of the good book and great, and of the one book even that has so often determined life issues in the lives of our noble great, that we have failed for the most part to observe the influence for good of the boy's recreational reading books. Such books influence him for good or ill as profoundly as his play activities, of which after all they are a vital part. As with his play, the needful thing is that there should be understanding and direction of his reading interests.

Our time is rapidly learning the educational worth of play and its value in developing children both mentally and morally. Playgrounds and gymnasiums are fast becoming schools for exercising morals as well as muscles. And this is accomplished, not so much by introducing novel games or new forms of play activity, but by giving intelligent direction to the play instinct as it expresses itself through the games and play activities generations old.

So it should be with the boy and his books. Let his taste and interest be the criterion of judgment, then direct and guide him in the choice of books. Of course, he is always growing out of such books as he is growing out of his clothes. But while the growing process is going on we should be as mindful to gratify his taste for particular books as for particular clothes—short pants, for instance; and, if carefully led, will he not in time take as naturally to the really great literature as he at last naturally turns to long trousers?

What is needed is not that the boy's taste should be thwarted but trained. He must be given his "wild west" story, but of the better sort. In his 'teens, while the boy is growing so rapidly in brain and body, he can have no better teacher than some mighty woodsman. SCOUTS AND TRAPPERS AND PIONEERS should be presented to him in realistic biography and stirring story. (#4 Page 514) The adventurous lives of these men, so full of daring action and generous, noble deeds, is a thrilling challenge to every red-blooded boy. Says Professor George Walter Fiske: "Let him emulate savage woodcraft, the woodman's keen, practiced vision, his steadiness of nerve, his contempt for pain, hardship and the weather; his power of endurance, his observation and heightened senses; his delight in out of door sports and joys and unfettered happiness with untroubled sleep under the stars; his calmness, self-control, emotional steadiness, his utter faithfulness in friendships; his honesty, his personal bravery."

Next to the "wild west" type of adventure tale, the one that appeals to most boys is the HISTORICAL STORY; (# 5 Page 514) and this is not so much because of his interest in biography or history, but because such stories are so largely a record of war. This reading interest of the boy is easily misunderstood. Like Stevenson, he reads such stories for "some quality of the brute incident" but the quality of the "brute incident" that appeals to the red-blooded boy is action. He likes the stories of war because in them there is "something doing all the time." Of the horrors of war, its bloodshed, of that the boy really feels but little, and is not any more likely influenced permanently by it than he was when as a child he heard over and over again the story of "Jack the Giant Killer" and how David slew Goliath.

With both the child and the boy, what moves most profoundly is the action of the story in which men of daring do wonderful things. So long as there are encounters and combats and hair-breadth escapes; heroic rescues, astonishing accomplishments and amazing difficulties overcome, the boy is captivated and enthralled.

But as someone has said, "Cultivating a taste is often cloying an appetite." There are some authors of so-called historical stories who in their effort to satisfy the taste of the boy barbarian magnify the glory of war, paying little or no attention to the facts of history. Those are the best historical stories which are set in verified fact and in which bold, adventurous actions are so portrayed as to make evident and vital to the boy the lessons taught both by victory and defeat, and how the liberties and privileges of the present were purchased with a great price by our country's noble great, some of whom fought and gave much while others fought and gave all.

In fine, to quote one of our country's leading authors of boys' books: "The historical story should be the connecting, though frequently missing, link between the boy and the history of his own land. It may not develop a genius, but it may do better still, it may arouse admiration for a true man. It may not, indeed ought not to, glorify the battlefield; but it may assist in cultivating courage, devotion to ideals, and, above all, a true estimate and proper valuation of what his heritage as an American is."

What is true of the "wild west" and historical type of adventure tale, is equally true as regards the other stories that boys read with such enthusiasm. Take for instance stories that deal with "HEROES OF DARING" (# 6 Page 515). Surely, if a boy only reads the right kind of books of this sort, they are bound to toughen the fibre of his spirit, making it not only buoyant with hope, but solid, durable, persistent, in perseverance, helping him, when the glory of the "impossible" beckons, to turn stumbling blocks into stepping stones, and to battle with dauntless determination to the very end.

Fortunately for the boy, nature, as always, is fighting on his side. Within himself is triumph and defeat. Within himself are mighty resources—energy of body, strength of will, power of imagination, depth of feeling, vividness of thought. These are the capital with which nature has endowed the boy to engage in the serious business of life. His future turns on the disposition he makes of these resources, whether he wastes or spends them to his own hurt or help. Here we must assist him. It should be our business to so inspire him that the doing of the difficult brings delight rather than the cowardice of despair.

In this undertaking such books help mightily, for the heroes of daring have all the characteristics the boy so much admires,—unquenchable courage, immense resourcefulness, absolute fidelity, conspicuous greatness. At the age of early adolescence, people of masterful personality interest and influence the boy tremendously. And the most masterful personality of all is the man who does things, big things, wonderful things; the man who conquers and overcomes in the face of the heaviest odds, the man who never turns his back but moves, breast forward, "to do or die." For the boy, that spirit is the stuff of which great manhood is made and, if with books we would profoundly influence him, we must constantly challenge him with stories of astonishing accomplishments, biographies that hold him spellbound with wonder-tales of almost unattainable undertakings achieved.

Another group of characters in books that appeals so much to boys may be termed "HEROES OF SUCCESS" (#7 Page 515). For a generation now, boys of our country have been reading this type of story as written by Alger and others, who, like him, present boys and men winning success in most preposterous and unlikely ways. Educators are pretty well agreed that the "Alger story" is likely to do the average boy more harm than good. They have not, however, been equally concerned to analyze this reading interest, endeavoring to discover just why it is that boys are such voracious readers of these stories.

It is at this time in the boy's development that the feeling of self-sufficiency usually asserts itself in the desire to leave school and go to work. The real reason why ninety per cent of our boys never enter high school is found neither in economic pressure or faulty curriculum. It strikes deeper than that—the cause is in the boy himself. As selfhood develops, the acquisitive, productive and commercial instincts strongly assert themselves. The boy longs to possess, produce, achieve, something for himself.

At this period a boy's reading becomes immensely valuable, for it is a noteworthy fact that many great men have been more profoundly influenced by books, what they read, than by schools, where they study. A boy needs now such books of biography, such stories of achievement as are rich in broad, human experience and the vigorous action of men as it finds expression in the stress and strain of "making good" in business.

Unfortunately, we have altogether too few books either in biography or story form that "bid the boy to hope, to fill his heart with visions fair." Gradually, though, such books are being written. The interest in vocational guidance and training is beginning to glimpse the fact that there may be written vocational stories of a right sort that will intelligently minister to this period of the early 'teens, which marks such rapid growth of the consciousness of self in the expanding personality, and the acquisitive and productive and commercial instincts, so rampant at this time.

To younger boys, "THE HEROES OF CHIVALRY" (#8 Page 515) appeal tremendously. The most favorable period for the presentation of the story or life of service is in the middle 'teens. Says Professor St. John: "After the seventeenth or eighteenth year so strong is the instinctive tendency toward altruism that often self-sacrifice becomes a pleasure, and is sought almost as an end in itself." The cause for such susceptibility is found in the fact that it is now that tender sentiment stirs the moral nature to its very depths. This is the time when young men and maidens dream dreams and see visions; dreams of high service, visions of self-sacrifice for others.

But it is not so with the younger boy. He has ideals, but they are personal, how he may improve, do something for himself; he has passionate yearnings, thoughts profound and deep, but mostly of self. "Mostly of self," because he is growing so rapidly physically and mentally and emotionally. It is this rapid growth, though, generating tremendous energy, which offers us our point of contact for awakening within him ideals of service. His energy needs direction, means must be provided for the boy to do something. Not often do you find boys eagerly responsive to the call to be good; but to do good, that is different. Here there is room for action and that appeals. Impressive proof of this is found in the willing way in which Boy Scouts "Do a Good Turn Daily."

Just at this period, too, the boy is most strongly influenced by the hero who does things, especially the man of physical prowess. This is why the athlete so completely captivates him. Within himself stirs increasing strength and the hero of his dreams is a man strong and agile and skillful in physical competitions.

But other heroes attract and for the same reason. What he admires in all his heroes is the wonderful, the startling, the sensational, and, given any man who does things, things unusual, things that appeal to the boy as spectacular, and he is quick to respond with an interest that is keen and attentive.

This is our hope in presenting the heroes of service. For this moment, the boy will not be so much interested in the hero because of his unselfish service or splendid self-sacrifice, for it is not the quality of the act that interests him so much as the quantity. When in heroic service men do things, big things, big and courageous and wonderful, such glorious deeds are bound to win the boy's approval and applause. It is so as regards bold knights who in the olden time rode forth redressing human wrong; and it may be so as regards our modern knights of service if only they be presented in the same picturesque and winsome way.

No list of books that boys like best would be complete except mention was made of their interest in the Stories of HUMOR (#9 Page 515). Because in the Bible there is no humor, or at the most, very little, many people find it difficult to believe that it has a serious place in our lives. Quite the contrary is true and our time, learning the educational worth of the play spirit is also beginning to appreciate that two indispensable qualities for wholesome living are a lively imagination and a keen sense of humor.

Small children find nourishment for these two qualities in fairy tales and nonsense rhymes and stories. Such interest is the instinct of play and the sense of humor making their contribution toward the development of cheerfulness in the child. The happy disposition provides the best soil for the cultivation of virtue; good humor ought to lead to good character. Lincoln's kindness was proverbial, but not more so than his genial good nature, and the white flower of kindness was doubtless nurtured in the rough soil of humor.

What is true for younger children as regards the nonsense jingle is true also respecting older children and the funny story. In intelligently satisfying this reading interest of the boy, parents are providing a foundation for a "good disposition", and some of the basic elements of character. Not only may we "laugh and grow fat", it is possible also for us to laugh and grow good.

I have left to the last mention of a boy's interest in the so-called school story or Stories of SPORTS (# 10 Page 515). Shakespeare said:

"The play's the thing, Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king."

—Hamlet.

I venture a bold paraphrase:

"Play's the thing, Wherein to catch the conscience of the boy."

We do not always distinguish between moral instruction and moral training. The first deals with theory, the second with practice. The Church and the public school may instruct children in religion and ethics but it is in their play activities that they are trained in self-mastery through exercise. The rules of the game become a kind of Sinai before which the child bows in willing obedience.

In this character development, books may be made to play no small part. It is notorious that a very little "preaching" and "moralizing" go a long way with the average boy. Formal instruction in morals is a thing he usually tries to avoid. Nor are we any more successful when we "tag a tale with a moral." What is needed is that morality be emotionalized, made thrillingly attractive; the idea, what is thought, must become the ideal, what is felt.

It is the story that offers such opportunity, and particularly stories of sports. Boys at play may be presented in such telling fashion that the playground becomes a stage teaching the youthful mind morality with all the vivid force and alluring charm of the drama. Self-sacrifice becomes glorious, selfishness a thing to be despised; truthfulness and honesty commendable, cheating and lying mean and contemptible; fairness always honorable and the lack of it despicable.

More and more we must demand of writers of school stories and stories of sports that they realize this opportunity. It is not enough that the story portray accurately the game, or picture realistically the life of the school. The record of these things must be the warp and woof upon which the author weaves with cunning art "to catch the conscience of the boy."

In conclusion, let me remind my readers that boys are not interested in recreational reading because of its moral benefits. Like Stevenson, they read story books "not for the eloquence or character or thought, but for some quality of the brute incident." And the "quality of the brute incident" which most appeals is action—there must be "something doing" all the time. It was an Irish lady who said: "I like the tears and the laughter laid on with a trowel, and plenty of lords and ladies and I am not ashamed to say so; I get enough of the rele life in the wurk." "Not the tears but the laughter and plenty of action laid on with a trowel," is the way the red-blooded boy would put it, and neither would he be ashamed to tell you his opinion.

If the boy does not take his recreational reading seriously that is no reason why his leaders should fail to do so.

THINGS THE EXECUTIVE CAN DO

Scout Executives can help very much in directing boys' recreational reading interests by co-operating in promoting the movement for better books for boys especially as it relates to the annual observance of "Children's Book Week." This "week", promoted each year by The American Library Association, the American Booksellers Association and The Associated Publishers, etc., is the outgrowth of the movement's "Safety First Juvenile Book Week" and "Good Book Week", promoted in past years by the Library Department.

The observance of "Children's Book Week" takes place annually early in November, the beginning of the holiday book season when more than seventy-five percent of the year's business in juvenile books is done. Scout Executives can assist at this time by cooperating with local librarians in their efforts to influence booksellers to make store displays and window exhibits of the more worthwhile books for boys, and in arranging for meetings with Women's Clubs, Parent-Teachers Associations in the interest of good reading for children and, just as far as possible, in assisting booksellers in such ways as appear advisable.

OUR COUNTRY

By Edward Everett Hale

And for your country, boy, and for that Flag, never dream a dream but of serving her as she bids you, even though the service carry you through a thousand hells. No matter what happens to you, no matter who flatters you or who abuses you, never look at another flag, never let a night pass but what you pray God to bless the Flag. Remember, boy, that behind officers and government, and people even, there is the Country Herself, your Country, and that you belong to Her, as you belong to your own mother. Stand by Her, boy, as you would stand by your mother.

CONSTITUTION of the BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

ARTICLE 1—NAME

The name of the corporation is Boy Scouts of America.

ARTICLE II—PURPOSE

The purpose of this corporation is as set forth in the original certificate of incorporation under the laws of the District of Columbia, dated February 8, 1910, and restated in Section 3 of the Charter granted by Congress June 15, 1916, as follows—"That the purpose of this corporation shall be to promote, through organization, and cooperation with other agencies, the ability of boys to do things for themselves and others, to train them in scoutcraft, and to teach them patriotism, courage, self-reliance, and kindred virtues, using the methods which are now in common use by boy scouts," by placing emphasis upon the Scout Oath and Law for character development, citizenship training and physical fitness.

ARTICLE III—PRINCIPLES AND POLICIES

Section 1—The Boy Scouts of America maintains that no boy can grow into the best kind of citizenship without recognizing his obligation to God. In the first part of the boy scout's oath or pledge the boy promises, "On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the scout law." The recognition of God as the ruling and leading power in the universe, and the grateful acknowledgment of His favors and blessings, is necessary to the best type of citizenship, and is a wholesome thing in the education of the growing boy. No matter what the boy may be—Catholic or Protestant or Jew—this fundamental need of good citizenship should be kept before him. The Boy Scouts of America therefore recognizes the religious element in the training of a boy, but it is absolutely non-sectarian in its attitude toward that religious training. Its policy is that the organization or institution with which the boy scout is connected shall give definite attention to his religious life.

Only men willing to subscribe to this declaration of principle shall be entitled to certificates of leadership in carrying out the boy scout program.

The activities of the members of the Boy Scouts of America shall be carried on under conditions which show respect for the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion, as required by the twelfth Scout Law, reading, "A scout is reverent. He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion."

In no case where a troop is connected with a church or other distinctively religious institution, shall scouts of other denominations or faith be required, because of their membership in the scout troop, to take part in or observe a religious ceremony distinctively peculiar to that institution or church.

Section 2—The Boy Scouts of America shall not, through its governing body or through any of its officers, its chartered councils or members, involve the Boy Scout Movement in any question of a political character, but each official and member shall have freedom of thought and action as an individual.

Section 3—In carrying out the purpose of the Boy Scout Movement as stated herein, technical military training and drill shall not be included for the reason that they are not equal in value or as suitable for boys of scout age in training for good citizenship as the program of scout activities.

ARTICLE IV—PROGRAM

(c) All material submitted on topics dealing with any of the various scout activities shall be considered as contributions to the scout movement and when accepted shall be the property of the Boy Scouts of America with rights of copy reserved.

Clause 6—Department of Scout Supplies. The scope of this department shall be confined strictly to the sale of such items of scout supplies, equipment and printed matter for which there is a real use in carrying out the Boy Scout program and the sale of which would render a distinct service to members of the organization; provided, however, that no attempt shall be made to develop a general sales department merely for the sake of profit and that it shall always be the policy of the department to sell only goods of unquestionable quality.

All net profits from the operations of the Department of Scout Supplies shall be used in the administration and extension of the program of the Boy Scouts of America throughout the country.

No article of supplies or equipment shall be listed in the catalog or offered for sale by the Department of Scout Supplies without the approval of the members of the Committee on Scout Supplies.

The Department of Scout Supplies is specifically charged with the responsibility of protecting the Boy Scouts of America against unauthorized use of its name, or distinctive wording, or any of its badges or insignia or distinctive uniform contrary to the provisions of the patent and trade-mark laws and Act of Congress of June 15th, and the Act of Congress of June 3rd, 1916, specifically authorizing the Boy Scouts of America to use its uniform and forbidding others to use a uniform, similar to the uniforms worn by the U. Patent and Trade-mark Laws and the provisions of the charter granted by Congress June 15th, 1916, and shall be used exclusively by scouts and officials registered and in good standing according to the records at the National Headquarters, who qualify in accordance with the provisions herein set forth, or as may be prescribed from time to time in the official handbooks issued by the National Council.

All badges and insignia shall remain the property of the Boy Scouts of America subject to recall for cause by the National Council or their duly authorized representatives.

ARTICLE VIII—SIGN, SALUTE AND HANDCLASP

Section 1—The Scout Sign. The three fingers held up, palm front the thumb resting on the nail of the little finger is the scout sign, and reminds the scout of his three promises in the Scout Oath.

Section 2—The Scout Salute. The scout salute is rendered by raising the right hand with the fingers held as in the scout sign, to the forehead, or to the brim of the hat, palm being turned to the left, the fingers being in front of the corner of the eye, and the forearm making an angle of forty-five degrees with the horizontal. The scout salute is always rendered with the right hand.

Section 3—The Scout Handclasp. The boy scout handclasp is made with the right hand, the fingers in the same relative position as in making the scout sign. The three fingers extended represent the three parts of the Scout Oath; and the bent position of the thumb and little finger represents the knot or tie that binds these parts together into a strong unity. One scout shakes hands with another by a good warm handclasp with the three middle fingers extended in a straight line along the other's wrist, and with the thumb and the little finger clasped around the other's fingers.

ARTICLE IX—UNIFORMS

Section 1—The Boy Scout Uniform. The Boy Scout Uniform is specifically authorized by an act of Congress approved June 3, 1916, and is protected by the provisions of the Federal Charter, June 15th, 1916. It consists as follows: Hat—khaki colored, flat, broad brimmed; shirt—khaki colored, with two Stanley pockets, lettering "Boy Scouts of America," in red over right pocket, metal buttons with scout insignia; coat—roll collar, two Stanley breast pockets, two bellows side pockets, box pleat in back from belt to yoke, metal buttons with scout insignia, lettering as for shirt; mackinaw, optional wool; neckerchief—troop color, standard size, 28 x 32 inches, worn inside of coat; four-in-hand, optional, in place of neckerchief; breeches—khaki colored, American Army pattern with two hip, two front top pockets and one watch fob pocket; shorts—khaki colored, optional, instead of breeches for camp or summer use; belt—khaki colored, web, with patent fastener; stockings—khaki colored.

The uniform for Scout Officials is as follows: Hat, shirt and tie similar to that worn by scouts; coat, with loose roll collar, two Stanley breast pockets, two large bellows pockets, inside pockets, semi-fitting back with two pleats running to a yoke across the shoulders; vest, khaki colored; breeches, same as for scouts, reinforced knees; trousers permitted for special use, khaki colored; leather leggings, dark shade tan with straps.

Material for the above coats, breeches, etc., shall be determined by the local council, or in case there is no local council, by the local troop organizations. The question of whether the coat shall or shall not be prescribed for scout use shall be determined in the same way.

Imitation of the U. S. Army, Navy or Marine Corps uniform is prohibited, in accordance with provisions of Act of Congress, approved June 3, 1916.

Section 2—Protection. The sale and use of the scout uniform shall be restricted to scouts and scout officials who are registered and in good standing according to the records at the National Headquarters. It shall be the responsibility of all members of the Boy Scouts of America and especially of all commissioned officers and chartered councils to cooperate with the National Council in preventing the use of the official boy scout uniform by those who are not members of the organization in good standing.

Section 3—Distribution. The uniform shall be issued only through the Supply Department of the Boy Scouts of America or through agents recommended and approved by duly chartered local councils of the Boy Scouts of America, or the Executive Board.

Section 4—When to Use. The Boy Scout uniform is intended primarily for use in connection with the activities of the Boy Scout Movement, but its use may be authorized by local scout officials under conditions and for purposes not inconsistent with the principles of Scouting and the boy scout program provided, however, the uniform shall not be used: 1—When soliciting funds or engaging in any selling campaigns, 2—when engaging in distinctive political endeavor; 3—when appearing upon the stage professionally without specific authority from the Executive Board.

Section 5—Neither Scouts nor Scout officials shall wear the scout uniform or any official Scout badges and insignia outside the limits of the United States without special credentials from the National Council issued through the Executive Board, authorizing them to do so.

ARTICLE X—CLASSES OF SCOUTS

Section 1—Boys who qualify as herein set forth may be enrolled as Active, Associate, Pioneer or Veteran Scouts.

Section 2—Active Scout. An Active Scout is one who with the approval of his parents or guardian becomes a member of a regular troop and obligates himself to attend the meetings regularly.

Section 3—Associate Scout. Any member of a troop of boy scouts who, in the judgment of the scoutmaster and the troop committee is unable to meet the requirements of active membership may be carried on the troop records as an Associate Scout, provided, however, he will attend at least one meeting of a troop within the year and in all other respects be guided by the obligations of an Active Scout.

Section 4—Pioneer Scout. In cases where, upon investigation, it is found that a boy cannot through affiliation with a regular troop secure the benefits of Scouting, he may be enrolled as a member of the Pioneer Scout Division and be known as a Pioneer Scout, and be permitted to carry out the scout program by correspondence with the National Council until such time as he can become a member of a regular troop.

Section 5—Veteran and Ten Year Scouts. After five years of service in the Movement, a first class scout may, upon application, become a life member of the Veteran Scout Association with the designation of Veteran Scout, provided he agrees to live up to his scout obligation, to keep local scout authorities in the community in which he lives informed as to his availability for service to the community in case of any emergency, and further to take an active part in the promotion of the cause of Scouting, as the circumstances and conditions in his case permit. This degree shall also be open to all scout officials who have been members of the Boy Scouts of America for five years.

A special badge for scouts and scout officials who have completed five years' service in Scouting, and still another, appropriate for ten year service, shall be made available, provided the above requirements are fulfilled.

ARTICLE XI—LOCAL ORGANIZATION AND CHARTERS

Section 1—Troop Organization.

Clause 1—Institutions. For the organization of troops of boy scouts, charters may be granted to institutions upon application from the duly constituted authorities of such institutions upon blanks provided for that purpose. Such applications shall obligate the institutions to provide adequate facilities, supervision and leadership for at least one year and to make an effort to provide the members of the troop with an opportunity to spend a week or more in a summer camp conducted according to the prescribed standards.

Clause 2—Independent Troops. While the organization of troops in connection with existing institutions shall be preferred, when conditions warrant, a charter may be granted for the organization of a troop independent of any relationship with an existing institution, provided, however, that the applicants are citizens of the United States and men of high moral character, whose interest is primarily in helping boys, through the scouting program, and who shall have the resources to provide the necessary facilities, supervision and leadership. In such cases the obligations upon the applicants for a charter shall be the same as those required of institutions.

Clause 3—Renewals. Troop charters may be renewed upon application where the evidence shows a satisfactory effort to carry out the scout program as set forth in the official handbooks and compliance with the regulations of the Boy Scouts of America.

Clause 4—Local Council Approval. In territory supervised by a local council, all applications for troop charters, new and renewal, shall be granted only upon the favorable recommendation of the local council.

Clause 5—The Troop Committee. Each chartered troop of the Boy Scouts of America shall be under the supervision of a troop or boys' work committee, consisting of three or more male citizens of the United States, twenty-one years of age or over, selected by the institution with which the troop is connected or, in the case of an independent troop, of those who make application for the troop charter, one of whom shall be designated as chairman.

Members of a troop committee may wear the uniform of the Boy Scouts of America as prescribed for scout officials with such badges and insignia as are prescribed for members of troop committees, and may upon application, at their expense, receive certificates of membership.

The troop committee shall be responsible for:

1. The selection of a scoutmaster and one or more assistant scoutmasters.
2. Providing proper facilities for meetings.

3. Advising with the scoutmaster from time to time on questions of policy affecting the proper interpretation of scouting and the requirements of the institution with which the troop is connected.

4. The observance of the rules and regulations of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

5. Encouraging the scoutmaster and his assistants and the members of the troop in carrying out the boy Scout Program.

6. The operation of the troop in such a way as to insure its permanency.

7. The finances, including the securing of adequate support and the proper disbursement of funds.

8. The troop property.

9. Securing suitable opportunity for the members of the troop to spend one or more weeks in camp, with adequate facilities and supervision.

10. Assuming active direction of the troop in case of the inability of the scoutmaster to serve, until his successor has been appointed and commissioned.

Clause 6—Representation. In communities supervised by local councils, each chartered institution shall be entitled to elect one of its members, not the scoutmaster, as a member of the local council; and in the case of an independent troop, one representative citizen of the United States identified with the work of that troop, not the scoutmaster, may be elected by the Troop Committee to membership on the Local Council, provided, however, in the larger communities where the local council work is sub-divided among district committees, the representatives of troops shall be appointed to the committee in charge of the district in which the troop holds its regular meetings and the district committee shall, in turn, elect delegates to the local council in accordance with the provisions of the constitution and By-Laws of the local council.

Clause 7—Contributions. Each institution or other independent group of citizens having a charter to conduct a troop of scouts, shall be given an opportunity annually to contribute to the financial support of the National Council and provide for the further extension of the Boy Scout Program throughout the country.

Section 2—Local Council Organization.

Clause 1—Purpose. In order to relieve the National Council to the fullest extent practicable of the responsibility for leadership and supervision of troops of scouts, and the extension of the Boy Scout Movement, it shall be the policy of the National Council, through its Field Department, to encourage the organization of local councils in towns, cities, and counties throughout the country, in accordance with the organization policy herein set forth, when such local councils provide an adequate budget for the maintenance of the local headquarters, the conduct of a boy scout camp, and the employment of one or more men one of whom shall act as Scout Executive and devote his entire time to the promotion and supervision of the program of the Boy Scouts of America. Councils thus organized and chartered shall be known and designated as councils of the first class.

Clause 2—Provisional Councils. Pending the organization as councils of the first class, the Field Department may in its discretion grant provisional or temporary charters to villages, towns or small cities. Such councils shall be known and designated as councils of the second class.

Clause 3—When Issued. All applications for charters shall be accompanied by a copy of the proposed constitution and by-laws and evidence showing that it will be for the best interests of the boys of the community and the Boy Scout Movement to have a chartered council as well as evidence showing that those who are making the application are in a position to perform the functions of the local council in a manner which would justify the issuance of a charter.

Clause 4—Renewals. All local council charters shall expire at the end of each calendar year and may be renewed upon application accompanied by reports or other evidence which may be requested by the Field Department, showing satisfactory effort to meet the responsibilities of a local council as herein provided.

Clause 5—Jurisdiction. Applications for local council charters shall be made on behalf of a town, city or county for which the charter is desired, and the authority and responsibility granted by the charter shall be confined to the territory as prescribed by such town, city or county, for the local government thereof.

In the case of county councils, however, no city which in the judgment of the Field Department has the population and resources to provide adequate leadership to conduct scout work as a council of the first class shall be included within the county organization, and the right shall be reserved to any other town or city within the county to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the county council, for the purpose of securing a charter as a council of the first class to supervise the work of such community.

Clause 6—Affiliation. Pending the organization of a county council, any village or town in the immediate neighborhood of a city chartered as a council of the first class, may upon application to the Field Department upon blanks provided for that purpose, arrange for affiliation with such council on a provisional basis. Applications for affiliation shall set forth in detail the advantages to the Scout Movement for favorable action thereon. Such affiliation, after investigation, may be authorized when deemed advisable and may continue from year to year with the right of either party to terminate the affiliation at the time of the renewal of the local council charter, or when a first class council has been organized and chartered to include the affiliated community.

The designation of troops in a territory affiliated with a council of the first class shall be known by the name of the community in which the troop is located. In case there are two or more troops in a community from which an application for affiliation is made, and the duly authorized representatives thereof do not agree as to the desirability of affiliation, the Field Department may exercise its discretion in passing upon the application. If affiliation is authorized, it shall be inclusive of all organized troops within that community.

Clause 7—Federation. A federation or interlocking organization of two or more councils shall be permitted only when, as in the case of Greater New York, it is found desirable to charter one or more councils within a municipality or within a county or other thickly populated area, provided, however, such federation comes within the controlling organization policy of the Boy Scouts of America as set forth in Article XI of the Constitution, limiting the area for which a charter may be granted. In such cases where a federation is permitted, there shall be a governing body of such federation made up of delegates from each of the chartered councils for the purpose of securing uniform action on questions of finances and questions of policy affecting the entire municipality or territory covered by the federation, and exercising such other powers as the constituent duly chartered councils shall, with the approval of the Executive Board of the National Council, confer upon it.

No state organizations shall be permitted, nor shall any other district organizations be permitted except as herein provided.

Clause 8—Representation. The membership of all local councils shall include representation from organized troops as provided for in Clause 6 of Section 1 of this article, together with representatives of the various religious, civic, educational and business interests of the community. All applications for charters shall be made on behalf of the community.

No state organization shall be permitted, nor shall any other district organizations be permitted except as herein provided.

Clause 9—Membership. Only male citizens of the United States or those who have legally declared their intentions of becoming citizens of the United States and are twenty-one years of age or over and who agree to promote the scout program as prescribed by the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America, shall be eligible to membership in local councils. They shall be entitled to wear the scout uniform and insignia, provided for members of local councils, and may, upon application, receive certificates of membership.

Clause 10. Duties of Local Councils. It shall be the duty of chartered councils to provide leadership and supervision of all scout activities within the territory covered by their charters, in such a manner as to insure compliance with the provisions of the Constitution and By-Laws of the National Council and the regulations thereof as set forth in the official Handbooks, or as may be announced in the official bulletin, Scouting, or otherwise, from time to time.

Local councils shall be specifically charged with the responsibility to guard against the use of the scout uniform or insignia by boys or men not officially registered with the National Council, and to bring to the attention of the National Council any violation of regulations not within their power to prevent, or any attempt to commercialize the Boy Scout Movement.

They shall through their Scout Executive or other representative make the benefits of the scout program known to all agencies or institutions having a contact with boy life and cooperate in the organization of troops, so that boys over 12 years of age may have the benefit of the scout program.

They shall provide means for securing and training men to serve as scoutmasters and assistants and endeavor to provide facilities and leadership in order that boys under their jurisdiction may have an opportunity to spend one or more weeks in camp in accordance with the prescribed standards for scout camps.

They shall provide courts of honor in order that boys may meet the requirements in the various scout tests as prescribed in the official handbook, under such conditions as will reduce to a minimum the necessity of a boy's traveling a great distance from his home or of interfering with his school work or home duties.

They shall render annual reports to the National Council on blanks prescribed for that purpose, supplementing the same with such information as may be of interest or help to others engaged in scout work.

Clause 11—Contributions. Each local council shall be given an opportunity annually to contribute to the financial support of the National Council and provide for the further extension of the scout program throughout the country.

Section 3—Regional Organization.

Clause 1—Regional Districts. In order to secure greater effectiveness in extending the Scout Movement and greater facility in supervision, the territory of the United States shall be divided into regions, the number of which shall be determined by the Committee on Organization and Field Work. Regional boundaries shall follow state lines.

Clause 2—Regional Committees. The work of extension and supervision shall be carried on in each region by a Regional Committee, the membership of which shall include the regularly elected delegates to the National Council of all local councils in the region, and such other residents of the region as may be elected annually by the Regional Committee, provided, however, that this latter group shall at no time constitute a majority of the entire membership of the Regional Committee.

Members of a Regional Committee shall, for the term of their service on this committee, be also members of the National Council.

Clause 3—Officers. One member of each Regional Committee shall be elected chairman, who shall become, ex-officio, a member of the National Committee on Organization and Field Work. The Regional Scout Executive shall serve as Secretary of the Regional Committee and of its Executive Committee.

Clause 4—Executive Committee. Each Regional Committee shall elect annually from its membership an Executive Committee which shall meet at such times and places as the chairman may direct, and shall exercise the authority and responsibility of the Regional Committee in the interval between its meetings.

Clause 5—Meetings. Regional Committee shall meet at least twice a year, and at such other times and at such places as their respective Chairman may direct.

Clause 6—Duties. The functions of Regional Committees shall be in general, promotional, advisory, and co-operative in carrying out the policies and program as outlined by the National Council. Their duties shall include:

1. The study of conditions in the region as they affect boys and their needs.
2. The development of methods for meeting those conditions.
3. The development of plans for organizing the unorganized territory.
4. The equitable distribution and collection of the National quota.
5. The development of regional sub-committees on camping, education, etc.

6. Dealing with inter-council relations as they may rise within the region.
7. Inter-council visitation.
8. Special duties specifically assigned by National Council.

ARTICLE XII—LEADERSHIP

Section 1—In accordance with Article XII of the constitution, the National Council may issue commissions to men to serve as scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, scout commissioners, deputy scout commissioners, assistant deputy scout commissioners, scout executives, assistant scout executives, field scout executives, regional scout executives, assistant regional scout executives and special national field scout commissioners. The above officials with the exception of the assistant scoutmaster, must be at least 21 years of age.

Section 2—Scoutmasters. The success of the boy scout program is dependent upon the scoutmaster. His conception of the rules, spirit and purpose of scouting and the quality of his leadership control the possibilities for practical results in the work of the boys. For this reason, the greatest care should be exercised by all concerned in recommending men for such commissions. A scoutmaster shall be at least twenty-one years of age and shall be chosen because of good moral character and his interest in work for boys. He need not be an expert in all of the scout activities but should be able to command the respect of boys in the management of his troop. He should attend all meetings and outings of the troop, delegate as much of his duties as possible to assistants and patrol leaders and make use of different experts in the various activities included in the scouting program. He, with the troop committee, is responsible for the general program and supervision of the work of the troop. All recommendations for commissions for men to serve as scoutmasters shall originate with the troop committee and be submitted on blanks provided for that purpose. In communities supervised by local councils, the recommendation of the troop committee shall be approved by the local council.

Section 3—Assistant Scoutmaster. Each troop should have one or more assistant scoutmasters. Assistant scoutmasters shall be at least eighteen years of age and may be selected and promoted because of their experience as members in a troop and efficiency in Scouting. An assistant scoutmaster performs such duties as may be assigned by the scoutmaster.

All recommendations for commissions as assistant scoutmasters originate with the troop committee and require the approval of the local council if there be such, having jurisdiction of the troop for which the scoutmaster is commissioner.

Section 4—Scout Commissioners. The scout commissioner is the ranking commissioned official in Scouting of the community. He receives his commission from the National Council upon the nomination of the local council; he serves without compensation in the same manner as a scoutmaster. The duties vary according to the size of the community, local conditions, and leadership available. In larger communities, where the detail work requires systematic and regular attention beyond what is reasonably to be expected of a volunteer worker, a scout executive is employed and commissioned by the National Council.

In such a case the local council, by a resolution, definitely fixes the responsibility of the scout commissioner and the scout executive in order to prevent conflict of authority and make clear the responsibility of the Scout Executive to the Executive Board of the local council in all matters excepting those specifically assigned to the Scout Commissioner. In many communities the position of the Scout Commissioner is honorary.

Section 5—Deputy Scout Commissioners. Commissions may be issued to men twenty-one years of age and over to serve as deputy scout commissioners. Their duties vary according to local conditions and the leadership available, and should be specifically fixed in each instance by resolution of the local council. When a scout executive is employed, pending the development of conditions warranting the employment of field executives, the voluntary services of deputy scout commissioners may be continued, subject, however, to the supervision and direction of the scout executive.

Section 6—Assistant Deputy Scout Commissioners. In large communities where Deputy Scout Commissioners are assigned to special districts, commissions may be issued upon the recommendation of the local council to men to serve as assistant deputy scout commissioners. In such cases their duties shall be assigned by the Deputy Scout Commissioner, with the approval of the local council.

Section 7—Scout Executive. Commissions as Scout Executives will be granted to men employed by local councils to serve as Executive Officers. The Scout Executive serves as secretary of the local council, its Executive Board and the various committees thereof. He works under the direction of the Executive Board and has general direction and supervision of scout activities within the jurisdiction of the council. As provided for in Section 4 of this article relating to Scout Commissioners, the duties of the Scout Executive are definitely fixed by resolution of the Executive Board of the local council.

Section 8—Assistant and Field Scout Executive. Commissions may be issued to men employed as Assistant Scout Executives. Whenever such assistants are assigned special districts, they shall be designated and commissioned as Field Scout Executives. Their duties shall be as defined by the Scout Executive with the approval of the Executive Board of the local council.

Section 9—Regional Scout Executives. As provided for in Clause one, Section four of Article five, men employed to work in the Field Department shall be designated and commissioned as National Field Scout Executives or Assistant National Field Scout Executives.

Section 10—Special National Field Scout Commissioners. The Field Department may avail itself of the services of men, who by reason of their professions or the positions they hold, may be able to cooperate in the extension of the Boy Scout program. Such men may receive commissions as Special National Field Scout Commissioners.

ARTICLE XIII—DUES

Section 1—Each troop of Boy Scouts shall pay to the National Council annually, through the local council, if there be one, a registration fee of $4.00, with an additional fee of 50 cents for each member enrolled in excess of eight either as active or associate scouts. When additional names of new members are added to the troop, they may be registered on the following basis: if the unexpired period for which the troop is registered is more than nine months, the fee of the new scouts shall be 50 cents each; if the period is more than six and less than ten months, the fee shall be 40 cents; if for a period of six months or less, 30 cents. Scouts reregistering pay the full fee of 50 cents irrespective of the date of payment.

Section 2—

Clause 1—Annual registration fees of local councils to the National Council shall be as follows: For all councils covering a jurisdiction with a population of 25,000 or under $25.00; over 25,000 and under 100,000, $50.00; over 100,000 and under 400,000, $75.00; over 400,000, $100.00.

This registration fee entitled the local council, upon compliance with these By-Laws and the rules and regulations of the National Council, to a charter renewable annually on December 31st of the current year.

Clause 2—Each chartered council shall annually be given an opportunity to make a volunteer contribution for the expenses of the National Council and the further extension of the Scout Program.

Section 3—Delegates elected to the National Council as representing local councils. Members at Large and Honorary Members of the National Council shall pay no membership fees.

Section 4—Scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, commissioners and other commissioned officers who give volunteer services for the promotion of the scout program shall not be required to pay any fee but in each case shall be given an opportunity to make a volunteer contribution toward the expenses of the National Council and for the further extension of the boy scout program. This shall also apply to troop committee men and local and national council members.

ARTICLE XIV—NATIONAL COURT OF HONOR

Section 1—The National Court of Honor shall consist of citizens of the United States of sterling personal character and notable achievement in those lines of activity which are represented by the various merit badges awarded by the Boy Scouts of America, whose accomplishments will serve to inspire proper motives and ambition in the Boy Scouts.

Section 2—Members of the National Court of Honor shall be known as counsellors and shall be elected annually by the National Council, provided, however, that no one shall be elected without reference to his nomination to the regular nominating committee or a special committee which may be appointed for that purpose. Insofar as practicable the National Court of Honor shall include at least one person of exceptional ability or accomplishment in each subject and activity for which merit badges are awarded.

Section 3—The members of the National Court of Honor shall serve as advisors to the Executive Board in matters pertaining to the merit badges and honor medals of the Boy Scouts of America.

Section 4—The Chairman of the National Court of Honor shall be known as the National Scout Commissioner: He shall be appointed annually by the National Council who shall also elect seven or more members to serve with him as an Executive Committee of the National Court of Honor, for the purpose of considering, in a formal meeting or otherwise, claims for honor medals.

Section 5—A gold medal may be awarded to a registered scout or commissioned officer where the evidence presented to the National Court of Honor, in accordance with prescribed regulations, shows actual saving of life under circumstances which involve a risk of his own life, and the display of unusual bravery and heroism as well as the practical results of a Scout training and heroism beyond the mere performance of a duty. It shall be wholly within the discretion of the Executive Committee of the National Court of Honor to determine from the evidence presented whether a gold medal shall be awarded, according to the actual risk of life involved and heroism shown; and when in their judgment the evidence does not merit the award of a medal, a letter of commendation may be issued in the name of the Boy Scouts of America.

In no case, however, shall a medal be awarded where it appears that the risk involved, was merely in the performance of duty or the meeting of an obligation because of responsibility to supervise and give leadership to the person whose life was saved.

All cases involving the consideration of the award of an honor medal shall be presented to the National Court of Honor on prescribed blanks and it shall be within the discretion of the Executive Committee of the National Court of Honor to require further evidence or personal investigation and report before reaching a decision.

Section 6—The National Scout Executive shall be secretary of the National Court of Honor and of its Executive Committee, and shall be responsible for arranging all meetings, for issuance of certificates, and for keeping all records.

Section 7—The Executive Committee of the National Court of Honor designated to pass upon claims for honor medals shall meet quarterly. Other meetings may be called when the applications for consideration make it desirable.

Section 8—Three members of the Executive Committee shall constitute a quorum, but when a gold medal is to be awarded each member of the Executive Committee shall be given an opportunity to be heard either in person or by letter as to the advisability of the award.

ARTICLE XV—EXAMINATIONS

Section 1—Examinations.

Examinations for all scout tests shall be given under conditions and leadership which harmonize with the aims and purposes of the Boy Scout Movement and its appeal to boys, irrespective of creed or religious beliefs, and which take into consideration the twelfth scout law, requiring a scout to respect the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion.

Effort should be made to reduce to a minimum the necessity for requiring a boy to travel long distances from home or to interfere with his school work or home duties. To this end, examinations should be held at the place of meeting of the troop or in the neighborhood.

Section 2—Tenderfoot Tests. Tenderfoot tests are to be given by the scoutmaster of the troop in all communities whether there is a local council or not. This does not, however, relieve the local council of responsibility of maintaining standards.

Section 3—Second Class Tests. In communities where there are local councils, second class tests should, wherever practicable, be given by the Scout Executive or by the Scout Commissioner or by a duly registered deputy commissioner designated by either for that purpose.

Where there is no local council, the test should be given under the direction or in the presence of one or more members of the troop committee.

Section 4—First Class Tests. In communities where there is a local council, the first class test, whenever practicable, should be conducted by the Court of Honor or under the personal supervision of the Scout Executive or the Scout Commissioner or a duly registered deputy scout commissioner designated by either for that purpose.

Where there is no local council, the test should be given under the direction or in the presence of one or more members of the troop committee, or by a special committee representing the Court of Honor, which has been selected to conduct examinations for merit badges.

Section 5—Merit Badge Examinations. Examination for merit badge should be given by the Court of Honor of the Local Council and in larger communities by the district court of honor, organized so as to reduce to a minimum the necessity of the boy traveling long distances. In no case shall a merit badge be awarded unless the scout has personally appeared before at least three members of the Court of Honor, and either by examination conducted personally by the Court of Honor or upon evidence furnished by a duly appointed expert examiner demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Court of Honor that the handbook requirements have been complied with in a satisfactory manner.

Section 6—In all examinations, it should be borne in mind that the purpose of the tests and examinations is not to secure a mere technical compliance with requirements, but rather to ascertain the scout's general knowledge of subjects studied, and practical rather than book knowledge is desired. A scout should be prepared at any examination for a review covering previous tests given him as well as to demonstrate that he knows the scout oath and laws and is being guided thereby.

Section 7—Educational and similar institutions and camps may, upon application to the National Council, be authorized to give the prescribed tests and pass scouts in second class and first class degrees and in merit badge subjects and award the appropriate badges within a less period of time than as specified in Article VI of the By-Laws and under different conditions than as specified in this Article, if satisfactory to the National Court of Honor.

ARTICLE XVI—GENERAL REGULATIONS

Section 1—Commercialism:

Clause 1—No member of the Boy Scouts of America, troop of scouts, chartered council, or any officer or representative of the Boy Scouts of America shall have the right to enter into a contract or relationship of a commercial character involving the Boy Scouts of America unless duly authorized by the Executive Board and then only in connection with the carrying out of the purposes of the Boy Scout Movement. Nor shall any local council, troop of scouts, or group of boys enter into a contract or business relationship with a business or commercial agency or corporation, or individual which may be construed as using the Boy Scout Movement for commercial purposes. This is not to be interpreted, however, as interfering with any scout earning money for his own scout equipment or for his troop.

Clause 2—In the case of any gift, donation or dedication to the Boy Scouts of America, the Executive Board shall determine whether the same shall be accepted; and then it shall be made clear that the acceptance shall be upon the condition that no attempt will be made to capitalize such gift, donation or dedication in a way which might be construed as commercializing the Boy Scouts of America or securing a profit through the popularity of the Boy Scouts of America by reason of such gift, donation, etc.

Section 2—Soliciting Funds and Tag Days.

Clause 1—Boy Scouts, collectively or individually, shall not be used in the solicitation of money or the sale of tags, or other similar methods of solicitation of money in connection with efforts to raise money incidental to the expenses of Scouting.

Clause 2—Arrangements may be made by the ranking local authorities for scouts to cooperate with well established non-partisan and non-sectarian national movements for the relief of humanity, in undertakings which they may promote to raise money, by giving personal service, provided, however, that this shall not involve the use of the Boy Scouts as solicitors of money.

Section 3—Participation in Public Functions. The officers and leaders of the Boy Scouts of America shall when practicable, cooperate in connection with civic or other public gatherings of a non-partisan and non-political character in a way which gives scouts an opportunity to render service in harmony with their training as scouts, instead of merely taking part in parades or making a show of themselves in their uniforms.

Section 4—Scout Bands.

Clause 1—Boy Scout bands and fife and drum corps may be organized among members of the Boy Scouts of America, and provided with suitable insignia indicating this special membership, provided, however, that the purpose of such organization shall be primarily and distinctively for the development of the boy along lines in harmony with the aims and object of the Boy Scout Movement, and that the members thereof also carry out the regular boy scout program.

Clause 2—Under no circumstances shall a fife and drum corps or band made up of Boy Scouts of America enter into a contract as members of the Boy Scouts of America for the sale of their services in competition with any other bands of their own or any other community.

Section 5—Anniversary Week. Anniversary Week shall take place annually during the month of February so as to include February 8th, the date of the original incorporation of the Boy Scouts of America and to continue through February 12th, Lincoln's birthday.

The National Council through its various officers and with the cooperation of scout officials throughout the country shall arrange for a nation-wide celebration during Anniversary Week, for the purpose of bringing more definitely to the attention of each community, the value of Scouting as a program for work with boys, for the development of character and training for citizenship.

The program for Anniversary Week shall include a plan whereby every registered scout in good standing shall be given an opportunity to assemble on the evening of Anniversary Day, that is, February 8th, and promptly at 8:15 recommit himself to the Scout Oath and Law.

On this occasion it shall be the duty of the scoutmaster and other leaders to bring to the attention of the scouts the extent of the Scout Brotherhood in our own country and throughout the world, and impress upon their minds the fact that every boy scout the world over is committed to the same obligation and does a "good turn daily."

ARTICLE XVII—OFFICE

The principal office of the Boy Scouts of America shall be in the City of New York, County and State of New York, and shall be known as the National Council Headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America.

ARTICLE XVIII—THE SEAL

The seal of the corporation shall be in the form of a circle enclosing a first class badge with the motto "Be Prepared" underneath this badge and the words "Boy Scouts of America, National Council, New York City" around the circle, and shall be used only as authorized.

ARTICLE XIX—AMENDMENTS

These By-Laws may be amended at any meeting of the Executive Board, upon the recommendation of the subcommittee of the Executive Board, or when the proposed amendment has been submitted to the members of the Executive Board at least 15 days in advance of the meeting.

All changes in the By-Laws, when made, shall be announced to the field through the next issue of Scouting, the official bulletin of the movement.

AN EXAMPLE OF A WEEK-END TRAINING CAMP (HELD IN 1914)

This series of week-end camps is being held, partly to encourage Scoutmasters in running their Troops on the Patrol system, partly to enable them to exchange ideas, and therefore to put new life into their Troops, but chiefly to establish study Patrols, as suggested by the Chief Scout. It will be noticed that each camp is based on some part of Scouting for Boys, and also on one of the articles by the Chief for training Scoutmasters.

Dates.

The dates for the Camp will be—

May 16th and 17th.
 July 11th and 12th.

June 27th and 28th.
 July 18th and 19th.

Duration.

Camp will be open at 2 p. m. on Saturday and be struck at 10 a. m. on Monday.

Patrols will be able to leave on Sunday night, if desirable.

Routine.

On Saturday afternoon there will be practical work, and in the evening there will be practical work followed by a Camp-fire yarn.

On Sunday morning there will be a flag-post parade and service. On Sunday afternoon there will be addresses on the Saturday's work—treating rather of the moral aspect—followed by practical displays on those points on which Scoutmasters have asked questions the previous night. On Sunday night there will be an open discussion on Scouting.

Addresses.

- 1st Sunday, "Character training."
- 2nd Sunday, "Employment."
- 3rd Sunday, "The body."
- 4th Sunday, "Training the boys."

Admission.

Associations may send Patrols of five. As the Camp will be run entirely on the Patrol system, single Scoutmasters cannot be accepted. It is immaterial whether these Patrols or circles consist of Scoutmasters, Assistant Scoutmasters, Instructors, or potential Officers.

Associations may send as many Patrols as they wish.

Applications to attend must be sent to the London Office, through Association Secretaries.

GENERAL NOTES

Place.

This will be announced later, when it is more certain that the Scheme will be supported. It will be somewhere in or near London.

Speakers, Etc.

Each week-end will be run by a different man, as no one man is both competent and available to teach all the proposed subjects. The speakers will not be announced until I know the amount of support I may expect.

Smoking.

No smoking will be allowed in Camp, except round the Camp-fire at night. Scouting for Boys pp. 193, 194.

Drinks.

No drinks will be allowed in Camp, except such as are made by the Patrols in Camp. Scouting for Boys, pp. 195, 196.

Orders.

All orders, as far as possible, will be given by whistle signals. Scouting for Boys, p. 82.

Bugles will not be used.

References.

Before attending, every Scoutmaster should read up for—

SERVICE FOR OTHERS.

The attributes which we have so far been studying in this course of training, as tending to make our boys into mainly healthy, happy working citizens, are, to a great extent, selfish ones designed for the good of the individual. We now come to the fourth quality, and that is where, by developing his outlook, he gives out good to others. Here is a summary of the steps by which Scouting helps to attain this object.

Qualities to be developed	Attributes which they include	Scouting practices by which they are inculcated
Reverence	Loyalty to God. Respect for others. Duty to neighbour.	Personal Example. Nature study. Good turns. "Missioner's Work." "Scout's Own."
Unselfishness.	Chivalry. Kindliness. Self-sacrifice. Patriotism. Loyalty. Justice.	Good turns. Friend to animals. First-Aid. Life-saving. Fair-play. Games. Pathfinders. Marksmanship. Debating societies. Mock trials. Court of Honour. Old Scouts kept in touch with the Scout Law and ideals.

Re-prints from "The Scout Executive"*THE JOB OF THE EXECUTIVE

1. It is not dealing directly with the boys. The Scout Executive is not a leader of boys but a leader of leaders of boys. He is not a troop leader but a troop committee leader. His contact with boys is through leaders.
2. It is not carrying the entire responsibility of the council but rather seeing to it that the members of the council carry their responsibility.
3. It is not passing criticism upon the indolence or failure of the volunteer workers but on the other hand it is the task of enthusing, inspiring, encouraging, and educating them to do their best. Their failure to do well is not primarily their failure but the failure of the Scout Executive to give statesmanlike leadership to them.

In addition the job of the Executive is:

4. To represent the Scout movement in the community in which he is located.
  - To interpret the Scouting program.
  - To safeguard its tested and accepted principles and methods.
  - To sustain friendly and co-operative relations to other agencies working for or with boys.
  - To carefully study the needs of boys in his community and to present the facts in careful, sane, and discriminating fashion.
  - To cultivate helpful relations to all institutions in the community, such as the churches, the schools, the industries.
  - To sustain an advisory relation to such community enterprises as Chambers of Commerce, Municipal Boards, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs. Such relations may be both direct or indirect. In the latter he would work through members of his council.

5. To be a friendly interpreter, exponent, and supporter of the plans and policies of the National Council and of its program.
6. To submit annually a comprehensive program to the Local Council and when the program is adopted faithfully carry it out through the committees of the council and not attempt to do it alone.
7. To assemble the council at least quarterly and the Executive Board at least monthly and have important things for them to discuss when they do meet. Meetings will have an agenda and data will be assembled bearing upon the subjects brought up for discussion.
8. To prepare an adequate budget in co-operation with the finance committee and then stick to it and live within it.
9. To have a careful and accurate system for keeping records permanently.
10. To deal with all business matters with despatch and courtesy.
To be master of details and not be mastered by them.
11. To discover, recruit, and train leaders and workers, a supreme function.
12. To be fair and frank and friendly to his associates.
13. To conduct the affairs of Scouting with reasonable economy and always open to public scrutiny.
14. To be neat in person and dress, clean in speech, unimpeachable in habits. Avoid glamor, the spectacular, and the superficial, and constantly display that dignity in manner and humility in spirit as becomes one who dares represent to the community its most precious human asset.

Some job. It's big, worthwhile, happy, satisfying to the man who puts himself and all that is best in him into the task.

It is not a job. It is a profession.

It is not a position. It is a vocation.

QUALIFICATIONS OF THE SCOUT EXECUTIVE

What are the qualifications we should reasonably expect in an executive and which are requisite to the highest success in his calling or vocation?

- 1st. Character. This is the fundamental requirement. If a man fails at this point he fails at every other. The scout executive must be a man of unquestioned motives, of high ideals, of noble impulses. His life must ring true. His heart must be pure; his will strong. No man weak in character can stand before boys or think of being their champion. Goodness is the first essential. He must be a man whom men respect, whom parents trust, whom boys follow.
- 2nd. Executive Ability. Simply goodness without force will not avail. He must know how to plan and after planning know how to execute. No amount of good intentions will make up for failures in administration. He must be prompt, business-like, and thorough in prosecuting the tasks of his office. He must function.
- 3rd. Personality. He must be neat in appearance. Careful, though not modish, in dress. He must be tactful, courteous, gentlemanly, open-minded, and whole-souled. He must be steady, not excitable, with the suggestion of reserve force. He must not take himself too seriously and on the other hand he must not lack definiteness. He must be free from peculiar mannerisms. He must possess good health; have a good physique. He should represent in his person the ideals of the Scout Movement.
- 4th. Technical Ability. We place this qualification fourth. Some might suggest that it come first. Not so. Character, ability to execute, and personality are more important.

He can secure technical knowledge through application and training but no amount of training can give him the former. Technical knowledge of Scouting though fourth in importance is essential. The executive should be skilled in Scouting. He must know the program, be possessed by its ideals, enthusiastic in its objectives, and expert in its details. He can then judge the work of his scoutmasters and others righteously, lead them to higher achievement soundly, and recognize merit justly. He will then be able to protect the Scout Program from deviation, recognize spurious substitutes and eliminate them, and direct the movement on safe and sane lines. He will thus be able to teach Scouting consistently.

- 5th. Education. All other things being equal a scout executive should be well educated. We should insist in securing recruits that they have as a minimum, a high school education. Preferably, he should be a college graduate, or have its equivalent. The broader his training the more permanent will be his identification with the Scout Movement, the wider will be his influence with men, the safer his counsel with boys, the larger his earning capacity. This is true in all professions. It will prove equally true of the scout executive. This profession must not lag behind the other professions in a knowledge of humanics or social welfare, in scholarship, in intellectual quality, or in culture.
- 6th. Business Ability. The affairs of the council must have business-like attention. Records must be carefully kept and classified. The functions of the several committees systematized. Budgets must be scientifically arranged, scrutinized, and definitized. The affairs of the council must be operated within the budgets. Plans must be worked out in detail and bear the investigation of business scrutiny. The operations of the council must be sound, attention to all correspondence prompt, and bills paid with despatch. The council must rank with the best business concerns in the community in efficiency and in business integrity.

- 7th. Social Vision. The scout executive must be community-minded. He must recognize the limitations of Scouting as well as its merits. He must co-operate with other agencies in the community. All reputable organizations which are at work with boys should have his sympathy and help. They should be considered his allies and never his competitors. He must see the community as a whole and constantly study the forces of the community as they bear upon boys life. He must in the very nature of his work be the ardent supporter of church and home and school. He must be constructive in his criticisms and loyal in his support of them. He must be tolerant in his religious views, sensitive of their needs and aspirations, and co-operative in his relations to them. He must ever work for the integrity of the community.

THE EXECUTIVE AND SALESMANSHIP

In these days we frequently use the expression "Selling Scouting." It isn't a good word in some respects. It sounds too commercial. But in a secular age like ours it has a distinctive meaning. It suggests getting people or institutions to really take your commodity, the thing you have to offer, which in this instance is "Scouting." In this respect the Scout Executive is a salesman. He seeks to have institutions organize troops.

Now the best way to organize troops is to "sell" the idea to institutions and the best way to sell the idea is to send a salesman to the institution who will meet the members of the directing board of the institution—whether it be a church or a school or other agency—face to face. He must sell the theory of Scouting, he must show how it works, he must tell what it costs in leadership, in money, in service. Then there will be an intelligent knowledge of what Scouting is, and too what it is not and where responsibility for its management finally rests.

Now, Scouting of this sort cannot be sold from a desk, from a central office alone. The salesman must go where his potential customers are. He must be a "go-getter." He must face his constituency. He must plead his cause with them direct.

What tendency is there for executives to be correspondence salesmen, to work by the indirect method of circularization, to utilize the mail order plan? How does an executive put in his time who has less than a dozen troops? Can an executive without becoming a super scoutmaster—really keep busy with less than 25 troops? Judged by the measurements of an efficient salesman, how many troops per executive ought there be? If the 400 executives each added one troop per week net, more than 20,000 troops would be added to the Scout Movement in a single year which is more than double the present troop enrollment. What is troop salesmanship? If they sold but one troop per month net and these troops averaged 25 boys there would be added 100,000 scouts in a year. Which yields the larger results selling troops from a desk remotely or selling them across a table directly?

THE CULTURE OF THE SCOUT EXECUTIVE

May, 1920

The Executive must be a student; a student of his times, of his work, and of the world in which he lives. He must grow or go. He must read or go to seed. What are some things which will contribute to his intellectual growth and development:

1. His Reading. He should read a good daily newspaper. The best his community affords. The one that has the best editorials and the most accurate reports. Then one of the weekly news digests will be helpful like the "Literary Digest" or "The Outlook." A good review of the best magazine articles should be consulted so as to be advised of the leading current articles. A good book review should likewise be consulted so that the best books will be called to his attention. He should have a personal budget for books so that he will not have to spare himself in the matter of purchasing books. A book a month if carefully selected would prove a liberal education. His reading however must not be confined to current news and literature. He should have a knowledge of the great books that have stood the test of time. The Harvard Classics will provide a splendid series. The best fiction will prove interesting and cultural. Biography is most stimulating to higher living. History is informative. Sometimes it is inspiring to get well acquainted with an author by reading all of his works. Then when his anniversary is observed or when articles or reviews appear regarding him an interest is taken in the discussion.

2. Study. It is well for the Executive to take up the special study of some subjects most basal to his work. Among these are biology, psychology, and sociology; also the study of Youth and Adolescence. Sometimes in addition to reading on these subjects the Executive may find it possible to take a short course in some subject at a college or university in his town. It is a wise plan occasionally for him to take up some one subject upon which he will specialize. It is highly stimulating and exceedingly worth while. Articles and manuscripts on business administration are very helpful and timely.

3. Conferences and Summer Schools. These are exceedingly helpful and broadening. They bring him in contact with present day emphases in his work. They serve also as a corrective and as a measuring rod which enables him to judge the merits of his own service. They help solve his problems. They enlarge his vision. They deepen his interest. They confirm him in his wise decisions. They hearten him in his profession. They develop fraternity and stimulate fellowship. He should attend a conference at least annually and a good training course at least biennially.

4. Research. A very good plan is to undertake a given task occasionally and develop it intensively for the purpose of becoming thoroughly informed concerning it. This cultivates the accurate mind, the studious habit, the progressive spirit.

In addition to the foregoing should be added carefully planned travel at home and abroad, study of music, good entertainment, the study of nature or some selected hobby, association with noble souls who think large thoughts, who love God, and are brothers to men.

Culture is not an accident. Intellectual ability is not a gift. The mind is subject to law. We grow intellectually and broaden mentally only as we plan, and struggle and apply ourselves to intellectual pursuits.

RELIGION—AND THE SCOUT EXECUTIVE

Leslie R. Mathews

Two Scout Executives were recently talking about a prominent local council official known to them both. One of them said, "I think he is afraid I will be too religious."

Isn't that a very significant statement? Are there not lots of Scout Officials, including some Scout Executives, who have felt just that way? In fact the writer, who has the honor to wear a Veteran Scout Badge, has until very recently had somewhat the same feeling in the matter. Perhaps, because he feels that there may be other Executives who are traveling the same road over which he has traveled and whose convictions might be strengthened, a word about his own experience might help.

Is there a profession anywhere where the possibilities for disheartenment are greater than that of a Scout Executive dealing, as he does, entirely with volunteer help? He is the dynamo that drives the whole machine; from him must come the energy,—the inspiration,—the ideals and the ideas for one of the largest volunteer organizations on earth today. Surely this is a responsibility to bear with pride. But just as surely his pride is riding for a fall if he is wholly sufficient unto himself for courage and help. There never was a machine made that worked perfectly all the time, and the machine we call Scouting, no matter how good it may be, will at some time or other “act up.” Sometimes this process occurs oftener than others and the Executive who stands wholly in his own strength will surely “go dry.” Else why do we see so many men who say they are “stale”?

Sometimes the responsibility of the position of Scout Executive is appalling. Here is your product—the boy. The Executive is alone responsible for that standard of Scouting which will, through all its ramifications, eventually work to turn out the very highest product possible. He cannot always carry this responsibility himself and there are phases of it that he cannot share with even the best and friendliest of his advisers.

The very first statement in the National Constitution is about God in the life of a boy,—Catholic, Protestant or Jew. In talking to Scoutmasters, I find myself making this statement with more whole-hearted earnestness and enthusiasm than any other statement I make—“Unless the Scoutmasters of this community have a real Spiritual background, they will not last.” Make a little survey of your Scoutmasters, and see if that statement goes very far wrong. Mind you, this does not mean that Scoutmasters should be little amateur preachers. Deliver us all from that type! They creep in in spite of our best efforts to keep them out. But no Scoutmaster can withstand the discouragements of Scouting; the routine and monotony of it and the disappointments of it, unless he feels that this plastic stuff, boyhood, has been placed in his hands so that he may work out the Great God’s purpose, a better world, “Thy kingdom come.”

Another thing about the boy, although we deal but seldom with the boys directly; don't forget, especially in smaller cities, that the boys know pretty well what the Scout Executive stands for. I have sometimes taken pride in making the statement that more boys know who I am than any other man in the city, unless it be the Superintendent of Schools. This undoubtedly is true of all Executives except in Metropolitan areas. Can we feel as proud to have them know what we are, as who we are?

Has it not been justly said that Scout Executives of today have (or take) so little time to think? We are so busy doing the spectacular, or "shooting trouble," or building up big numbers that we do not have a chance to come into contact with the eternal verities.

Two years ago I heard an Executive of a city many times larger than my own say that every morning, after reaching his office, he read his paper, a verse or two of good poetry, and a chapter from the New Testament. I secretly laughed at him then—I take my hat off to him now. He is a very modest fellow, and perhaps he was too embarrassed to say so, but I'll venture that he asked for help for that day also. We might all do better Scouting if we, with conviction, did likewise.

THE SCOUT EXECUTIVE IN COUNTY WORK

November, 1920

Charles Jones, Cumberland County, N. J.

The Scout Executive who takes up County Work will, like his city co-worker, begin with a survey of his field for agencies through which he may get Scouting across. The first thing that he must face is that several bodies which are powerful in the city do not exist in the small town or village where much of his work has to be done. The town of 500 has no Rotary, Kiwanis, Chamber of Commerce, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A., Boys' Club, Community House, etc. However, some groups are always present and to these we shall refer briefly.

The importance of the Churches in small towns is very great, but their problem is difficult and sometimes the pastor may not be in a position to take active part in Scouting. However, he is usually aware of the fact that, as a community worker, he cannot afford not to line up behind the movement and, if possible, identify it with his church and push it as a welfare work in his town. In our approach to the small church, we must not forget that we have much to offer. Our movement does hold boys and may be the means of renewing the life of a struggling church. In general, the county may best be reached as a whole through County Sunday School Conventions, Ministers' Associations, Denominational Conferences, traveling clergymen, etc. It is always advisable to study local conditions to avoid friction where there is keen rivalry. In many towns, we cannot identify ourselves with any one denomination. Always, we must emphasize the broad tolerance which is the basis of the Twelfth Law of Scouting.

The School in the country is not as powerful a friend as in the city. More and more the children are grouped in larger towns, and the country schools of the old days have been closed. Fewer and better are found today. This ought to make Scout Work easier. More boys are assembled, under better leaders and in bigger buildings. Dealing with the schools is easy. The County Superintendent is necessarily a trained man, familiar with boy psychology, in general, and our program, in particular. He should be on the County Council. Through him, the school boards and local principals can be reached.

Next to the School and Church come some less universal yet nationally known organizations. The Grange in some sections brings parents together, and, through them, the boys could be brought together. We need only mention the American Legion, with the comment that, the smaller the town, the bigger hero the service man is to the boys. By planning ahead a long time, the Chautauqua might be utilized. The Red Cross is undertaking a very extensive campaign of publicity, in combating disease, and has been most helpful in our community in furnishing posters for Troop rooms, First Aid literature, and slides of various sorts. A very helpful agency is the Public Library. Even in small villages, there are people who gather around a shelf of books, and, wherever people in groups read or listen, there is a chance for Scouting. In many states, the State Library Association will help a Scout Troop maintain a library of its own.

There are other national bodies that suggest themselves. We must, in some kinds of communities, even small ones, expect to find strong Labor Unions which can and will help us, if they see that we do not oppose them. Depending upon the locality, various fraternal organizations are especially friendly and powerful.

The County Executive must look carefully for purely local groups. The village volunteer fire department is sometimes a social club as well, with a live membership and community ideas. The local baseball team may keep its rooms open all winter as a clubhouse. The Friday Fishing Club, which started with a few friends years ago, is a very powerful ally in a certain town. The Camera Club is something more than a group of photographers. The Diamond Social Club does more than have a good time.

Use Newspapers

We have space for mention of but two more, both most important, the Woman's Club, under one name or another, and the local newspaper. Get the Military boggy properly laid away, and the mothers will endorse anything for the boys. I know of one Troop which is practically kept alive by the Woman's Club. As to the newspaper, to the small town, John Smith's new tractor is as important as Article X. Get news about local boys and events, and the editor will boost the Scout idea among people who rely on his words.

No argument is needed. The facts regarding our local and national work are sufficient to enlist the support of any group. The organizations which exist in counties are not Rocks of Gibraltar and, in approaching them, the Scout Executive should remember that he has something to offer as well as to request. The Scout Movement may very well be an important aid to any of the above mentioned groups. In the county where I am at present, there are more Scouts than students in any of the High Schools. With all due modesty, our relations with other organizations must not be too much tinged with doubt. We owe something to all community agencies, and we should line up with them in the spirit of entire friendliness in the effort to help our boys.

As to the outline of my own policy in Cumberland County, I feel that the details of routine would be out of place here. In general, I believe that each field may best be handled by a different method. In Cumberland County, with about 60,000 population, three larger centers and about 25 smaller ones, covering about 800 square miles, the general policy may be stated in two terms, Publicity and Personal Salesmanship.

We, in County Work, cannot expect to delegate to others much of the routine which is handled by committees in larger cities. Whether rightly or wrongly, the County Executive must do personal work in every town. The big job is to educate the people to the facts about Scouting in their own locality. To do this, in addition to weekly Bulletins and newspaper columns, I am undertaking a comprehensive campaign of talks before various groups. I have to do it myself, because the people do not want a delegated speaker. I expect to speak several times a week for several months.

I try to reserve the forenoons for office work and make scheduled visits to one town after another in the afternoons and evenings. I plan to spend a half day in each town in turn, to meet groups or individuals, as the Scoutmaster may prefer.

I visit the Troops as often as possible. Adult leadership and business management are fine, but the personal element must predominate in the Executive's work in the country.

To unite my Scoutleaders, I issue a weekly mimeographed letter. This includes not only the ordinary local and national news items, but a good deal of suggestion and instruction. The Scoutmasters, themselves, furnish much of my copy. I have, so far, been highly gratified by the enthusiasm aroused by this Bulletin, and have extended the mailing list to include about 200 adults. For the general public, I use newspaper columns and Bulletin Boards in the larger centers. On the latter, I place local items of news, local photographs, posters drawn by local Scouts, and some of my own overseas pictures of boys' work in France, Turkey, and North Africa.

I visit National Headquarters once each month, and I find that my Scoutmasters appreciate very much my offer to place their orders for supplies. It takes little time and is a help to them. I should advise the adoption of this idea by those Executives who are not too far from New York. For the others, visits to District Headquarters would be advantageous, if planned regularly.

As an inevitable reaction to the unanimous convictions of the men who were at the Bear Mountain Executives' Conference, I feel, more than ever, that our job, materially and ideally, depends on the men who lead our Troops. They need the highest efficiency that we can achieve in office management, records, correspondence, advice if we can give it, and service of any sort, but they deserve something more than cold-blooded, machine-like accuracy of detail. They need friendship and appreciation. They need to be liked, and they are worth it. I am glad to find my best hours of recreation duck hunting down the bay with Bill, or fishing with Jim. We practise the out-door life that we preach, and like each other better for the day together.

Summing up, I believe that Personal Salesmanship, enthusiastic belief in the aims of the movement, consistent broadness of view, especially in matters of politics and creed, and friendliness are the keynotes of my policy in this county.

THE EXECUTIVE AND THE SCOUTMASTER

The Scoutmaster is the hub about which the organic life of Scouting revolves. He is the supreme volunteer leader. He is the most important factor in the Scout Program. As go the Scoutmasters so goes Scouting. Given a sufficient number of wise, faithful scoutmasters, and there is no problem regarding the number of scouts that can be reached. The scouts are always available. Not so the scoutmasters.

Now the greatest need of the American boy is for wise, male, adult leadership. It is the genius of Scouting through the scoutmastership to supply this need. Therefore the supreme test of an Executive is his ability to recruit, inspire, maintain, and train high grade upstanding scoutmasters. Scouting needs the biggest, the best, the manliest type of men that can be secured.

Are the best methods being used to secure such men, men of the type who will dignify the movement, who will give the best leadership to the boys, who will have capacity to provide citizenship training and character development? Many men of parts are willing to take a troop of boys provided the requirements and demands for the service are not too great, are not unreasonable.

This raises a few very pertinent questions. Are we asking too much of scoutmasters? Are we arranging too many appointments for them? Are we calling too many meetings? What, with scoutmasters' associations, special meetings, numerous and lengthy training courses, are we securing, because of the demands upon them the type of men we should have or the type who can or are willing to give the time? Are we providing the right kind of training? Is it becoming heavy, redundant, complex? Do we need, for the purpose of the scoutmaster, to build up courses of study on child psychology, the nervous system of the child, and the like, which may serve to frighten off busy men, who after all, want inspiration, indoctrination in the ideals and principles of scouting, and definite, simple, practical, and utilizable activities which they can immediately transmit to the boys. Great care should be exercised lest a complex machine be set up which may retard the very thing we are endeavoring to do, namely, the securing of the biggest, best, and brainiest men of the community.

Furthermore, it should be ever kept in mind that the scoutmaster is the boys' man. His functions are those which deal with the troop. He is not an administrative officer. He should not be concerned with membership on the council. These in the light of his supreme office—service to the boys—are minor matters. He should stick to his last. He should be a man single in aim, concentrated in his service, for the task required of him will take all that he has in him and is worthy of his undivided attention.
