HE country of Moray was one of the latest conquests by the kings of Albany, and long after its nominal annexation to the Scottish kingdom it was the theatre of revolts and many risings of the old inhabitants.

Of its ecclesiastical history during this period we have few memorials. Doubtless there were within its bounds monastic establishments of the Columban type, similar to the monasteries of Mortlach and Deer, in the neighbouring district, to the latter of which Malcolm, the Mormaer of Moray, made a grant of lands. We may infer that one of these had been placed at Kinneddar, near the coast, where St. Gernadius established his hermitage; but we have fewer vestiges of the Celtic Church in this district than in the country of the Southern Picts.

It formed part of the civilising policy of David I. to carry the blessings of religion into the districts which his arms had vanquished; and it was thus that he was led to found a monastery at Kinloss, and establish in it a colony of his favourite Cistercians from Melrose, in the year 1150.

If we may credit the legendary history preserved by Ferreriis, the king was led to erect the monastery by motives such as are popularly believed to have led him to found the Abbey of Holyrood. It is said that while he was engaged in the chase in the country near Forres, he lost his way in a thick wood, but, under the guidance of a white dove (vouchsafed in answer to his prayers), he was led to an open spot, where he found two shepherds tending their flocks. By them the king was hospitably entertained; and being warned in a dream that he should there erect a chapel to the blessed Virgin, by whose ready aid he had been preserved, he resolved at once to obey the vision, and, with his sword, he proceeded to mark out on the green sward the outline of the building which he meant to erect.

Having been rejoined by his nobles, the king then proceeded with them to the Castle of Duffus, in the neighbourhood, and announcing to them his vision and consequent vow, he collected the architects and masons engaged on royal works in various places, in order that the foundation of Kinloss might forthwith be undertaken. To secure the uninterrupted progress of the work the king remained at Duffus during the summer, and when he was called away by other affairs he procured from Melrose a monk, to whom he committed the charge of the rising monastery, and who was afterwards made the first abbot.

This foundation is said to have been made on 20th June 1151,¹ or, according to other authorities, in the previous year;¹ and although the deed has not been preserved, we find that the royal endowment was confirmed to Reinerius, the second abbot, by a bull of Pope Alexander III., in 1174.²

From the later charters of confirmation, where the benefactions of the pious David are recited, they appear to have comprised the lands of Kynlos and Inverlochty, and “the land which the king himself perambulated as the brook falls into Massat, and as the marsh goes down to the wood; as also the land on which the Scotch mill stood, with the fishings, and the land of Eth, as they were possessed by Twethel, and a net in the water of Eren, and the wood of Inehdamin, according to the marches fixed by the king himself in person, and the Bishop of Caithness and others.” His grandson, Malcolm, added the site of a mill on Massat, with the adjoining “landella” of two acres, with a ploughgate of land in the “landella” Burgin or Burgy. From William the Lion the monks received a grant of the barony of Strathisla, in Banffshire, a territory stretching from the Knock Hill to the Balloch; “the lands of Burgie, which lay on the north side of the king’s highway leading from Forres towards Elgin, and adjoined their lands of Kinloss, and the lands of Invereren, which were perambulated also by the Bishop of Aberdeen, Earl Duncan, and others; and the lands of the ‘prepositura’ of Invereren, and a toft in Eren.”³

³ Idem, pp. 4, 5, 7.

From the same king they had grants of tofts in his burghs of Inverness, Nairn, Forres, Elgin, and Aberdeen.¹

From William, Bishop of Murray, they got the church lands of Burgie.²

They had also tofts in Berwick, Stirling, Perth, and Montrose.

King Alexander II. conferred on them the lands of Burgie, which were perambulated by Malcolm, Earl of Fife, and others, and according to a boundary which will form the subject of subsequent remarks.³

From Alan, the son of Walter the Steward, the monks had a gift of five shillings out of the rents of his three tofts in Elgin, Forres, and Inverness.

From Walter Murdach and his wife Muriel, daughter of Peter de Pollock, they received a part of the haugh of Dundureus, with the land and pasture set apart for them, and described in Walter Murdach's charter—a gift which is said to have been intended as an aid in the restoration of the monastery after its accidental destruction by fire in the year 1258.⁴

By the gift of Robert Corbet they got the three oxgates of land of Lethenoth, lying between the church of Gamery and Trup, in Banffshire.

From David, the son of Duncan, Earl of Fife, the monks got all that part of the land of Belach, or Balloch, which had been the subject of controversy between him and them in the early part of the thirteenth century, and which, as will be seen, continued to be a subject of litigation between their successors three centuries afterwards. These lands lay on the west boundary of their barony of Strathisla, the marches of which are described as running to the summit of both the hills of Balloch.¹

King Robert Bruce conferred on the house all the fishings in the water of Findhorn²—a valuable gift, but one which, in the progress of time, led the monks, and their successors, even to our own day, into many troublesome lawsuits. From this king the monks also got the church of Ellon, on the Ythan, in Aberdeenshire.

No chartulary of the house of Kinloss has been preserved, and the scanty records printed in the present volume have been gleaned from various sources, indicated in the Tabula.

While there is a lack of charter records in illustration of its history, the traditions of the monastery, and notices of its abbots, have been handed down with unusual fulness by an author who wrote in the first half of the sixteenth century, and for a time was one of its inmates.

John Ferrerius, to whom I refer, was a native of Piedmont, who, being at Paris in the pursuit of his studies in the university there, became the friend of Robert Reid, then on his return from Rome to Scotland, carrying with him the Papal bulls which conferred on him the Abbey of Kinloss.

Ferreri^{us} was induced by the abbot to accompany him to Scotland in 1528, and after passing three years at court, he was installed at Kinloss, where he spent the next five years either in study, in the instruction of the monks, or in the preparation of certain Commentaries which he had undertaken.

In 1537, he was meditating his return to Italy; but, in the first place, he resolved to preserve to posterity an account of his lectures, and the authors on whose works he had prelected; and as it is a matter of interest to learn the system of study pursued in a Scotch monastery just before the Reformation, I have included in the Appendix to the Preface the notices of himself and his labours thus furnished by Ferreri^{us} (pp. 52-56).

In 1540, at the urgent request of Abbot Robert Reid, who had just been promoted to the See of Orkney, he returned to Scotland. At this time Reid settled on him a pension of forty pounds Scotch, with a servant and two horses. In that year he accompanied his patron on a visit to his distant diocese, and on his return through Ross-shire he brought along with him from Beaul^y (the priory of which was held by the bishop in commendam), five young monks for their instruction. They continued at Kinloss under his care for three years; but in consequence of the confusion which followed the death of King James V., and the disturbances by which Ferreri^{us} was surrounded, they were dismissed to their own monastery. Ferreri^{us} again resolved to leave Scotland, and to return to France; but he recorded, as on a former occasion, the names of the authors on whose works he had been recently engaged in lecturing at Kinloss. They comprised, "Secundum librum de copia Erasmi. Item, Orationem Ciceronis pro Q. Ligario. Item, primum librum Officiorum Ciceronis. Item, Dialecticam Trapisontii. Item, libros decem Ethicorum Aristotelis. Item, Topica Ciceronis. Item, Rhetoricam minorem Melanethonis, cum schematibus. Item, Rhetoricam Melanethonis majorem. Item, Sphaeram a Sacrobosco. Item, Bucolica Virgilia. Item, Georgica. Item, librum primum de copia Erasmi. Item, Arithmeticam nostram. Item, Dialogum primum Physicorum Fabri. Item, Universam logicam Aristotelis, cum praedicabilibus Porphyrii. Item, libros quinque Physicorum Aristotelis. Item, libros duo Politicorum Aristotelis. Item, primi libri Sententiarum decem distinctiones. Item, Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos. Item, quinque primos libros Augustini De civitate Dei."

Ferrarius has not disdained, at the same time, to record the following little unpleasant passage which befell him before his departure, and which may be quoted for the glimpse which it gives of the petty jealousies from which even the cloister was not exempt.

At the departure from Kinloss of the five Beauly monks who had been under the tuition of Ferrarius, he presented to them a gift of some of his books, one of which, as it happened—viz., Plutarch's Lives—was then in the possession of Adam Elder, one of the brethren, to whom Ferrarius elsewhere refers as "optimus juvenis."

Adam not only refused to deliver the volume to the pupil to whom it was presented by Ferrerius, but he boldly asserted that that learned man had not a single book of his own, the whole having been bought with the abbot's money. The answer of Ferrerius to this calumny is given in a letter to one of the monks of Beaulieu, in which he writes :—

“What you write of Sir Adam Elder does not much surprise me. I had thought, however, that during these days while he drinks milk and water, he would become less foolish ; but he goes on, I perceive, in his old way, always like himself. The argument which he applies to my books is like the man himself, weak in the loins ; for it does not necessarily follow that books belong to another, although his name may be written on them, just as you and your colleagues, for nearly three years, wore the cowl of the Cistercian order, when you were really of a different profession ; for a considerable portion of the books have affixed to them, by Sir James Pont, the name of Abbot Thomas, when they really belonged to Abbot Robert. Besides, it is untrue that all the books were acquired with the abbot's money, for before I ever knew the abbot, I had many books at Paris, and brought more with me at my first coming to Scotland than the abbot himself ; then, while engaged at court, I bought not a few books at Edinburgh with my own money ; and what I procured at Paris during the last four years, many at Kinloss can attest, who saw those which I brought with me at my second coming ; and if all is taken into account, you may conclude that almost a half of the books were bought with my money. Is not the money my own which I had before I came to know the abbot?—or which I afterwards acquired through my own industry? more truly mine than what Adam diverts to his own use, without leave of the abbot, by selling cabbages from his garden. I indeed am of no profession but that of Christ, and what my industry brings to me is my own; but what a monk acquires is not for himself but for his monastery. That I have frequently put the name of the abbot on the books, arises from the love which I bear to him, as though I wished all things belonging to friends to be held in common. But I ask you with what front, with what face, does he daily approach the altar in such manifest and perverse falsehood? May Christ grant that hereafter he may judge more candidly of our affairs, and in the meantime take care, through your sub-prior, again to claim the Plutarch which at your departure I, with a good title, bestowed upon you.”

The following notices of other works of Ferrerius will not be regarded as uninteresting, from the light which they throw on the literary tastes of his day, and for the notices which they preserve of eminent Scottish scholars, his contemporaries.¹

The first is entitled, “Academica de animarum immortalitate, ex sexto M. T. Ciceronis de Republica libro, enarratio: Io. Ferrerio Pedemontano auctore. Parisiis, ex officina Michaelis Vascosani. M.D.XXXIX.”

¹ They are bound together in a volume, in the Library of the University of Edinburgh.

This is followed by some introductory lines in verse, addressed, "Patrono suo singulari domino Roberto Reid, Abbati a Kynlos in Scotia." The dedication to him is dated at Paris, 13th June 1539.

The second is, "Auditum Visu præstare, contra vulgatum Aristotelis placitum: academica Johannis Ferrerii Pedemontani disertatio. Parisiis, ex officina Michaelis Vascosani. M.D.XXXIX." The dedication is, "Reverendo in Christo Patri, domino Roberto Reid, abbati Cisterciensis familiæ monasterii a Kynlos in Scotia, domino et patrono suo singulari," and is dated at Paris, 1st January 1539. In it Ferrerius is eloquent on the love of letters which had sprung up at Paris. He says—

"Vetus ubique atque Novum Testamentum e theologorum et supremi Senatus matura consultatione nunc in manu est, et in publicis theologorum scholis quotidie magno cum fructu veræ pietatis enarratur. Nunc etiam in precio habentur optimi illi patres, Hieronymus, Basilius, Chrysostomus, Ambrosius, Augustinus, Gregorius, et cæteri hujus ordinis, qui olim magnis vigiliis vias Domini planas facere, simul et indicare conati sunt. Quid dicam de jurisprudentiæ studio, quod sedulitate eruditorum hominum sic restitutum est, ut jureconsulti illi prisce jam possint (si reviviscant) hujus seculi hominibus invidere? Nunquam major linguarum peritia et copia Parisiis quam hoc nostro seculo, idque munere et largitate regis Christianissimi Francisci, ejus nominis primi, visa est. Tanta est Latini Græcique sermonis copia ubique, ut plerique admirentur quid ita cito isthæc fieri potuerint. Hebraica docentur multis in scholis, cum magno sacrarum literarum compendio. Medicina itidem Hippocratis Cei, Galeni, et reliquorum veterum medicorum, beneficio Summi Numinis, atque doctorum hominum studio jam passim restituta legitur, et in usum humanæ vitæ necessarium auspiciatissime recurrit. Philosophia verò, hoc est, omnium bonarum artium parens ac magistra, nunquam major, nunquam purior Athenis fuit (absit verbo invidia) quam nunc est Parisiorum Lutetiæ. Quicquid usquam est veterum philosophorum nunc Parisiis cum Latinè tum Græcè legitur. Ubique adest Plato, ubique Xenophon, Aristoteles, Theophrastus, Jamblicus, Plotinus, Proclus, Aphrodiseus, Themistius, Simplicius, et reliqua Peripateticorum Academicorumque philosophorum turba. Mathematica quoque nunc maximè celebria videntur; ut jam desinamus de his rebus, vetustissimis illis scriptoribus invidere. Nunc enim Euclides totus, vix olim tractabilis; nunc Ptolemæi opus magnæ syntaxeos, et aliæ cum Geographiæ, tum Astronomiæ apodixes, penitissimè spectantur."

Further on, the author enlarges on the learned brotherhood in Scotland who cultivated the revived learning, and we get glimpses of several names well known in our literary annals.

"Nescio quid aliis contingat, ego tamen apud vos tantam semper expertus sum humanitatem quantam uspiam. Aberdoniis, rector a Kynkell, homo studiosus et politicus, me semper complexus est humanissimè. Idem fecit Hector ille Boethius historiarum vestrarum scriptor nunquam satis laudatus : ut interim omittam Arthurum Boethii fratrem germanum, utriusque juris peritissimum : Gulielmum Hays theologum syncerum : ac Jacobum Vane, cum doctore medico peritissimo Roberto Gray. Adde his Joannem Vaus, virum cum literis tum moribus ornatissimum, et de juventute Scotica bene meritum. Quid unquam potero (per superos) scribendo efficere, ut illi mei amantissimo in amore respondeam ? Tantus semper fuit in me ornando, ut nemo sit crediturus si vel minimam partem suorum adversum me officiorum hic adnumeravero. Quantam præterea ubique apud viros nobiles, comites, item Barones : quantam apud præsules, abbates ac priores expertus sim humanitatem, non queam (etiam si velim) dignè satis referre. Non silebo tamen unum abbatem a Glenluss, dominum Valterum Malynne, cui ab humanitate, eruditione, et omnibus bonis virtutibus plurimum debeo. Edinburgi, hoc est in regia Scotorum sunt viri amplissimi consilarii regis, Jacobus Follisius poeta ad unguem factus : Joannes Campbell ac Thomas Scott : quibus nunquam paria facere queam. De Laurentio Taillefeir, viro gravi beneque literato, ac domino meo Valtero Lyndesaye Rhodiæ militiæ equite amato, et S. Joannis (ut vocant) domino, præstat silere quam pauca dicere : quando illorum beneficia erga me omnem meam cogitationem superarunt."

The title of the third treatise is, "Cicero, Poeta etiam elegans nedum ineptus fuisse, contra vulgatam Grammaticarum opinionem asseritur : inibique versiculus ille cantatissimus, O fortunatam natam me Consule Roman.

Diligenter expensus, Joanne Ferrerio Pedemontano auctore. Parisiis, ex officina Michaelis Vascosani. M.D.XL."

The dedication is, "R. in Christo patri, D. Gulielmo Stewart Aberdoniarum præsuli in primis suspiciendo, et Regis Scotorum a Thesauris vigilantissimo, domino suo."

It is dated, "Apud Monasterium domini Roberti Reid patroni mei, et Abbatis Cisterciensis familiæ à Kynlos in Scotia. 4 Cal. Decemb. 1534."

In it Ferrerius again refers to the learned men gathered together in the university of Aberdeen :—"Sunt enim multi quos probè (nisi mea me fallit opinatio) novi, qui ab eruditione multiplici, non Aberdoniis tantum, sed et in præstantissima universi orbis Academia, principem locum meritissimè ac præter omnem ambitionem retinere queant. Quid enim, cum in cyclicis disciplinis omnibus, tum historiis, Hectore illo Boethio eruditius simul et elegantius? Quid in sacrarum literarum mysteriis Gulielmo Haye expeditius et jucundius? Ad sublevandas autem corporum ægrotationes, geographiæque peritiam, quid Roberto Gray doctore medico magis aptum atque blandum cogitari potest? In sacrorum verò canonum et pontificiarum legum responsis, non facile invenies quem cum Arthuro Boethio componas. Postremo loco (ut reliquos interim ornatos et peritos viros omittam) quid illo Joanne Vaus nostro in re grammatica et omnibus bonis literis tradundis vigilantius."

The last is entitled, "De vera Cometæ significatione, contra astrologorum omnium vanitatem, libellus, nuper natus et æditus, Johanne Ferrerio Pedemontano auctore. Parisiis ; ex officina Michaelis Vascosani. M.D.XL.”

This treatise was written in 1531, when it was dedicated to King James V., and was dated at Perth, 15th August of that year. In an appendix, written a few days later, he describes a star, first observed on the 6th of August 1531, by the Franciscans of Perth, and afterwards for many nights by himself and others. He concludes that this star “Halona propius referre videbatur quam Cometem.”

The second dedication, dated at Paris 1st February 1540, is to Cardinal David Beaton, Archbishop of St. Andrews, in which, after referring to the false auguries from comets which he had exposed, he says, “Ea propter existimavi me operæ precium facturum si ex tanto intervallo memoriam illius temporis refricarem, partim ut mendaces tunc divinationes confundantur, partim ut meæ erga tuam reverentiam observantiæ significationem literis testatam redderem.”

At the request of Mr. William Gordon, secretary to the Earl of Huntly, who had himself sketched an outline of the history of the Gordons, Ferrerius prepared a work, which he entitled “Historiæ compendium de origine et incremento Gordoniæ familiæ.” From the dedication to George, Earl of Huntly, it appears that he finished it at Kinloss on the 30th of March 1545. It has never been printed, and a copy of the manuscript is in the Advocates’ Library.

In 1574, Ferrerius issued a second edition of Boece’s History of the Scots, containing the eighteenth book, and a fragment of the nineteenth, with a supplement by himself, which brings it down to the death of James III., in 1488. A letter dedicatory to James Beaton, Archbishop of Glasgow, is dated at Paris, 20th June 1574; and in a notice to the reader he states that he was induced to enter on the undertaking at the request of Henry Sinclair, Dean of Glasgow, and his brother, John Sinclair, Dean of Restalrig.

Some of the lands in the grants to the monastery before referred to were defined by boundaries worthy of remark.

The Charter of Strathisla, granted by King William the Lion,¹ contains the names of places and objects, many of which are quite recognisable at the present day; and on this subject the following letter, written in answer to my inquiries, by my friend Mr. William Thurburn, banker and solicitor in Keith, will be read with interest:—

“The march begins, as described in the charter, ‘a loco ubi Lagyn descendit in Hylef,’ etc. This Lagyn is the Burn of Millegan. . . . By that name the place is perfectly well known at the present day, being a little below the Grange station of the Great North of Scotland Railway, and itself forming a small station or siding on the Banffshire Railway. It is a little to the north or north-east side of the Balloch, or Little Balloch, and a little to the south-east of Nethermills, and in the parish of Grange.

“The description proceeds—‘Ascendendo per album siccum in rubeo musso usque ad summitatem orientalis Belach et per summitatem utriusque Belach, usque eque ultra fontem qui vocatur Leskyngowin.' The 'album siccum in rubeo musso,' or 'white scurf in the red moss,' is a barren piece of ground covered with white scurf, or stony ground with little or no soil on it, between Millegan and the Grange station. Being an ugly, unproductive, barren waste, it was, a few years ago, planted at the joint expense of the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Fife, it being just at the march where their properties meet—that is, the Duke's property in Cairnie, and Lord Fife's property in Grange. The plantation is of so recent date that the young plants do not yet conceal the white scurf nor the red moss; but, as they grow up, they of course will. The white scurf is quite close to the Great North of Scotland Railway; or rather, I should say, the railway passes quite close to it. Coming from Aberdeen it is on the right hand side of the line; going from Keith it is on the left.

"The eastern Balloch is what is known as the Little Balloch, and lies partly in Grange and partly in Cairnie. The Balloch itself, or Muckle Balloch, is almost entirely in Keith, though probably on the south side it may dip into Cairnie.

"The Well of Leskyngowin is said to be a spring on the western Balloch; but I do not know of any such spring myself.

"The next point mentioned in the description is 'by Grodok to Isla.' I don't know it at all myself; but it is said to be a stripe that bounds the farm of Cantly on the west.

"The description goes on—'Et sic ascendendo per Hylef usque Geth, et usque ubi Forgyn descendit in Hylef, et inde ascendendo per Forgyn usque Algarg, et sic usque Aldrochyn ; et ab inde usque Algargadyn.'

"Of course, Hylef is Isla, and Geth is Keith. Forgyn is the present Burn of Forgie, well known.

"Algarg, Aldrochyn, and Algargyn are all unknown ; and I find nobody who can recognise either of them.

"Ferthekiner is supposed to be Fearnkeen, which is well known ; but I may say generally that none of the other places subsequently mentioned in the charter are recognisable by any party.

"Generally speaking, I may state that the boundary is very much the present march between the properties of Lord Fife, the Duke of Richmond, and the Earl of Seafield.

"Then as to the places the names of which appear in the Rental of the Abbey of Kinloss. The Mains of Strathisla is, I presume, the present Mains of Grange.

"The Clerk Seat is undoubtedly the farm in Grange, pronounced Clerset, with the accent on the first syllable, but which is spelled Clerk-Seat, but all in one word thus—Clerkseat. It is a farm quite close to the Church of Grange. Boghigy I do not know. Thornton is well known. Hauches (called Haughs of Grange, shortly Haughs) is also well known, an excellent haugh farm, not a quarter of a mile from the railway-station, and on the banks of the Isla. Muryfold, equally well known in the same neighbourhood. But I presume I need not go over more of the names. Generally speaking, they are all well known, and the farms go by the same names to this day. Over Mylne I do not know ; but Nether Mylne is Nether-mills ; Millegin ; Garwotwood is Garrow-wood ; Easter and Wester Cranokis, evidently Easter and Wester Cranach ; Easter and Wester Croyletts are Easter and Wester Croylet, on the estate of Edingight. These are all in the parish of Grange. When you come to Glengarrock, Mongrew, Haughs of Killinitie, Killiesmonth, and Tarmore, these are all in the parish of Keith, and well known.

“Paithnick, Edingight (pronounced Edingeith), Over and Nether Cantlies, Floors, Windyhill, etc., are again all in Grange. By-the-bye, there is one I have passed over of some interest—i.e., after Muiryfold, ‘Brakhall.’ This is evidently Braco (Mr. Lumsden’s farm), spelled, as you have it, Brakhall. I have no doubt it had in common parlance been pronounced Brakha’, and this, by a very simple process, would come to be shortened into Braco, the first title of nobility acquired by the Fife family in the person of William, Lord Braco. It is the adjoining farm to Muiryfold, and in your list it follows it.”

The charter of Burgie by King Alexander II.¹ refers to a boundary line, fixed by perambulation, running from the great oak in Malevin, on which Earl Malcolm caused a cross to be marked, as far as the Rune of the Picts, and from thence to Tubernacrumkel, and from thence by the sike to Tubernafein, and thence to Runctwethel, and from that by the rivulet which runs through the marsh to the ford called Blakeford, between Burgy and Ulern.

A contemporary gloss, on a piece of parchment sewed to the charter, explains Tubernaerumkel to mean—"ane well with ane thrawin mowth, or ane cassin well, with ane cruik in it."

Tubernafeyne, "of the grett or Kempis men callit Fenis, is ane well."

Rune Pictorum, "the carne of the Pethis, or the Pechtis feildis."

Malith, "the brow of ane hill."

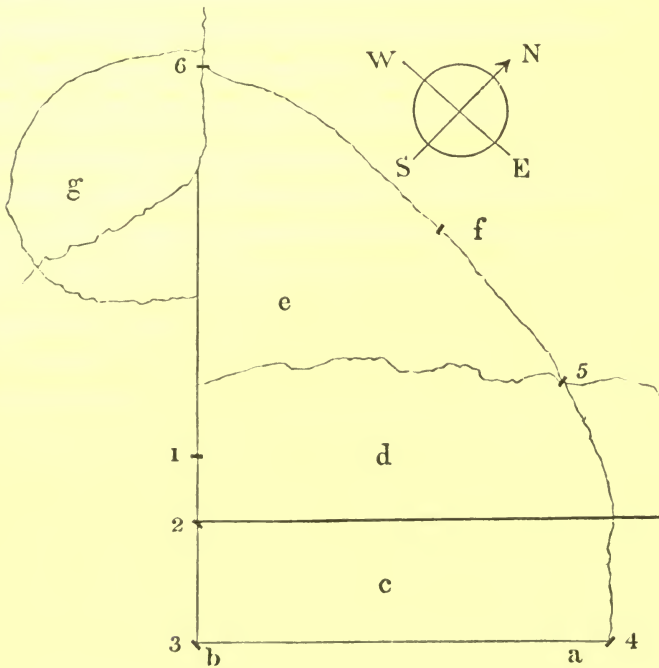

The late Mr. James Brichan, who to his charter-learning added, in this instance, local knowledge, endeavoured to identify the positions of the places and objects in this charter, and I have thought it proper to reprint here the paper on this subject which he kindly prepared at my suggestion.¹

"In the REGISTRUM MORAVIENSE (printed for the members of the Bannatyne Club), Appendix, No. 4, we have a charter entitled 'carta confirmationis regis Alexandri II. terre de Burgyn.' It was printed from a copy of the original, found among the manuscripts of Walter Macfarlane, now in the Advocates' Library. It is dated December 7, 1221.

"In this charter King Alexander grants to the monks of Kinloss 'the land of Burgyn, which Earl Malcom of Fif and Gillebert, Archdeacon of Moray, and Andrew, the son of William Fresekin, and Archibald of Dufhus, and Alexander and Henry, the brothers of Brice Bishop of Moray, and others his good men, by his order perambulated (Scottice 'redd') to them, and by the same boundaries by which they delivered it to them, namely, from the great oak in Malevin, which the foresaid Earl Malcolm at first caused to be marked with a cross as far as the Rune Pictorum, and thence as far as Tubernaerumkel, and thence along a sike as far as Tubernafein, and thence as far as Runetwethel, and thence along the rivulet which runs through the marsh as far as the ford which is called Blakeford, which is between Burgyn and Ulern.'

“[The foregoing diagram of the district referred to, although necessarily not very accurate, will perhaps give some assistance in rendering the following remarks more intelligible than they could otherwise be made. The line ab shows the supposed southern boundary of the ground perambulated; the letter d the ridge named the Hill of Burgie, and its western continuation the Mellan Hill, which may average about 500 feet in height above the level of the sea; e, the sike or bog on its south side, which is rather lower; and there is a gradual slope of some hundred feet towards f and g, the farms of Easter and Wester Laurencetown, on the north.]

“Attached to the original charter was a parchment, apparently written in the same hand, from which Macfarlane furnishes the following translation of some of the above terms:—

““Tubernacrumkel, ane well with ane thrawin mouth, or ane cassin well, with ane cruik in it.

““Tubernafeyne of the Grett or Kemppis men callit Fenis is ane well.

““Rune Pictorum, the carne of the Pethis or Pechts Feildis.

““Malith, the brow of ane hill.’

“The boundary begins ‘from the great oak in Malevin,’ No. 1; and ‘Malith’ (evidently only a component part of Malevin) is interpreted ‘the brow of ane hill.’ The straight line in the above sketch, marked with the figures 6, 1, 2, 3, represents a portion of the older boundary of the Burgie property, which runs across the ridge still known as the Mellan Hill. Malith is a misreading of Malich, a Gaelic word, signifying the eye-brow, and, of course only in composition with the word represented by the syllable vin, signifies 'the brow of ane hill.' A glance at the ridge now known as the Mellan Hill—a prominence somewhat lower than the top of the main ridge—would at once satisfy any one of the propriety of the old name Malevin. It seems scarcely possible to doubt that the 'great oak' must have stood on or near the spot marked in the sketch as No. 1. There are now no remnants of the old oak forests of Scotland on or near the spot, but large trunks of oak have been dug up at various parts of the ridge. It may not be irrelevant to notice that the surname Melvin (so nearly resembling Malevin) is in the neighbourhood of the locality pronounced Mellan.

"The next point in the boundary is the Rune Pictorum, or 'carne of the Pechts Feildis.' Its probable site was at or near the spot marked No. 2. No cairn now exists there, but immediately on the west of it there stretches an extensive moor (now partly cultivated), and once abounding with cairns. An old man who had seen many of the cairns, and who was alive in 1851, informed the writer that he understood the moor to be ground which had been under cultivation by the Piets. The writer is unable to pronounce any opinion as to the historical accuracy of such a tradition; but the Hill of Plusearden, rising to the south-east of the ground in question, is still extensively covered with small cairns, apparently agricultural, though locally ascribed to a different source.

“From the point marked No. 2 (the south angle of the wooded and enclosed part of the Hill of Burgie, shown in the diagram by the line running eastward from fig. 2), the boundary runs straight through a moss, and across a hill which shall be subsequently noticed. At the point marked No. 3, on the south side of the moss, is the well named the Deer's Peel (Pool).

“It would perhaps be too much to affirm that this is the veritable Tubernacrumkel—but certainly the Deer's Peel corresponds to the very letter with the interpretations of Tubernacrumkel given by Macfarlane from the old parchment attached to the Burgie charter. If ‘cassin’ means ‘dug,’ the well has every appearance of having been formed with the spade in a spot most aptly described by the Latin word scaturigo. It has an outlet ‘thrawin,’ or ‘with anc cruik in it,’ which is a most singular coincidence, if it is not the well of the charter.

“There are no wells in the locality except that just described, and another named Willie's Well. To reach the latter from our supposed Tubernacrumkel, leaving the western boundary of the Burgie property, we proceed per sicum to the point marked No. 4. There we meet a more extensive scaturigo, situated in moory ground, in the middle of which lies the well which, in all probability, is the ancient Tubernafein. Independently of the interest attached to the ancient boundary now in question, the word Tuber- nafein, as explained above, has an interest of its own. It indicates and commemorates the former existence of a race of men, whosoever they may have been, known in 1221 as the Kemppis men or Fenis (and still spoken of in some parts as the Fingalians), and whose name and memory, even in the thirteenth century, seem to have existed solely in the form thus indicated. To the eastward of Willie's Well lies the part of the Hill of Pluscarden above noticed, which is thickly strown with small cairns, locally believed to mark the scene of a battle, but not, so far as is known, covering in any instance human remains.

“The site of Runetwethel is a matter of mere conjecture. There is now no cairn in the line of any supposable course which the boundary may have here taken. The point No. 5 is therefore marked as merely hypothetical. But it is known that numerous cairns have been removed from the neighbourhood. Twethel, as appears from other documents copied by Macfarlane,¹ was a landholder in the district of Moray, and Runetwethel is of course Twethel's Cairn. It appears to the writer that Twethel is a misreading of Twechel. The western portion of the ridge of which the Hill of Pluscarden forms a part, terminates in a rounded eminence 843 feet above the sea-level, named the Hill of Tulloch, lying immediately on the south of the ground marked out by King Alexander's Charter. By a very common transposition Twechel in the lapse of ages may have become Tulloch. The Runetwethel of the charter must have stood on the slope of the Hill of Burgie, which, though bearing a distinct name, is in fact a part of the same ridge. It may also be noticed here, although not directly bearing on the subject in hand, that the top and southern slope of the Hill of Tulloch are studded with the remains of numerous cairns opening to the east, through the middle of which runs a zigzag dike of dry stone, whether a mere enclosure, a defence, or an ancient tinshell, the writer is not qualified to say.

“The remaining part of the old boundary described in the charter of King Alexander runs, as we have seen, from the Runetwethel ‘along the rivulet which runs through the marsh as far as the ford which is called Blakeford, which is between Burgyn and Ulern.’ The rivulet and marsh no longer exist; but above Easter Laurencetown there is more than one imaginable channel in which the rivulet may have run; and below Laurencetown is a field formerly a marsh, naturally drained to the westward, and whose artificial drains also take the same direction, which is that indicated in the charter. Following the supposed rivulet and marsh, we thus reach the point No. 6, at which, within the last few years, was an old ford, where the former road from Laurencetown to Forres crossed a small stream decending from the south, and partly forming the old western boundary of Burgie. The ford and remains of the old road have now disappeared in the embanking of the stream. The ford had latterly no known designation, but there can be little doubt that it was the Blakeford of the charter. It lay, as we have seen, exactly on the boundary of the Burgie lands, and was thus situated as described, inter Burgyn et Ulern. About the name Burgyn there is no difficulty. Ulern, though found in that very ancient orthography, is undoubtedly Blervie, the old castle and lands of which lie immediately to the west of the ground in question. It is the place at which Fordun and other chroniclers affirm that King Malcolm I. was slain by the men of Moray, and whose name they variously spell Ulum, Uturn, Ulrin, Ulroun, Ulerin, and Uleryn. It occurs in its old form but twice in the Registrum Moraviense; once, as we have seen, in 1221, when it is spelled Ulern, and again in 1238, when it takes the form Vlerin.¹ In the same Register it assumes, in the sixteenth century, the form Blare, in which it appears also in records of the two following centuries. It is hardly necessary to notice the common interchange of the letters b and v in words of Celtic origin, or the well-known fact that many, or most, of our modern names ending in ie had of old the termination in or yn.

“It is remarkable that the boundary above traced does not end in the charter, as was usually the case, at the point at which it began. There cannot, however, be a doubt that the remaining portion was that indicated by the line between Nos. 6 and 1, which is still partly the boundary, and which runs in nearly a straight line from the site of the old ford to the Mellan Hill, two points distinctly within sight of one another.

“The farm of Wester Laurencetown is now part of the Burgie property, and the western boundary of the former is now of course that of the latter. The fair of Saint Laurence was formerly held on the spot marked e in the above sketch, and the laird of Burgie was superior of that fair. At a period which the writer has not been able to ascertain, Burgie excambed his privileges connected with the fair for the farm of Wester Laurencetown, belonging to the town of Forres, to which the fair was removed, and at which it is still held. The foundations of the old booths existed till very recently, when they were removed by the present occupant of the farm of Easter Laurencetown. The fair has its name from Saint Laurence the Martyr, the patron of the town and parish of Forres.

“The ground whose boundaries are defined in the charter of King Alexander II. the writer believes to be ‘the plough-gate in the landella of Burgin, lawfully measured,’ granted to the monks of Kinlos by King Malcolm IV. (1153-1165), confirmed to them by Richard Bishop of Moray (1187-1203), and confirmed by King Alexander a second time in 1225, three or four years after the perambulation which is the subject of the present paper.¹ It lies considerably to the south of the modern road from Forres to Elgin (which at that part appears to correspond with the ancient line), and is quite distinct from the grant of another part of Burgie by King William (1172-1178), the latter being described as lying on the north side of the King’s highway between Elgin and Forres.¹ It is, however, well known that at Kelbuthac (now Kilbuyack), the eastern termination of the land granted by King William, the old road diverged from the present line, and ran on somewhat higher ground, and upon the south side of the Knock of Alves, an old hill fort now topped by an insignificant modern tower.”

In the charter of certain debateable lands by Abbot Robert Reid, in favour of Alexander Ogilvy of Finlater, dated in 1537, the boundary contains some Gaelic words, with their translations. One of them is described as Auchindathin, on the top of the hill, commonly called “The Temple Stanis;” another is Pollintarf, or “The Bull Pottis.” The Well of Tubernaneam is a boundary; as also a cairn called “Baddacarne,” and a stone styled “Clachnatreith.”²

The fishings on Findhorn, which formed so important a part of the monastic property, were first granted to them by King Robert Bruce in 1310.³

Two confirmations of King Robert’s charter appear, the one by King James I. and the second by King James IV.⁴—the last being remarkable for an exception of the fishings of the Sluy Pool, adjoining the lands of Darnaway, and the reservation for the king's use of three lasts of salmon yearly.

James IV., however, a few years later, made a fresh grant to the monks of their fishings on the Water of Findhorn, which he had recognised in the time of a plea between the monks and the burgh of Forres regarding them, and included in it a discharge from all payment of the three lasts of salmon reserved in his former charter, but to which he confessed that he had no valid title. The following precept to the Royal Chamberlain explains the transaction :—

By this monarch the town of Kinloss was erected into a burgh of barony.

In the charter of confirmation by James I.² there is a clause setting forth the king's desire to promote the welfare and policy of the country, and therefore granting licence to the monks that in the common brewery founded of old in the neighbourhood of their monastery they might bake cakes in the oven or otherwise, and cook flesh and fish as they had occasion, that they might furnish them to travellers and others at their own charges.

The notices of the earlier abbots which Ferrerius was able to glean are scanty, but they are not without interest ; and his lives of the later abbots are full of incident and curious detail. Like other historians, he begins by lamenting the scarcity of his materials ; not that he omitted due exertions to obtain information from the best sources. Thus, we find him stirring up the Abbot of Kinloss to apply to the parent house of Melrose for information as to Asceline, the first abbot of Kinloss,—how he came to be sent from Melrose,—how many monks he brought with him,—and what was the early mode of nomination. Then application was to be made to the abbot of Culros with the view of ascertaining who was their first abbot, and the number of his associates, with particulars as to visitations and institutions. The abbot of Cupar was to be written to for details about the abbots sent from that monastery to Kinloss ; and for information from the records of the abbey of Deer, Ferrerius applied directly to Robert Stephenson, the sub-prior, requesting to be furnished with excerpts touching the abbots of that house sent from Kinloss, their character for good management, and whether they had been promoted canonically or through ambition.

Towards the end of the fourteenth century we find in the notices of Ferrerius historical facts of some interest.

Thus, of abbot Richard, who died in 1371, we learn that he was the fourteenth abbot. In his time William, Earl of Sutherland, bestowed on Kinloss the Hospital of St. John the Baptist, of Hebnisden, by a deed dated at Elgin 21st May 1362. Under this abbot Patrick was prior of the house; and, by desire of the abbot, he attended the general chapter of the Cistercians, and made two journeys to Rome touching certain disputed lands.

Adam of Teras, the fifteenth abbot, who died in 1401, is reported to have lived lewdly, and to have had issue in concubinage. It is said that he lost a large part of the lands of Teras, which passed into the hands of the Earl of Moray; and his remains lie under a sculptured stone before the presbytery. He erected the Abbots' Hall, and "invexit pontificalia" under the schismatic pontificate of Pope Benedict XIII. in 1391.

William Blair, the sixteenth abbot, died in 1445, having been abbot of Kinloss from 1401 to 1430, when he also became abbot of Cupar in Angus, where he had been a monk before he was made abbot of Kinloss. In 1419 he deposed John, abbot of Culros, on account of his incontinency; and in his time the abbot of Pontigny came to Scotland on a mission from the heads of the Cistercian Order—"ut tum forte collapsam religionem instauraret."

The next abbot was Sir John Flutere. He lived in office ten years, when, in 1440, he was degraded—"ob parum pudicam vitam." He bought at great cost the silver pastoral staff which the abbots afterwards used at mass. In his time the Cistercians were banished from Pluscardine, and the Benedictines introduced in their place. Two of the Cistercians were sent to Kinloss, one of whom, after showing his base habits, was transferred to the house of Deer, where he died in old age.

John Ellem was the eighteenth abbot, and died in 1467. He brought to the monastery a choice altarpiece, and two silver candlesticks for the high altar, with a third of bronze, at which the gospel is read, as also several dalmatics and chasubles. He built a vaulted entrance to the cloister, and made preparations for building a bell-tower, but was prevented by his death.

James Guthry, the nineteenth abbot, was formerly cellarer of Cupar. In his visitation of Culros he compelled Richard Marschell, abbot of that place, to resign—"ob vitæ turpitudinem." Guthry was a Bachelor in Theology. He erected the bell-tower which his predecessor had projected, and placed on it a spire; and in his improvements, having fallen short of money, he sold the organs, which were afterwards at Forres, and a bason and ewer of silver, afterwards at Dunfermline. He would also have sold the fine painting of the high altar if he had not been hindered by the vicars of Spynie and Elgin, both of the name of Ellem. After a time he selected William Galbraith to be his successor at Kinloss, but, according to report, simoniacally; for, pretending old age, he squeezed from Galbraith a large sum, in the hope of being made abbot of Cupar, from which he had come. But it so turned out that he could neither retain Kinloss nor obtain Cupar, and he died of chagrin at Forfar in 1482, and was buried there.

Under him was David Eliot, a monk, who purchased or transcribed various volumes of ritual. He also bought for the chapel of St. John the Evangelist an image and chasuble. Another of the monks was William Butter, who, in anger, committed homicide, by striking a boy in the cloister. He went to Rome with another monk, and obtained letters of absolution, a copy of which he sent to the abbot, but neither he nor his companion ever returned.

William Galbraith, the twentieth abbot, was subchanter of Moray when he was selected by James Guthry to be his successor. He was the first who sent to Rome for bulls, for, before his time, the abbots were canonically elected by the suffrages of the monks and the confirmation of the abbot of Melrose. On one occasion the abbot, on his return from the church of Avach, in Ross-shire, with a small company, was taken prisoner by the Baron of Kilravock, on which Sir James Dunbar, sheriff of Moray and bailie of Kinloss, with a band of armed men, set out to procure his release. Hearing of this, however, the laird of Kilravock dismissed his prisoner without bloodshed. The cup of this abbot, with a silver hoop, continued to be used at the abbot's table at Kinloss. He died in 1491, and was buried in the chapel of St. Peter at Kinloss.

William Culross was the twenty-first abbot. He became very corpulent; and after a few years he committed the management of the abbey to Thomas Crystall as his successor. This abbot did little either to add to its wealth or to diminish it. It was his wont to do much with his own hands. He wrote various books of ritual for the house, and laboured even to fatigue in the gardens, in planting and grafting trees, and other work of this nature. He was tolerably devout if he had not given way to fleshly pleasures and venery. He died on the 28th of December 1504, and was laid in the Chapel of St. Thomas.

Ferrerius was contemporary with the next two abbots, and his account of them is minute and interesting.

Abbot Thomas Crystall, the twenty-second abbot, with a natural love of study, had to sacrifice his own tastes to the necessities of the monastery to whose oversight he had been called. Its affairs, indeed, were not in a flourishing condition. The neighbouring proprietors had seized portions of its patrimony, and every one was attempting to appropriate something to himself of what had been destined for sacred use. In this way Abbot Thomas found himself involved in a variety of lawsuits, which called for much of his attention and energy. First of all he gained a victory, after a suit of four years, over the town's people of Forres, who had usurped some of the fishings at the mouth of the Findhorn. Next he obtained redress from the prior of Pluscardine, who had seized on more of the fishings of Fernanen than belonged to him. To this succeeded a laborious contest with Mr. Hugh Martinson, who had obtained from the King a gift of a corody of £170 Scots, payable by the abbot, and who, after a fight of seven years, was glad to compromise his claim. Hardly had matters been adjusted with Hugh, when another opponent appeared in the person of John Cumming of Ernshede. The dispute with him related to the boundaries of their lands; and on a remit to certain noblemen, by the Lords of Parliament, it was adjusted by a perambulation.

The abbot was involved in a litigation of three years with Alexander Bannerman of Waterton, sheriff of Aberdeenshire, regarding the kirk lands of Ellon, in which the sheriff was vanquished.

An affair of greater weight, however, which lasted for seven years, was a dispute with Alexander, Earl of Huntly, regarding the lands of the Balloch, in Strathisla. These were claimed by the earl; but having failed in his attempts he at length renounced all claim.¹ After this the earl's sister, Agnes, who had been married to James Ogilvie of Finlater, put forward a claim to certain of the abbey lands in Strathisla ; but, by the vigilance of the abbot, it was not pressed.

After this he was involved in strife with the abbot of Deer about the teinds of the lands of Fechil, on the Ythan, which were claimed by both, and after two adverse judgments, one by the heads of the Cistercian houses in Scotland, and the other by the Bishop of Aberdeen, the abbot of Deer had to yield.

A suit with the Earl of Moray touching the fishings in the Findhorn, followed ; but, seeing that might was likely to be a more powerful element in it than reason or right, the abbot compromised the matter, and obtained a renunciation of the earl's claim by a payment of money.

These secular cares, however, were not the only ones which oppressed the abbot, for he was called on to restore the decayed and almost irreligious state of the monastery. First of all he endeavoured, by his own good example, to reclaim those of the brethren who were lax ; and, where there was little hope from this, he resorted to gentle discipline. Then he increased the number of the monks, which at his coming to Kinloss did not exceed fourteen, to more than twenty.¹

He had much to do also in the restoration of churches and other buildings. At Kinloss, among other things, he repaired the chapel of St. Jerome, erecting in it three altars

¹ Of the nineteen monks whose signatures are attached to the charter of Abbot Robert Reid, dated 28th November 1537 (p. lxiv.), twelve were admitted to the order under Abbot Thomas Crystall.

—one to St. Jerome, another to St. Anne, and a third in the mortuary chapel. He placed also a great clock in the church, and a smaller one which was used as an alarm in rousing the brethren who sing lauds, etc.

He built from the foundation a tower on his barony of Strathisla, with a house at the church of Ellon, and he repaired the churches of Ellon and Avach.

In many ways he showed his great anxiety to add to the ornaments used in divine service in his monastery, bringing from France and Flanders many silver vessels and vestments. He placed three bells in the tower, of great weight and fine tone, with inscriptions to St. Mary, St. Ann, and St. Jerome. In the chapel of the Blessed Virgin he placed an altarpiece, which combined statuary with painting, having another and smaller one in the abbot's chapel for his private devotions.

Moreover, he erected a tomb for himself in this chapel, of dressed stonework.

In 1520 he sent Sir Robert Cumein to Flanders, from which he brought vestments, many of them richly wrought, consisting of copes, chasubles, dalmatics, stoles, and albs. He also procured a mitre, ornamented with gems and pearls.

In the church of Ellon he placed an altarpiece like the one first described, and added several vestments.

To the library which Robert Reid had founded the Abbot made several contributions, including the Books of the Old and New Testament in six volumes, three volumes of St. Jerome's Epistles, besides his whole works in five volumes, two volumes of St. Ambrose, four of St. Chrysostom, one of St. Gregory, one of St. Bernard, several works of St. Thomas Aquinas, and one of St. Augustine. These works, with other books, were placed in the new library for the use of the students in the monastery.

He declined several offers of preferment by the king, one of them being the abbacy of Melrose, another that of Dryburgh, and a third the see of Ross. He was vigilant in the visitations of his order throughout Scotland, and more than once he restored the Houses of Deer and Culros, which had become remiss in their rules.

At the command of James IV., and in virtue of the power committed to him, he denuded William Turnbull of his abbacy of Melrose, and obliged him to retire to Cupar.

Although hindered from his studies by the business of the monastery, he made up for it by his care in the education of more than one of the monks. For, first, he sent Sir James Pont, as a man inclined to learning, to the school of the Blackfriars in Aberdeen, which at that time enjoyed the instructions of John Adamson, a famous doctor of the Dominican order, noted for his piety and knowledge of scholastic theology. The abbot, on hearing of Pont's progress, soon sent Walter Hethon, another monk, who was also imbued with the love of study, to be instructed by the same master. After a time they were recalled to Kinloss, where Pont taught the younger brethren in scholastic questions, and to Hethon was assigned the office of cantor.

The abbot was not slack in works of piety, and both the Dominicans and Franciscans frequently received of his alms. But much more bountiful was he to men in distress, even of the humblest degree.

To such of his relations and neighbours as were worthy and frugal, he was so munificent that he might well be compared to the bishops of great sees, chiefly, however, showing his interest in providing dowries for young women, that they might be honestly married to good husbands.

While living in his tower of Strathisla during the summer of 1535, he fell into a dropsy, when he was prevailed on by his friends to call for the best medical advice. It was thus that he was visited professionally by Mr. Hector Boece, the celebrated Principal of the King's College and University at Old Aberdeen. Boece at once saw that his patient was past the hope of ultimate recovery, but he administered a few palliatives for his immediate relief.

At the approach of death the abbot frequently besought pity of the most merciful Jesus, and, moreover, he asked pardon of his attendants, if at any time he had been too harsh toward them, in the name of Him who, for us, hung on the tree. Frequently, also, he called on St. Jerome, whom he had chiefly regarded as his patron among the saints, that, cleansed from all the stains contracted in this world, he would reconcile him to the Lord Jesus. Towards the end, when speech failed him, he continued to kiss the crucifix, and, with his uplifted hands, to fortify himself with the sign of the cross. In the midst of these acts of piety he yielded up his soul to Christ on the night of the 30th

December 1535. On the following day his body was brought to Kinloss, and at night was laid in the tomb which he himself had prepared.

Robert Reid, the next Abbot, was born at Akythead, his father being John Reid, who fell at the battle of Flodden, and his mother Bessie Schanwell. He was educated at the University of St. Andrews, and resided with his uncle, Robert, official of that see. At a proper age he was elected sub-dean of Murray, and in 1526 he was selected by Abbot Crystall as his successor at Kinloss.

During the autumn of 1528 Reid, then designed Sub-dean and Official of Murray, Vicar of Gartly and Bruntkirk, and Vicar of Kirkealdy, was anointed as Abbot of Kinloss, in the church of the Greyfriars, at Edinburgh, by Gavin Dunbar, Bishop of Aberdeen, and returning to Kinloss, he was installed in the usual manner, and received the profession of the monks. He immediately revived an almost forgotten suit against the people of Forres, about part of the lands of Burgie, and gained it. By his means, also, the Abbey Lands were erected into a burgh of barony. In the year 1530 he received a gift of the Abbey of Beauily in commendam. In 1533 he was sent by the king, along with William Stuart, Bishop of Aberdeen, on an embassy to Henry VIII. for a peace between the English and Scots, which was arranged. After this he was despatched alone to the English king, and happily concluded the business entrusted to him. On various occasions he received from Henry gifts of many silver vessels. He was twice sent by the king to France on missions to Francis I., touching the marriage of King James V., first in 1535 and again in 1536.

In 1541 Reid was sent with the bishop of Aberdeen on a mission to the king of England about the disputed marches between the two kingdoms, and in the following year he was appointed by the Scotch king, along with Lord Erskine, an arbiter in the same business.

In the year 1538 he erected a spacious fireproof library at Kinloss. He brought to a favourable issue a suit begun sixty years before, against the laird of Finlater, touching some disputed ground in Strathisla, and he overcame the sheriff of Moray and the townspeople of Forres about disputed fishings in the Findhorn.

At the same time he adorned his monastery with many new buildings. In 1540 he built the nave of the church of Beauly, and restored the bell tower, which had been destroyed by lightning. In 1544 he removed the ruinous house of the prior at Beauly, and in its place he erected a noble, spacious house, with six vaults in the basement.

On the death of Robert Maxwell, Bishop of Orkney, a recommendation in favour of Reid as his successor was immediately sent to Rome by the king, in the following terms :—

“Rodulpho Cardinali Carpensi.

It will be seen from this letter that the king's design was that Reid should retain all his existing preferments, and that he should provide a pension of 800 marks to his majesty's natural son, John Stewart. No doubt this arrangement was carried out, in so far that Reid continued in the receipt of their fruits ; but his nephew Walter was admitted to the office of abbot of Kinloss in 1553,² and is spoken of by Elder as such in his letter dedicatory to Robert Reid, dated in 1558, where the latter is styled simply Bishop of Orkney.³ That he retained the title however, appears from his book-stamp, dated in the same year, wherein he styles himself abbot of Kinloss, as well as bishop of Orkney.

He brought from France a gardener who was expert in the planting and grafting of fruit trees, and who left tokens of his skill not only in the gardens of the abbey and the neighbourhood, but throughout the whole of Moray. Of him Ferrerius adds, that his only defect was the want of one of his feet, which he lost in a sea-fight against the Spaniards near Marseilles. He was also skilled in surgery, and was often applied to for the dressing of wounds by people from all parts of Moray.

In the year 1538 he invited to Kinloss a celebrated painter, Andrew Bairhum, who for three years was occupied in painting altar-pieces for three chapels in the church—namely, those of the Magdalene, St. John the Evangelist, and St. Thomas of Canterbury. He painted also, but in a lighter style, the chamber and oratory of the abbot.¹

On receiving the charge of his distant see, he soon set to work to add to and improve the cathedral buildings at Kirkwall. “He caused to be built a stately tower to the north end of the bishop's palace, where his statue, in stone, is as yet remaining, set in the wall. He greatly enlarged the cathedral church, adding three pillars to the former fabric, and decorating the entry with a magnificent porch. He moreover built St. Olaus' church in Kirkwall, and a large court of offices, to be a college for the instructing the youth of the country in grammar and philosophy. He made a new foundation of the chapter, enlarging the number of canons, prebendaries, and other offices, and settling large and ample provisions on them."¹

In 1544 we find Reid preparing for a voyage by sea from Kinloss to his diocese of Orkney, and about the same time Ferrerius, from whom we get no farther information about his patron, was arranging for his own return to France. In 1551 Reid was one of the Commissioners who arranged a peace between England and Scotland. In 1554 he was named one of the curators of the young king. In 1555 he was appointed a commissioner for the introduction of a universal standard of weights and measures. In 1556 he was sent as a commissioner to Carlisle for adjusting the disputes of the Border; and in 1558 he was despatched by the Estates to France as one of their commissioners to consent to the marriage-contract, and witness the marriage of Mary with the Dauphin of France. On his return he died at Dieppe on the 15th of September 1558.

It must not be forgotten that to the liberality of Reid is owing the foundation of the College of Edinburgh. He left 8000 marks for that purpose, whereby the magistrates of Edinburgh were enabled, in 1581, to purchase from the last Provost of the Kirk of Field the ground on which the first buildings of the University were afterwards erected.

Ferreri^{us} tells us of the library erected by Abbot Robert Reid, and of some of the books with which it was adorned, and Elder dwells on his literary tastes and his love of good books.

Of the books collected by Reid at the time of his last visit to France, two now belong to me. One is a volume of the works of Wicelius, a German divine, who at first joined Luther, but becoming disgusted, went back to his old church, for which Luther persecuted him and procured his imprisonment.

His writings seem to have commended themselves to those of the Reformed who were desirous of some comprehensive scheme which should keep in one communion the members of the Roman and Protestant Churches.

William Forbes, the first Bishop of Edinburgh, often said that if there had been more like Cassander and Wicelius, there would have been no need for Luther and Calvin; and it is interesting to find that such works engaged the attention of some of our Scotch Prelates of the old faith.

On the boards of the volume is the book-stamp of Reid.

It is of an oval shape, having in the centre the family crest of the Reids—a stag's head, surmounted by a mitre, with the motto "Moderatè" underneath. Surrounding this is the inscription. † ROBERTVS REID . EPVS . ORCHADEN . ET . ABBAS . A . KYNLOS . 1558.

The other volume, printed at Basle in 1556, contains the History of Venice by Cardinal Bembo, and has the same book-stamp on the boards.

After the death of Reid the volume of Wicelius seems to have become the property of John Leslie, then official of the see of Aberdeen, and afterwards Bishop of Ross, the well-known adherent of Queen Mary, from whom it passed by gift to William Gordon, Bishop of Aberdeen. This appears from the following inscription in a contemporary hand, "Liber Reverendi Patris Vilhelmi Gordonii, Episcopi Aberd. Ex dono Johannis Leslie, Episcopi Rossen. moderni."

Another volume, acquired by Bishop Reid at the same time, now forms an item of the great literary stores belonging to Mr. David Laing. It is entitled “Fasti et Triumphi Romae a Romulo rege usque ad Carolum V. Cæs. Aug. sive Epitome Regum, Consulium, etc. Onuphrio Panvinio, Veronensi, F. Augustiniano, auctore. Venetiis. Impensis Jacobi Stradae Mantuani. M.D.LVII.”

Walter Reid, the last abbot of Kinloss, was one of the dignitaries of the old church who subscribed the first covenant in 1560, at which time he must still have been comparatively young, as he was a student in the schools at Paris in 1558, and by him a great part of the abbey lands of Kinloss, as well as those of the priory of Beaulieu, were alienated. He married Margaret Collace, a daughter of the house of Balnamoon, by whom he had several children. On 5th July 1583 he granted a deed of demission of the abbacy of Kinloss, teinds, fishings, and profits thereof, to the end that Mr. Edward Bruce, then designed parson of Torie, might be lawfully provided thereto, reserving his own liferent. He was alive on 16th April 1585, when he granted a charter to Thomas Dundas of some acres of land about Kinloss,¹ and he was dead on 1st January 1589, when, in a submission signed by Margaret Collace, she is described as relict of Walter, abbot of Kinloss.

In virtue of deeds granted by her husband, Margaret Collace came to be possessed of the abbey of Kinloss, with portions of the abbey lands and salmon fishings, while Mr. Edward Bruce obtained a royal charter of the salmon fishings on Findhorn and others, after the Act of Annexation of Kirk lands to the Crown in 1587.¹

Under these grants a conflict of interests occurred, which led to a reference of the incident disputes to arbitration.

By the submission already referred to, 1st January 1589, betwixt Margaret Collace, relict of Walter, abbot of Kinloss, for herself, and as taking burden upon her for James, Christian, and Ann Reid, her lawful bairns gotten between the said Walter, abbot of Kinloss and her, on the one part, and Edward Bruce, now styled the abbot of Kinloss, and one of the commissaries of Edinburgh, on the other part—"they submitted to certain arbiters therein named, and to Sir John Cockburn of Ormiston, one of the senators of the College of Justice, as odsman and oversman, chosen by the said parties, all difference betwixt the parties, and their several rights to the precinct of Kinloss, and salmon fishings of the same;" and on 19th March following a decret-arbital was pronounced by Cockburn, whereby it was found that the said Margaret Collace and her heirs had right to the mains of Kinloss, the lands of Muirtoun, with the mansion-house thereof, the town and lands of Findhorn, with the fishings thereof, and salmon fishings on the said river; and the said Margaret Collace, for 3600 merks paid to her by the said Edward Bruce, was ordained to transfer to him her right to the salmon fishings called the stells, on the water of Findhorn, and also to “void and red” to him the mansion and manor-place of the abbey of Kinloss, etc., and to deliver to him the common seal thereof, “because she granted the same to be in her hands;”—all which she did by a procuratory of resignation on 16th April 1608, in favour of the said Edward then Lord Bruce of Kinloss.¹

On 2d February 1601, a charter was granted to the said Edward Bruce, designed commendator of Kinloss, by the Crown, erecting the barony of Kinloss, and other lands of the abbey, into a temporal lordship and barony, to be called the lordship and barony of Kinloss.

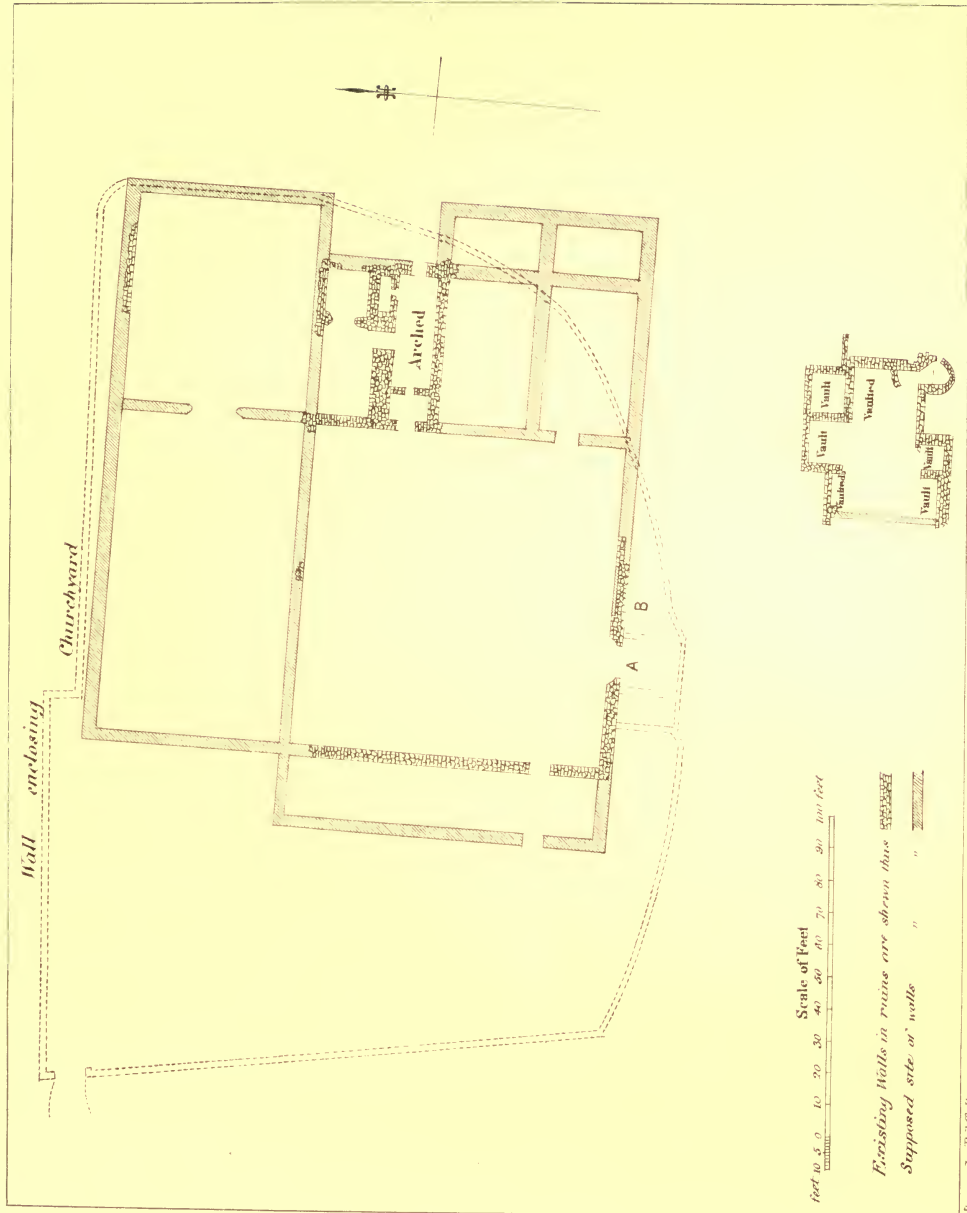

In 1604, by a patent dated on 8th July of that year, the King created Sir Edward Bruce, Master of the Rolls, Lord Bruce of Kinloss, with voice and seat in the Parliaments of Scotland. This deed is remarkable for having passed under the Great Seal of England as well as of Scotland; on which Mr. Riddell, by whom the patent was brought to light, remarks: “The double form may have been somewhat in keeping with the status of the patentee, as in his monumental inscription, which is still extant in the Rolls Chapel, he prides himself upon being et Scotus et Anglus, owing to his Anglo-Scottish Bruce descent.”²

He obtained from the Crown a new charter of erection of the same subjects on 3d May 1608, with the title, order, honour, and state of a free baron and lord of Parliament, under his title of Lord Bruce of Kinloss.³

Drawn by P. M. Ken. PLAN OF KINLOSS ABBEY, MORAYSHIRE

He was succeeded, in 1611, by his son Edward, second Lord Bruce of Kinloss, whose memory will ever be connected with the duel between him and Sir Edward Sackville, in which he lost his life.

At his death, in 1617, his brother Thomas came to the succession as third Lord Kinloss, and in 1633 he was created Earl of Elgin.

By him the abbey of Kinloss, with salmon fishings on Findhorn, were conveyed to Alexander Brodie of Lethen, in 1643. It is said that at this time considerable portions of the monastic buildings remained entire, but that they were ruined in 1650, when part of the walls were sold by the laird of Lethen as materials for building the citadel of Inverness, while another part was used in the erection of farm-offices by one of his descendants.¹

It would seem that the chapter-house of the abbey had been used from the Reformation to this time as a place of worship, and that, after the other parts of the fabric had been taken down for removal to Inverness, it was proposed also to remove the chapter-house. This gave rise to some proceedings in the Presbytery of Elgin, with the view of saving the chapter-house, seeing "it is agreed that there shall be a church and special parish erected for Kinloss and the people thereabouts, who are now almost without the means of the gospel." The answer given by the laird of

Lethen was, "That it was against his will that these stones were taken away, and he agreed to build a manse and church with the money he received for the stones of the abbey, and also to give a sufficient glebe off the lands of Kinloss."

There still remain a few ruined walls and arches of the monastery to keep up the memory of its old magnificence; and the dykes of the neighbouring farms bear witness that all the carved stones were not carried to Inverness.

It is not easy now to reconstruct a ground-plan of the abbey, but Mr. M'Bey, land surveyor, Elgin, has been so good as make the attempt, and a copy of his sketch is now given at page lviii.

The character of the arches remaining in the south walls¹ will readily be understood from the heliotype impressions of photographs by Mr. Anderson of Elgin. It may be inferred from the mouldings that these arches form part of the original structure.

Part of what I have just referred to are the ruins of a large house, known as the Abbot's House, of which a gable and circular tower on the south-east are still standing. Perhaps these may be ascribed to the year 1537, when, among the improvements then recorded, we read of "identidem ad fornices magni cubiculi abbatis cum aulae suae instauratione" (p. 51).

Above the doorway of the tower is a sculptured stone, bearing the arms of Robert Reid, and the letters R. R., as

By another charter, dated at Elgin 23d January 1589, the said Mr. Alexander Dunbar, with consent of Katherine Reid, his spouse, conveyed in favour of their son Robert Dunbar, whom failing, to his brother-german, Thomas Dunbar, whom failing, to the heirs of the said Robert, the lands of Burgie, with the mansion and garden thereof, also Littill Burgie, otherwise called Lowriestoun, and Bogharbrie, reserving the granter's liferent.¹

In the old tower of Burgie is a carved stone, quartering on a shield the arms of Dunbar with those of Reid, with the letters A. D. and K. R., for Alexander Dunbar and Katherine Reid. Under a belt, surrounding the shield, are the letters R. In 1587 he set forth that "he is becum subject to sindrie infirmeties in his persoun, sua he is not able to continew in the service, albeit gude will inlakes not;" and in that year he was succeeded as judge by a brother of the Laird of Raith. He died in 1593. (Senators of the College of Justice, p. 103 Edinb. 1849.)

motto, MANET IMMUTABILE VIRTUS. The date, "1602 ZEIRIS," is probably a later addition, as Alexander Dunbar died in 1593; and the stone may be the record of additions to the tower completed about the time when the charter in favour of Robert Dunbar was granted.

The above woodcut, from a photograph by Mr. Anderson, is a representation of this stone; and in the walls surrounding the modern house of Burgie other carved stones, of a somewhat later date, formerly in the old tower, have been inserted.

The possessions of the priory of Beaully were alienated by Abbot Walter in the year 1571.¹

To the charter of "the debateable lands," granted by Abbot Robert Reid in 1537, are appended the subscriptions of the abbot, and nineteen monks, some of whom are noticed in Ferrerius' Life of Abbot Thomas Crystall.

Two of the subscribers are John Smyth and Adam Elder, and all the signatures are represented in the annexed facsimile, carefully prepared by Messrs. Johnston.

Smyth was admitted to the order by Abbot Thomas, and he is described by Ferrerius as "nuper superior jam monachorum confessor, simul et bursarius." The Chronicle written by him, and now for the first time printed, begins at the creation, and after recording some of the remarkable events in the history of the Jews and Romans, the missions of St. Palladius and St. Patrick, the coming to England of the Saxons, the mission of St. Augustine, the advent of the relics of St. Andrew into Scotland (A.D. 661), he comes to the time of Malcolm Canmore, whose ascent to the throne is noted, as well as his marriage and the birth of his children. After that occur the dates of the foundation of various monasteries, and of many battles, skirmishes, and national events, probably gleaned from Fordun and Bocce.

When the writer comes near to his own day the entries are fuller. Thus, in 1515, he narrates the details of John Gordon's breaking into the church at Kinloss, and in 1517 his burial there, "ubi fieri solet cerei paschalis benedictio."

In 1529 we hear of the fine books brought from France by Robert Reid, at the request of his predecessor.

In 1534 we have the burning of the tower of Daviot by the Mackintoshes, and the horrible slaughter in the church of Dyke, with the sanguinary measures against the clan Chattan to which they led.

In 1542 the writer records the death of his father, John Smyth, and, two years later, that of his mother, Janet Dawson; both of whom were buried in the chapel of St. Lawrence. In 1544 he records the burial of James, Earl of Moray, at Kinloss, before the high altar, in the middle space between the "gradus confessionis," and where the paschal candle stands.

In 1513 Abbot Thomas furnished the church with an Epistolarium and many vestments; and added farther gifts of the same description in 1520.

In July 1528 an unprecedented inundation at Kinloss is recorded, which filled the refectory, the chapter-house, and the cloister, with water.

In 1529 Robert Reid assumed the Cistercian habit at the hands of the Bishop of Aberdeen, after which he came to Kinloss, and received the profession of the monks; and there was an earthquake in this year.

In November the cloister of Kinloss was reconciled by the Bishop of Ross, who blessed the greater eucharist. The pestilence prevailed this year in St. Andrews, and at Edinburgh in the following one.

In 1541 a violent wind destroyed the bell-tower and the bells at Beauly, and caused much damage throughout Ross and Moray.

In 1545 the pestilence was again general, many of all ages being carried off by its ravages, as well as divers monks, among whom was John Johnson, of the order of Friars minor in Edinburgh.

In 1547 the fatal fight of Pinkie is recorded. In 1553 the cloister of Kinloss was again reconciled by the Bishop of Orkney; and in the same year Abbot Walter received the profession of the monks. Ten days afterwards he was solemnly inducted and blessed by the bishop of Orkney, in presence of the lairds of Innes, Duffus, Waterton, and Auchterellon.

In July of the year 1556 a storm of thunder and lightning occurred, with such hail as was heretofore unknown in the country, destroying crops, cattle, and houses in Inveravon and Strathisla, as well as other parts of the country.

Finally occurs the entry, in another hand, of the death of John Smyth, the writer of the diary, on 17th December 1557, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, describing him as a man of the highest probity and religious zeal. He was buried near to his parents, fronting the entrance of the chapel of St. Lawrence and St. Bernard, where he used to celebrate while living.

The MS. volume in the Harleian collection, in which the Chronicle occurs, is a transcript of the sixteenth century. It contains in the beginning several documents dated in 1534, connected with a visitation of the monastery of Melrose, and the reform of the vice of possessing private property, of which the monks were accused.

The conclusion of one of the answers given to the commissioners by the monks, betokens a declension from the original fervour and strictness of the Cistercians, "Sequitur quod ad stricciorem vivendi modum, seu ad istam innovationem simulate reformationis, minime tenemur, quum sufficiat bene vivere, et ad perfeccionem tendere, non autem perfecti esse, juxta psalmistam 'Declinando a malo et faciendo bonum.'"

This is followed, at folio 18, by copies of records relative to the institution, in 1532, of "ane college of cunnyng and wyse men" by James V. for the administration of justice in all civil actions, after which occur various orders and regulations connected with the mode of procedure. At folio 44 Smyth's Chronicle begins,¹ and goes on to folio 60, after which is the office of the Mass; the concluding entry, in another hand, being "Obiit Andreas Baxstar, anno 1569, 27 Martii, et sepultus in templo 28 ejusdem."

Robert Reid was appointed one of the judges of the Supreme Court, at its first meeting, in place of Robert Schanwell, vicar of Kirkealdy, his uncle, and it is not unlikely that the different manuscripts in the volume had originally formed part of Reid's collections.

Adam Elder, the author of the Chapter Discourses, is mentioned first of all as "juvenis optimus," when he was admitted a monk by Abbot Robert Reid. He fell considerably in the estimation of Ferrerius, at least for a time, when the misunderstanding, already noticed, occurred between them about the gift of a book by Ferrerius to one of the monks of Beaulieu.

That he was selected by the Bishop of Orkney as tutor to his nephew, the boy abbot, is no small testimony to his capacity and worth. In the beginning of 1558, while engaged in the oversight of the youthful prelate in his studies at Paris, he addressed to his uncle the bishop a dedicatory epistle, prefixed to his printed volume of discourses. From this we find that two of his letters, written about six months previously, had miscarried, and that in these he had conveyed to the bishop a very favourable report of the progress made in his studies by the Abbot Walter, both in the Greek and Latin languages, and in philosophy, as well as of his exemplary conduct in general. In them he had also requested the bishop to send to Paris the manuscript which he had left at Kinloss of certain chapter discourses delivered by him when a youth, and while he was occupied with the studies of the novices at Kinloss and Beaulieu. After waiting for upwards of a year, however, and when he had given up all hope of receiving his discourses, he was surprised to get a fragment of the collection, sent apparently without the bishop's orders or knowledge, and so mutilated and blotted that he could hardly recognise his own work. He was easily induced, by the approval of others, to arrange and print those which remained, although less full and well ordered than in their original shape, while his gratitude to the bishop prompted him to dedicate the work to him, not as if such a trifling work could add anything to a name already so bright, but that he might testify his gratitude to one to whom, after God, he owed at once himself and all that he had. (Appendix to the preface, p. 66.)

Scotch pre-Reformation discourses are so rare that I have thought it permissible to print two of Elder's, as specimens of his work. In the first, delivered on the festival of St. Bernard, the author gives a sketch of the life of this great saint. He then proceeds to exhort his pupil, the youthful abbot, as his reverend father, to fulfil the duties of his office. These, he says, were arduous and weighty, reminding him that he had of his own will assumed the care of many souls, of which, as well as of his own soul, he would at last have to render a strict account to God. He tells him how great would be his danger if he did not improve the talent committed to him, and exhorts him so to direct all his actions that it may be well with him at last. For his models he advises him to look in the first place to St. Benedict and St. Bernard; but as even St. Bernard failed to persuade many of the abbot's rank while he was alive, so he will pass over the old Fathers, and hold up to his imitation the example of a living one—their Reverend Father Robert, Bishop of Orkney. He then portrays in detail the character of this prelate, both in its public and private aspect, and shows how consistently good he was in all things. He reminds his auditors how the good bishop lived in retirement, when he could be free from the cares and necessary occupations which beset him; how he enjoyed the reading of the Scriptures, realising in daily meditation the sweetness of the Lord, and storing himself with the food which he might impart to his sheep. Possessed of the honours and riches of this world, he used them all as one who had to give account; he was neither puffed up by them, nor did he set his heart on them. He recalls to their minds, from the experience of many years, the Bishop's fatherly care and tenderness towards the stranger and the desolate; and, addressing the young abbot, he asks him what all this is but to be a true monk—to be in the world, but to renounce worldly things. He then dwells on a few of the traits of the Bishop's goodness, such as his works of charity to the poor, his settling dowries on young women of humble fortune,¹ that they might be settled in honour-

¹ An instance of this kind of liberality of Bishop Robert Reid is preserved in a contract of marriage between Alexander Dunbar, Dean of Murray, and Katherine Reid, dated 10th February 1561, whereby Walter, abbot of Kinloss, on the ground of the intended marriage between the said Alexander, able marriage; his munificent support of promising youths in following out their studies; his own great love of literature, and his sympathy with those who cultivated it. He recommended the abbot to make use of the library which the Bishop had founded at Kinloss; for the bishop, among his works of improvement, decorating churches, castles, and other buildings, regarded before all, good books, and still continued, without thought of expense, to collect them. He concludes with a renewed exhortation to the abbot to imitate his good uncle; encouraging him with the thought that if he will do so he will possess a family of sons in Christ, not only vigilant and obedient but mindful of his labours and watchings; who, while they lived, would pray for him to Christ the Chief Shepherd, not ceasing to sing—

Ergo pia ob studia et magnos durosque labores

 Concedatque tuis succedant omnia votis:
 Et bona successus adjuvet aura tuos.

and Katherine, the abbot's sister, became bound to infest the latter and her heirs in the lands of West Grange, in the barony of Kinloss. Katherine was also provided in certain sums of money as tocher, "and that by and attour the one thousand merks, the quhilke the said Katherine hes, siller in her awin hand, left to tocher be ane reverend Fader in God umquhile Robert, Bischopp of Orkney, her Fader-brither."—(Extract of the contract of marriage, in the possession of Captain E. Dunbar-Dunbar of Seapark.) Helen Reid, a sister of Katherine, was mother of Adam Blackwood, the antagonist of Buchanan, and defender of Queen Mary. Blackwood having lost both his parents while he was a youth, the Bishop of Orkney undertook the charge of his education, and sent him to the University of Paris. (Lives of Scottish Writers, by Dr. Irving, vol. i. p. 162.)

The second discourse was delivered on the feast of Corpus Christi, and led the teacher, in the course of it, to denounce the doctrines which he attributes to Luther, Zuingle, Bucer, and other “diaboli ministri fidelissimi.”¹

The history of the abbey is rendered remarkable by two visits paid to it by King Edward I. of England, and his grandson King Edward III.

The first monarch, after over-running the north of Scotland, reached Kinloss in September 1303, where he remained for ten days.

During his stay there the king issued various letters and writs, ranging in date from the 19th to the 23d of September,² but the principal feature of his visit handed down in the traditions of the monastery is the consumption by the English of sixty chalders of malt in the brewing of ale.³

It was at the time of his march to relieve the beleagured countess of Atholl and her garrison in the castle of Lochindorb, and after raising the siege, that Edward III.

The title of Elder's volume is, “*Adami Senioris, Scoti, Monachi Ordinis Cisterciensis, Monasterii Kynlossensis, ad Reuerendum in Christo Patrem ac Dominum, Dominum Robertum Reid, Orchardum Præsulem, Strenae, sive Conciones Capitulares. reached the abbey of Kinloss, on the 12th of July 1336. Here he found store of wine, ale, salted fish, corn, and other necessaries, from which the English were, according to a contemporary account, “refecti et non modicum consolati”¹—benefits which they ill requited by burning the town of Forres and all the surrounding country.

The rental of the abbey of Kinloss, and of the Priory of Beaulieu, is printed from the Register of the Assumption of Benefices in the General Register House. We may infer from the following memorandum annexed to the rental in the Register, that it was not regarded as altogether satisfactory:—“Remember my Lord Comptrollare to speir the rental of thir tua, Kynlos and Bewlie, bettir, for they ar suspicious anent the fischingis.”

Ferrerijs has recorded the acquisition of many silver vessels by the abbots—“phialæ,” “calices,” and “seyphi.” He also describes the many silver “vasa” given to Robert Reid by Henry VIII.

Some of these are probably referred to in the following notice by Shaw,² where he says:—“I find in the writings of the family of Westfield that the abbot had a process of spulzie against Sir Alexander Dunbar of Westfield, who died 1576, for taking out of the abbey a laver weighing 240 ounces of silver, and twenty-two feather beds, with other pieces of plate and furniture.”

² History of the Province of Moray, p. 257. Lond. 1775.

It is probable that others of the silver vessels were acquired by Mr. Edward Bruce, who, as we have seen, got possession of the abbey and lands, and was ennobled as Lord Kinloss.

He accompanied King James into England, and attained a position of great importance and wealth at his court. In the library at Auchinleck is a "particular inventorie of the movables, houshald stuf, plait, and plencising" of his house, at the time of his departure for England, drawn up in 1610.

"It is curious to think," says Mr. Innes, "that the scyphi, the calices, the phialæ, the pride of many an old abbot of Kinloss, may figure as the basins, lavers, and flagons of the inventory of the lay lord; while the 'Turkey carpets,' and 'Irische rougs' for his tables and cupboards, may once have adorned the altars of the monastery."—(Histor. Abbat. Pref. p. 11.)

The abbots of Kinloss were mitred, and their names occur frequently in record from the beginning of the 13th century downwards.

The following notices of the earlier abbots are given by Mr. Innes, in correction of those furnished by Ferrerius, who is the only authority in regard to the later abbots.

The first abbot was Ascelinus, who died in 1174.¹

Reinerius, a monk of the mother house of Melros, succeeded. He was subsequently chosen abbot of Melros in 1188.²

On the promotion of Reinerius, Radulphus the prior

was made abbot of Kinloss. He is styled in the Chronicle of Melros "third abbot of Kynlos," which excludes the supposed Abbot Andrew of Ferrerius. Like his predecessor, he was afterwards elected abbot of Melros, and left Kinloss in 1194.¹

Abbot Ralph was probably succeeded by another of the same name, since we find "Radulphus de Kinlos" among the excommunicated Cistercian abbots in 1218.²

Herbertus was abbot of Kinloss in 1229,³ who resigned the office—vir grandævus—in 1251.⁴

Richard was the next abbot. He died in England on his return from attending the chapter of his order at Citeaux, in 1274.⁵

His successor was Andrew, prior of the monastery of Newbotle.⁶

Father Hay⁷ asserts that Richard, abbot of Kinloss did homage to Edward in 1296. He does not give his authority.

In 1316 we find Thomas Abbot of Kinloss.⁸

been preserved, and that we have only access to gleanings of its early muniments. Of what remains, however, it may be said that some of the early charters now printed, with their curious boundaries, possess features of unusual interest ; while it may be doubted if there is elsewhere to be found so much authentic illustration of Scottish monastic life as is preserved in the Notices of the Abbots of Kinloss, by Ferrerius, with the Chronicle and Chapter discourses of two of the monks, included in the present volume.

In its preparation the Editor has received aid and information in different quarters, which in some cases has been already acknowledged. He is indebted to Captain Dunbar-Dunbar of Seapark for information on various points of local interest, and to Mr. P. M'Bey, land-surveyor, Elgin, for the ground-plan of Kinloss, which, although to some extent conjectural, was prepared after a survey of the ruins, and the indistinct vestiges of foundations still to be traced. He has also to thank Mr. Thomas Dickson, of H. M. General Register House, for many kind services in the examination of records and otherwise.

a proditoribus de medio esse sublatum. Et non solum illic regni proceres verum eciam nonnulli ecclesiastici, quod gravius ferendum est, ut Episcopus Sancti Andree, filius ipsius Jacobi quarti, et Episcopus Insularum, qui et commendatarius erat monasterii de Abirbrot, perierunt, Abbas de Incheschawfra et sacrifici inferiores quamplurimi.

Anno domini M^o v^o xv., mensis Decembris xxvij^o die, Johannes Gordon vocatus dominus de eodem et futurus comes de Huntlie, ut sperabatur licet cassum, ecclesiam de Kynlos sub silencio noctis intravit cum satellitibus suis, vestibuli ostium violenter illisit, ac de eodem vestibulo quedam [rapuit] illic reposita, non cenobii sed indigenarum secularium patrie, uti compertum habuit a quodam olim monasterii assecta. Quod sibi ut nephas statim ut cor ejus compunctum erat compertum est. Et ideo a legato de latere, ea tempestate episcopo Sancti Andree, beneficium absolutionis pro excommunicatione peccit, et ad Kynlos manibus ejus litteras absolutorias ab episcopo impetratas deportavit, ac 2^m earundem tenorem suppliciter absolvi poposcit: quod et factum est.

Anno domini M^o v^o xvij^o *Johannes*¹ dominus de Gordon predictus in Kynlos obiit v^o Decembris, et est sepultus ubi fieri solet cerci paschalis benedictio.

Anno domini M^o v^o xxij^o Andreas Forman, legatus de latere et episcopus Sancti Andree, in Quadragesima diem clausit extremum, et commendatarius fuit de Dumfermlyn, et Pettynveyne.

Anno domini M^o v^o xxxiiij Makkyntoche fortalicium de Davioth combussit post Pascha, quem comes Moravie auctoritate regis extorrem ac proditorem regni in Invernes pronunciavit statim post scelus hoc perpetratum, qui ex hoc animo concitatus Moraviam cum complicibus venit ac in parochia de Dyk enormius piaculum commisit, quindecim perimens homines viros mulieres ac innubiles virgines deseerans. Et plurimam terre de Brode predam deripiens confestim redit ad propria, et hoc in nocte precedente vigiliam Penthecostes.

Anno eodem comes Moravie ex mandato Regis, sibi adjuncto comite de Huntlie aliisque nobilibus, citra aquam de Spei, terram de Clanhattayne intrarunt ac devastarunt, undique datis neci hujus progeniei plurimis qui diversis interiorum ad numerum tercentorum. Et fratrem capitanei ad Fores deportarunt cum sibi, adjuncto complice nobili, uti tenuerunt illi, ubi decapitatis utrisque membratim fratrem diviserunt et caput stipite in pretorii fine locaverunt. Tempore illo capitaneus ille compulsus est regi sese dedere ductu comitis Archadie, fratris comitisse Moravie, qui eum detrudi fecit in Edinburgi fortalicio, donec incentores sui ad illud nephas peragendum manifestaret et consiliaboli secretum panderet.

Anno domini M^o v^c xxxiiij conciliata sunt regna Scocie et Anglie pro regum existencium temporibus, legatis Episcopo Aberdenensi thesaurario regis, et abbate Roberto¹ de Kynlos, aliisque probis viris e regno electis a rege et aliis primoribus regni, ad Anglie regem missis. Deinde perfectis negociis et finem optatum potiti sani redierunt Scociam, quos secutus est Anglie legatus ut pacem firmaret juramento regis, qui benigne susceptus omnia petita fauste percipiens, insuper et munera benevolencie gratia a rege accipiens, lubens redit ad propria.

Anno domini M^o v^c xxxiiij Robertus¹ Abbas de Kynlos, xiiij Julii, missus est a Rege ut reconciliationis federa Regis Anglie juramento confirmaret, qui benigne susceptus ac munifice muneribus honoratus redit ad propria.

Item memorie commendandum quod Thomas Abbas de Kynlos fecit Robertum abbatem, ejus successorem, de Gallis plures probos libros secum deferre anno domini M^o v^c xxix, quorum nomina sunt in registro.

Anno gratie M^o v^c xxxiiij combusti sunt duo heretici in Edinburgo, in fine mensis Augusti, et nonnulli fautores hereticorum e regno pulsati ac eorum substantia confiscata est erariis regis.

Anno gratie j^m v^c xlijo, et xiiij die Decembris, obiit Jacobus quintus in Fawkland et sepultus est in monasterio Sancte Crucis in Edinburgo.

Anno j^m v^c xlijo, vjo Januarii, obiit Johannes Smyth. Et anno xliij et xvij^o Augusti obiit Joneta Dawson uxor ejus, qui sepulti sunt ante capellam sancti Laurentii.

Anno domini M^o v^c xliiijo, et 3^o Maii, viz. : sabbato, Angli intrarunt Scociam, tam per mare quam per terram, cum ingenti exercitu ad xv^m et pro majori parte destruxerunt et spoliaverunt Letham et Edinburgum et monasterium Sancte Crucis et palacium regis, et Newbotill et multa alia fortificia.

Anno domini M^o v^c xliiij, et xxix^o Decembris, obiit Jacobus Stewart, comes Moraviensis, filius Jacobi Stewart Regis quarti regni Scocie, nobilissimus comes, qui sua prudencia, sua scientia, sua liberalitate et sua maxima justicia regebat et gubernavit totum regnum tocius Scocie, qui obiit anno etatis sue xlix^o et honorifice sepultus est in Kynlos ante majus altare in medio pavimento, infra paschale et gradum confessionis.

Anno M^o v^c xlvo, xx^o Septembris, Angli intrarunt Scociam, et invaserunt et destruxerunt et combusserunt monasterium de Melros, monasterium de Kelsocht, de Drybrocht, et monasterium de Gedvard et Heddintoun, et intrarunt ad numerum xxx milia.

Anno M^o v^c xlvo, ultimo Novembris, obiit Robertus Carneors, episcopus Rossensis, et sepultus est in eadem ecclesia cathedrali.

Cardinalis Scocie.

Anno domini M^o v^c xlvjo, et xxix^o die Maii, interfectus fuit proditorie venerabilis pater David Betoune, cardinalis episcopus Sancti Andree, legatus a latere et abbas de Arbrotht, a Normando Leslie, magistro de Roththeis et domino de Grange, cum suis satellitibus.

Anno domini M^o v^c 13^o reportavit dominus Thomas Abbas monasterii de Kynlos epistolarium, quod wlgariter dicitur the pastail. Anno domini M^o v^c 15 reparavit ecclesiam cum vestimento de bruno ly welwus, et vestimento de blodio ly welwus, et vestimento de blodio ly dammes, et ante hoc aliis duobus vestimentis, uno de rubeo ly dammes, et altero albo ly chamlet, cum duabus cappis, et altero vestimento nigro pro defunctis cum duabus cappis. Anno Domini M^o v^c xx^o reparavit dominus Thomas abbas de Kynlos ecclesiam ejusdem vestimento aureo cum cappa aurea et eucharistea argentea paulo ante.

Anno domini M^o v^c xxviijo, primo die Julii, facta est inundacio aque in Kynlos insolita, ita ut superflueret hortum coquine, molendini, et quosdam alios, sed in eodem anno in translacione sancti Benedicti inopinately excessit, ita ut aqua impleret refectorium, capitulum, claustrum, et alias officinas, ita ut nunquam tale quid prius visum fuerit in hoc loco, et ustrinum devastaret, et brasium in eodem madefaceret, et usui solito ineptum redderet.

Anno M^o v^c xxix^o, in translatione sancti Benedicti, Magister Robertus Red,¹ subdecanus et officialis Moravie, et vicarius de Gartle et Bruntkyrk, et vicarius de Kyrkcaldy, recepit habitum Cisterciensem in Edinburgo ab episcopo Aberdenensi, et benedictus ab eodem venit ad Kynlos, et receptus honorifice ut decebat 2^o die Augusti a monachis, et eorum obediencias secundum tenorem bullarum summi pontificis recepit, et vj^o die post hoc cantavit missam solempniter. Item factus est terremotus eodem anno, in octavo die assumptionis beatissime Virginis, quasi in tota Scotia sexta hora diei in aurora. * 27^o Novembris, anno 1541, idem Robertus Reid creatus est episcopus Orcadensis, ac consecratus in loco minorum Edinburgi, in prima dominica adventus Domini. Statimque postea missus est legatus cum ceteris oratoribus ad Henricum 8, regem Anglorum.*²

Anno domini M^o v^c xxix^o, xvij^o Novembris, claustrum de Kynlos reconciliabatur per magistrum Jacobum Hay, episcopum Rossensem, et benedixit eucharistiam majorem.

Item eodem anno grassabatur pestilencia in Sancto Andrea, et in sequenti anno in Edinburgo.

Anno domini M^o v^c xlj^o, et 2^o Januarij, grassabatur maximus et vehementissimus ventus, cum ingenti pluvia, qui distruxit campanile de Bewle et campanas ejusdem, et fecit maximum dampnum tam in Rossia quam in Moravia.

Anno M^o v^c xlvo, xxiiij^o Junii, grassabatur pestilentia in Edinburgo, Leytht, Newbottill, Dundee, Aberdonia, et in multis aliis burgis et villis Scocie, et perierunt in eadem pestilencia quam plurimi homines, mulieres et parvuli et diversi religiosi.

Item in eadem pestilencia obiit frater Thomas Jhonesone ordinis minorum in Edinburgo.

Anno domini jm^o v^c xlviij^o, x mensis Septembris, confictus de Pynk kynglewcht, seu Buklybrays, apud Mussibrew^t, inter Scotos et Anglos,

LIFE OF ABBOT THOMAS CRYSTALL, WITH APPENDIX ON HIS DEATH	17
LIFE OF ABBOT ROBERT REID	49

AD LECTOREM.

OPTIME lector, si forte istie picturatam magis requiras orationem, memineris nos theatro nunc inservire maluisse, quam tibi in omnibus morem gerere : sic melius acquius in alienis vigiliis censuram feres, ac valebis.

Reverendo in Christo Patri, Domino Thomae
Crystallo Abbati Monasterii A Kynlos Cister-ciensis Instituti Patrono suo Singulari, Joannes Ferrerius Pedemontanus. S. P. D.

VETUS consuetudo, Reverende Domine, a priscis et ethnicis viris repetita ac quasi tradita per manus in nostram usque aetatem derivata, obtinuit ut Calendis Januariis alius alium, veluti publico salutarique auspicio inceptantis anni, strena amicoque donario honestaret. Id cum saepiuscule ante paucos dies in animo volutarem meo, et tuam erga me benignitatem circumferrem in pectore effigiatam perpetuo; decrevi tandem si qua arte possim, non dico me acre tuo obstrictum resolvere, saltem munusculo aliquo litterario (quid aliud queam?) mei animi erga te candorem significare. Nec satis occurrebat quid primum aggrederer tuae dignitati aptissimum, et meis studiorum laboribus honorificum quoque. In primis virtus tua, cum in privatis tum publicis negociis praecellens maxime, hortabatur ut vires intenderem in re quapiam graviore; nisi temporis angustiae mihi modum indixissent. Ita mecum reputabam, qui velit tantum operis moliri, cum non solum grandi ocio, sed temporis spacio longiore uti oportere; mihi vero incumbere ut extemporaneo aliquo munusculo tuam erga me liberalitatem ignotam multis (ne forte nimio silentio, ingrati- tudinis notam incurrerem) nunc testatissimam facerem. Dabitur alias opportunitas, ut majore spiritu tuas ac alumni tui Roberti abbatis virtutes amplissimas in commentarium mittamus. In praesentia tamen non ineptum visum est consilium, si tuorum in constituendo monasterio a Kynlos laborum toto tuo decursu, brevi et tumultuario compendio immortalitati (quantum per me fieri potest) consecrarem. Indignum sane facinus si, in tanta bonorum studiorum nunc luce, illustrium virorum gesta et magnifice facta per oscitantiam obliterentur. Quot putat olim Reverentia tua non solum apud exteros, sed etiam in Scotia viros percelebres, episcopos, abbates, et hujusmodi fuisse, egregiorum operum authores, quorum nomina, scriptorum ignavia vel potius carentia, ignorantur! Probabile est, hoc tuum monasterium ab initio per tot secula cum monachos tum abbates laudatissimos habuisse: et tamen nunc vix abbatum sex nomina rite tenetis. Tanta est temporis vicissitudo ut magnae etiam locorum structurae nomen clarissimi viri in aliquot secula proferre non valeant. Tempore sepeliuntur imperia et regna, immensa propugnacula, civitates amplissimae, structura mirabili excitata templa, et quid non? Nihil est tam operosum ut temporum injuria aliquando non concidat. Solum literarum beneficium ita in posteros propagari potest, ut nunquam, quae sunt alicujus momenti, aeterna oblivione opprimantur. Quanta statim ab orbe condito per omnem gentem magnifice gesta tenemus: quae, sine literis, ignoratione perpetua contegerentur? Literis vetus ac nova divinarum rerum historia invulgata est, constitutae respublicae et multiplex religionum hominum institutum. Quis non miretur divi Hieronymi tui et cacterorum patrum acta? At hoc ipsum sine literis nusquam constaret. Non tantum igitur humana, sed divina quoque, ne quando perfluant, literarum beneficio continentur. Hac ratione permotus ego, in tuae virtutis commendationem nunquam intermorituram huic perbrevis commentario manum admovi. Quod si est hujusmodi, ut aetatem perferre et literatorum judicia possit;

in meorum cumulum bonorum et hanc ingenii praecipitam foeturam adnumeraverim; sin minus, tibi tamen (ut cui plurimum debemus) hoc labore gratificari voluimus. Quicquid tamen fuerit, aequi boni consules, majora elucubratoriaque interdum per occasionem quandam accepturus. Interea, pientissimus Jesus te nobis integrum et diutissime restitutum servet. Bene vale, domine observandissime.

Apud Monasterium tuum a Kynlos pridie calendas Januarii 1535, calculo vero romano 1536.

ABBOT THOMAS CRYSTALL.

THOMAS, apud Culross honesto loco natus, parentes habuit cum frugales tum pios, ex Crystallorum vetere satis familia; qui cum viderent cum bonae spei puerum statim adhuc impuberem una cum germano suo Andrea natu majore literis ac moribus formandum tradiderunt. Erat tum temporis in monasterio a Culross vir in primis religione ornatissimus, et (ut ferebat illa actas, ad meliores literas rudior) in elementis grammaticis bene doctus dominus Thomas cognomento Person, ejusdem monasterii professor (ut vocant) monachus. Huic traditus est cum fratre a parentibus Thomas. Et ut erat capacissimo ingenio puer, ita animum ad imbibendas literas quam lubens admovit, ac parvo temporis curriculo tantum promovit discendo, ut aequales suos omnes, etiam germanum Andream multo spacio anteverteret. Id quum viderent parentes, nec latere posset divinum ingenium, majorem jam tum spem de puero concipientes, amicorum etiam hortatu e scholis grammaticorum (praeproperè tamen) revellunt, et ad praxim musicam comparandam transponunt; sive tum illi ita existimarint cum posse hac via in gradum aliquem ecclesiasticum invadere, sive (quod magis crediderim) Divini Numinis benignitas ad ea quae sequuta sunt illum sic destinarat. Cum esset igitur Thomas in aetate adhuc illa teneriuscula, non ineptum hominem et in musicis peritissimum, Gulielmum Rait virum laicum et abbatis a Culross fratrem germanum audivit. Apud hunc paucis mensibus in tantum profecit, ut facile videretur a natura illic deduci. Habebat pro voto canoram simul et crispantem vocem, ac nullo conatu cum suis aequalibus ita modulabatur, ut multos spectatae dignitatis viros ad se amandum induxerit. Primum illius loci abbas dominus Jacobus Rait (ut cui de puero essent notissima omnia (impense egit de Thoma in suorum monachorum numero recipiendo. At parum favit illi fortuna, ita Superis rem temperantibus. Paulo post vir cum dignitate tum religione insignis dominus Joannes Schanwell abbas monasterii a Cupro, ubi de puero audivisset, non segniter quidem ille, attamen volente Deo frustra, elaboravit ut sibi suoque monasterio traderetur. Cupiebat enim, cum altero egregiae indolis adolescentulo bene literato Alexandro Heton, in suum monasterium Thomam cooptare; et erant confecta pene omnia nisi solers prudentia divini hominis domini Gulielmi Galbreth abbatis a Kynlos obstitisset. Nam cum ex officio et autoritate sua abbatem a Culross ac totam illam sodalitatem, ut si quid nutaret in ordinem cogeret cura sua pastoralis, saepiuscule inviseret, offendit Thomam jam alteri pene addictum. Tamen, quia res erat hujusmodi, ut in diversum citra omnem injuriam flecti posset, curavit vir optimus ut rebus suis in primis consuleret. Tentatis omnibus, adolescentulum Thomam ad se venire jubet; quem cum vidisset liberali facie et quadam senili prudentia ornatum, statim adamavit, egitque cum parentibus et illius loci abbate ut suo monasterio Thomas adscriberetur. Ubi facile impetrasset quod petierat, coepit et adolescentulum percunctari num placerent omnia quae de se audivisset? Ad haec subridens Thomas, nimio de tantula sorte concepto gaudio, inquit, illud perpetuo se circumferre in animo ut Deiparae Virgini aliquando initiatus observat, nec optare feliciorum transigendae vitae locum, quam in eo monasterio vivere, per quod illud sartum tectum consisteret, in quo primam et literarum et bonorum morum institutionem exceperet. Quem, cum ita affectum vidisset abbas, admiratus est plurimum; ac studiosius curavit (ne via forte quadam vel astu hominum subdolorum Thomas sibi eriperetur) ut data acceptaque fide suos fieret. Ita compositis omnibus adolescentem versus monasterium a Kynlos dimittit. Illuc ubi adventasset, et subiisset templi (ut aiunt) navem, illico in faciem crucifixi, ex more recepto apud catholicos, adoraturus procumbit. Ac inter orandum, nescio quid magnum iam tum de religione et hujus loci incremento visus est, Deo (ut ipsum Thomam referentem audivi) propicio, concipere. Plurimum recreabatur in templi magnifica structura, et eorum quae illic visuntur ad rem sacram faciendam non irreligiosa. Arridebat subinde et imago Servatoris in cruce pendentis, ut ea de re facile in animum induxerit suum se posse auspiciatissime illic vivere. Dum talia miratur, aliquot ex sodalitate illa patres, quibus singula in eo negotio abbas primum significarat, cum humanissime suscipiunt, et admirabundum a novitate et congressu seniorum jubent esse bono et infracto animo; nec vereatur (rogant) de abbatis promissis, accepturus etiam majora. Diceres jam tum eorum quae facta sunt postea non leve praesagium. Ita ad se singuli rapiabant Thomam, ut nescias an ipsum fortunatiorem qui adeo festivos et benignos patres adinvenerit, an illos feliciores quibus tanta tamque spectata indole contigerit adolescens. Illinc deductus est ad abbatem cui non inspectatus advenerat. Ac post aliquot dies, cum altero cui nomen erat Joanni Richardi, sacras (quas vocant) vestes per abbatem oblatas induit: die nimirum Epiphaniae ab Christo nato anno millesimo quadringentesimo octuagesimo septimo.

Factus candidatus Cisterciensis instituti, acrius multo quam alias sui ingenii vires in ediscendo memoriter psalterio, hymnis, canticis, et id genus aliis exereuit. Vix credas quantulo tempore id quod plerique non infelici ingenio consueverunt memoriae commendarit. Octavo quoque die (ut audio) unum psalterii nocturnum suo in his quae de religione sunt formatori, hoc est domino Patricio Wilson, memoriter pronunciauit. Hinc colligere quis potest quid praestiterit in reliquis qui adeo in gravioribus egregiam navaverit operam. Revoluto anno, die eadem qua detonsus primum fuit, publicitus in templo una cum collega suo conceptis verbis ex more in observationem Benedictinae regulae aliisque ejusdem professionis institutis juravit. Jam factus unus sodalitatibus, dominus Thomas ab omnibus nuncupari, et indies magis ac magis grassari, ut sui instituti penitiora non solum intelligeret sed etiam observaret. Ita plerosque sua modestia et vigilantia ad bene beateque vivendum excitavit. Interea abbas (ut fit), cognita domini Thomae in singulis acrimonia, eum non raro ad rem gerendam admovit. Egit ille strenuissime in omnibus, ut jam tum in administranda monasterii republica non ineptus videri posset.

Post paululum vero temporis (ut res sunt mortalium fragiles) dominus abbas, is a quo sacrae religioni fuerat initiatus, fato concessit. In locum demortui surrogatus est vir non ignobilis dominus Gulielmus cognomento Culross; qui ab ineunte aetate dominum Thomam tenerrime dilexit. Tanto igitur et insperato fultus praesidio, in gravioribus rebus tractandis non infeliciter periclitari coepit; et nihil ferme unquam est adortus ubi fortunam non adinvenerit secundantem. Ita res intricatiores apud Strathilay et ecclesiam ab Ellone studiose explicavit, ut majorem quam unquam antea apud novum eo tempore abbatem dominum Gulielmum sibi conciliarit benevolentiam. Proinde, ab eo die vix quidquam gravioris operis molitus est abbas, in quo censendo dominus Thomas primas non tulerit. Neque obscuris argumentis jam sese, quorsum inclinatura esset res, prodebat. Nam Gulielmus abbas mole corporis gravatus, ut impar esset oneri ferendo, in nominando successore totus erat. Res versabatur in ambiguo, quem potissimum diligeret. Primum, adhortabatur vitae institutum ut canonice e senioribus unum nominaret: sed vir prudens, cum inidoneitatem ad rem tantam sustinendam omnium seniorum haberet perspectam, et monasterium dilapidatum iri clarissime videret, in dominum Thomam oculos convertit. Adornatis itaque omnibus in hunc usum necessariis, rem transigendam Romae destinavit. Ac volentibus Superis quam commodissime obvenit : comprobatum est enim negocium Alexandro pontifici summo ejus nominis sexto ; obsignata sunt diplomata, et in Scotiam ocyssime transmissa. Verum, quod non putares, is qui fuerat author curandorum diplomatum, Magister videlicet Joannes Lyndsay, confectum negocium aliquandiu remoratus est. In causa autem fuit abbas Gulielmus, qui suae promotionis (ut aiunt) diplomata ab eodem importata neglexit redimere ; existimabat enim jam electo altero abbate nihil esse opus illis suis diplomatibus. Verum mercator, qui mul- Mercator curam et damnum sarcirent. Id ubi intellexit dominus Thomas, Aberdonias est profectus, et cum honesto viro Alexandro Gray bona fide de negotio transegit. Acceptis suis et praedecessoris diplomatibus ad monasterium rediit. Ac ex more exceptus a conventu (sic illi loquuntur) in capitulum suam explicaturus auctoritatem et patrum obedientiam (ut fit) suscepturus abiit.

His rite peractis et canonice, coepit Thomas abbas de literarum studio intermisso secum reputare. Suadebat ingenii bonitas et cura pastoralis ut ad emporium bonarum artium properaret, unde suae animae pabulum et suis monachis ubertim suggerere deinde valeret. Id quod fecisset, nisi cura rei familiaris, non tantum sua, verum etiam praedecessoris abbatis, ad has externorum negotiorum syrtes non solum evocasset sed impulisset quoque. Tanto enim aere alieno premebatur per incuriam pastorum hic locus ut pene nulla spes superesset futurae instaurationis. Potentes ac nobiles autem qui habitant viciniam monasterii ad se quisque res sacris usibus destinatas rapere, piscationum aquas profanare, ac pos-sessionibus monachis assignatis ut suis uti. Tantam indignitatem cum videret Thomas abbas, et aes magnum in redimendis diplomatis conflatum non ignoraret, coepit animo volvere quo pacto melius sibi suoque monasterio consulere posset. Et quamvis literarum ardor plurimum ad se hominem raperet, noluit tamen per oscitantiam committere ut privato studio rempublicam quam susceperat administrandam funditus everteret. Ita secum ratiocinabatur; cum qui velit in literis egregiam navare operam ocium per omnia complecti oportere; se nec posse id praestare, nec honestum futurum si suum munus privato emolumento fraudaret. Veniebat etiam in mentem illi, compositis utcunque rebus, id quod sibi non licuisset per aliquot monachos se deinde instauraturum. Quod etiam effecit ut postea indicamus. Itaque remis et velis (quod aiunt) hujus loci administrationem, relictis interim philosophiae studiis, aggressus est; ac rem illico perturbatam tentare, et exulceratis rebus modum aliquem statuere conabatur. Nec despondebat animum in re pene intractabili, futurum existimans de meliore semper rerum successu aliquid: nihil enim videbat in hac vita boni mortalibus concessum sine sudore gravissimo; et usu venire, ut hi solum suis votis potiantur qui nunquam animum ad gravissima quoque obeunda paratissimum remiserint; nec sperandam esse ullam in senecta tranquillitatem ei qui per ignaviam honestos in juvena labores suscipere recusarit. Istis et aliis infinitis persuasionibus ad rem bene gerendam novus abbas impellebatur.

Anno igitur humanae salutis millesimo quadringentesimo nonagesimo nono, idibus Januarii, summam omnium in Kynlos administrationem ubi accepisset Thomas abbas, jam tum cum adversariis de monasterii rebus summam contentionem iniit.

Oppidani enim a Foress, consuetudine quadam usurpatitia potius et veluti praescriptione quam jure aliquo, salmonum piscationes in aquis aestuarii Finderne tunc temporis usurpabant. Cum his primam suam velitationem tanta dexteritate commisit, ut quadriennio post non contemnendam victoriam reportarit : et, ne aliquando excideret tantae rei memoria, vel, mutata sorte, adversarii novam litem intenderent, hujus foederis leges in publicum, quod vocant, instrumentum, Jacobo Rege ejus nominis quarto comprobante, redigi curavit. Extant et alia, cum dominorum parlamenti tum Regis ipsius, ad hanc rem decreta, quae in posterorum memoriam diligentissime apud Kynlos asservantur.

Deinceps, quasi fortunam arridentem suo muneri accepisset, in majoribus periclitari voluit. Ac priorem a Pluscarde dominum Robertum Harwor, praeter æquum piscationes a Fernanen occupantem, parvo conatu sed pecunia majore ita attrivit toto triennio, ut dimidium illius cujus gratia litem iniverat in perpetuum acceperit.

Huic operi successit cum quodam M. Hugone Martini contentio plena laboribus. Acceperat ille, nescio an industria majore an dolo malo potius, subscriptum a Rege diploma, quo cavebatur ut eidem Hugoni quamdiu viveret definitam quotannis pecuniam, hoc est libras scoticas centum septuaginta, annumeraret abbas a Kynlos. Negabat abbas se quicquam homini debere quod suo monasterio damnosum esset. Contra ille suum jus et Principis favorem, quo tunc pro arbitrio utebatur, objectabat. Post septennii contentionem et impensam mille librarum scoticarum in lite per abbatem, M. ille Hugo causae suae, mutatis utcumque rebus, diffidens pacis condiciones ab abbate propositas lubens accepit : et poterat opprimi si abbas coeptam litem usque in finem persequi voluisset. Sed secum reputabat vir prudens nequaquam esse fortunae blandienti nimirum fidendum, ne si reflaret denuo cum M. Hugone novam litem intendere oporteret. Itaque expensis bene ad utramque partem conditionibus, annum illum censum in perpetuum libris scoticis octoginta semel traditis in totum sopivit.

Vix dum cum M. Hugone egerat et protinus eum susceperat adversarius alter Joannes cognomento Cumein dominus ab Ernishede. Is, ob viciniam agri sui cum monasterio, de promovendis finibus satagebat. Abbas vero contra nitebatur, et vetustos in ea parte agrorum limites elanculum aliquando ab iniquis hominibus submotos inculcabat. Res, utcunque vetustate ambigua, in multam contentionem prorupit; sed veritas ipsa aliquamdiu eluctata caput postea exeruit. Nam in consessu dominorum parliamenti, post nonam (quam vocant) sessionem, decretum est, ut comes Argathelie Archimbaldus Campbellus, cum aliis nobilibus viris, veluti arbiter de finibus agrorum inter abbatem et Joannem Cumein, spectato lustratoque loco, litem illam dirimeret. Qui, ubi rite cognovisset de singulis, ut publico instrumento circuitionis (sic illi loquuntur) apud Kynlos asservato constat apertissime, secundum abbatem rem confecit.

Erat etiam tum temporis Aberdoniarum vicecomes (ut aiunt) Alexander Banarman, qui abbati de agro ecclesie ab Ellone negotium facesseret. Cum illo tres annos totos litigatum est; postremo tamen abbati victoria cessit.

Sed illud majoris fuit momenti, quod adversum Alexandrum Gordonium comitem Huntleum, toto septennio, non minore prudentia quam animi constantia, ab eodem abbate pro suo monasterio tuendo gestum est. Cupiebat Alexander, ex Strathily baronia quam habent monachi et abbas a Kynlos, agrum Ballacht suae possessioni accedere; et cum nullum in ea re jus haberet, abbati tamen in rectum propugnanti non semel mortem comminabatur. Verum nec terroribus illis adduci potuit abbas ut comiti cederet; nempe ad mentionem mortis intrepidus semper in anteriora sagacissime proficisebatur. Tandem, post infinitos et animi et corporis labores acerbissimamque contentionem, optato fine potitus est abbas. Ac in hujusce rei memoriam Alexander comes suae cessionis publicum instrumentum imperavit, cui et sigillum suum, ut in Kynlos videre est, propendet.

Huic impeditissimo negotio accessit Alexandri ab Huntli comitis soror Agnes, quam olim in uxorem Jacobus Ogilvius a Finlater habuisse memoriae proditum est. Coeperat illa cum abbate, de agro apud Strathily nomine Hawinthfe, spiritu plenam contentionem; sed abbatis vigilantia protinus hanc flammam repressit; nec luctari diu potuit illa quin statim causa caderet. Ita res ad abbatem meritissime rediit.

Illud multo laboriosius quod in dominum Joannem Inness abbatem monasterii a Deire factum est. Est in Buthquhania apud ecclesiam ab Ellone villa quam suo nomine Fechile vocant; illius villae decimas suas esse contendebat abbas a Deire; in adversam sententiam Thomas abbas a Kynlos ferebatur. In tantum lis crevit ut cognitores in consessu provinciali abbates omnes Cisterciensis instituti apud Scotiam habuerit, idque Edinburgi, in Fratrum Praedicatorum monasterio. Deinceps, in loco iudicii praesulis Aberdoniarum intractum est negotium. Victus duabus (quas vocant) sententiis definitivis abbas a Deire superiori suo abbati a Kynlos facile cessit. Hinc crevit annuus in Kynlos (ut referunt illius loci oeconomi) census quadraginta solidis scoticis.

Illud praeterea immensi et prope incredibilis laboris cum Jacobo Stuart, Regis Scotorum filio, Moraviae comite, de piscationibus aestuarii a Finderne contentionem inire. Veruntamen, tanta et semper rectis potentia, ut nullum quantumvis illustrem hominem in jure monasterii tuendo formidaret. Itaque multis rationibus egit ut modum aliquem in tanta tamque acri contentione offenderet suis rebus omnino non malum; id quod facile contigisset, si legibus et juri sua semper constaret autoritas.

Ergo cum videret abbas potentia magis se quam jure ullo gravari, alia quadam arte rem ipsam expedire tentavit. Nec prorsus infeliciter cessit: nam, ubi centum octuaginta tres libras scoticas semel annumeravit abbas, non invitus suo juri in perpetuum renunciavit comes.

Dum talia molitur vir infatigabilis, etiam collapsam et pene majorum oscitantia intermortuam religionem in decentem ordinem restituere prout sequitur laboravit. In primis morbidas aliquot oves de suo grege, hortatu, et vitæ exemplo; deinde, ubi salutis spem videt deploratam, etiam levi cauterio restituere conatus est. Vidisses statim aberrantes olim oves pastoris prudentia ac humanitate respiscere, et omnia in melius sensim converti. Huc etiam accessit ut fratrum numerum in Kynlos perexiguum in decentem numerosamque sodalitatē surrigeret. Primum, quum in abbatem designaretur dominus Thomas, vix quatuordecim fratres in monasterio visebantur; postea vero viginti aut plures, cum uno detonso laico (quem conversum dicunt) perpetuo adnumerati sunt. Et, ne putes ita numerum monachorum accrevisse ut tamen aliquid de victu eorum detractum sit, quotidianam etiam alimoniam cum ipsis hominibus auctiorem effecit. In diebus carniū, singulis monachorum, præter veterum consuetudinem, quatuor denarios adjecit. Diebus vero quibus vescuntur piscibus, unicuique denarium adscripsit. Quid de pane loquar? Mos fuit ante, lato pane, hoc est, lagano ex avenis ad ignem super laganario formato, monachos vesci: nunc, Thomæ abbatis humanitate simul et industria, per singulos fratres panis frumenticius unciarum triginta duarum quotidie accessit.

Nec cum deterruit tantorum vita laborum supra modum impeditiſſima et quasi alieno acre oppressa, ut etiam de instaurandis loci aedificiis cogitaret. Ita ille ab ineunte aetate vitam suam formaverat ad quidvis honesti curam subeundam, ut gratius illi semper fuerit in reipublicae suae compendium durius vivere quam alioqui per voluptatem de officio et recti cura discedere. In primis igitur templum ipsum vetustate secundum testudinem corruptum postibus decenter politis supra chorum et in campanarum turri instauravit; ac totum templum secundum tectum ligneis tessellis, veluti planis imbricibus, contextit: et plumbum quod visitur, multis a vetustate locis aquam transmittens, restituit saepiuscule.

Nostro etiam tempore, eam tecti partem quae chorum integit, utrinque novo plumbo curavit adornandam. Deinceps, coronam templi quaquaversum excitavit lapide quadrato, in morem videlicet corollariorum in propugnaculis, ut imbricatori (quem etiam tegularium vocamus) minor fieret labor in restituendo tecto si quando scalas admoveret. Eadem opera et studio divi Hieronymi sacellum, superne ruinosum, non indecenter per omnia restituit. Excitavit praeterea in eodem templo ad sacrificandum tres aras; unam divo Hieronymo, divae Annae alteram, tertiam in sacello mortuorum; quas etiam ornatu vario et sacris vestibus religiose satis decoravit. Constituit insuper majus horologium quod in templo ad sacrarium videtur a capite (juxta paroemiam) usque ad pedes; et aliud item minus, veluti excitatorium, quo is utitur ex officio qui antelucano tempore ad divinas laudes percinendas reliquos fratres excitare consuevit.

Ac statim in initio suae electionis, e regione aulae abbatis juxta euripum tubumque per quem aqua ad moletrinum derivatur monasterii, domum a fundamentis posuit; in ea, nostro tempore Robertus abbas, ejusdem Thomae alumnus et declaratus successor, recumbere consuevit. Rursus, anno salutis humanae tricesimo supra sesquimillesimum, iisdem aedibus amplissimam adjecit appendicem. In primis subversa, rimosa ac vetusta in eo loco domuncula, aedes novas priori aedificio communi cochlea conjunxit; egregia sane structura, non minus necessaria monasterio quam ornamento maximo.

Magnum praeterea abbatis cubiculum, quo, per hospitem absentiam, veluti minore quadam aula in prandio et coena cum sua familia utitur, multis modis instauravit. In primis fenestram illic aperuit quadrangularem habentem crucem, ubi antea fumarium ineptissimum videbatur: ipsum vero caminum decenter ubi nunc est et ad altitudinem tecti excitavit; addidit et cubiculo non ignobilem ex assulis ac perpolitam testudinem. Dehinc, ambulacrum abbatis cum sacello ad privatam orationem erexit a fundamentis; atque assulis non indecenter dolatis, eidem ambulacro devexum solarium et cameram adponi mandavit. Hoc ipsum etiam in minore suo effecit cubiculo. Quid memorem solarium amplissimum, hoc est horreum pensile, in domo languentium monachorum? Quid pavimentum peristylorum (claustrum nunc vocant) sub fornice videlicet utriusque portae? Quid de novis cellis, et, ut illi loquuntur, novo dormitorio? Annon omnia benignitate et liberalitate Thomae abbatis nunc sunt constituta quae prius nusquam fecerant?

Et, ne quis secum reputet multa ex his parvo aere ita confecta ut nihil unquam gravius operis sit aggressus, subscribam magnifica quaedam aedificia quae variis locis per eundem sunt erecta. Illud in primis occurrit quod in sui monasterii agro, seu mavis Strathily baronia, nunc cernitur. In formam arcis illic satis amplam nec minus fortem a fundamentis construxit domum, anno Servatoris Christi quinto et vicesimo supra sesquimillesimum. Huic domui porticum cum gradu lapideo pro foribus adjecit. Proxime, ad paranda cibaria, elegantem popinam cocis erexit. Atque in arcis ambitu, veteres et cariosas aedes, in usum postea futurum multiplicem, instauravit per singula.

Anno praeterea domini millesimo quingentesimo tricesimo secundo, aere maximo apud suam ecclesiam ab Ellone magnificam et amplissimam ab ipsis fundamentis domum erexit, quam postea imbricamentis etiam ligneis voluit contectam. Ipsi templo ab Ellone multa addidit necessaria, ut in tecto et pavimento redintegrando; nonnulla ad ornamentum, de quibus infra scribimus. Pene similia effecit suae ecclesiae apud Rosciam, quam dicunt Awacht nomine. Ita accuratus et vigilans pastor ad singula intendit oculos, quasi nihil laborum ac curarum suis posteris relinquere cupiat. Duo moletrina apud Strathily aedificavit. In Kynlos, domum satis amplam ad torrenda grana priusquam in moletrinum deferantur erexit, quam ustrinam nomine admodum apto dicere possis. Et, ut minutula persequare non minus tamen necessaria, moletrinam a Kynlos, ambulacrum a peristylis claustroque adaegrotantium monachorum aedes, religiosorum culinam, et domum majorem ubi salmones saliti asservantur; haec omnia in contignatione, tabulatis, postremo et tecto reparavit. Erexit et domum alteram lapideam, supra monasterium ad duo millia passuum, ubi salmones cymbis et retibus capti nunc asservantur.

Studiosius etiam ad rem sacram faciendam suique monasterii decorum pleraque argentea vasa, sacras vestes, et id genus alia e continenti Galliarum et Flandriae in Kynlos magnis impensis advehi curavit. Ac, ut rem ipsam in ordinem aliquem referamus, de singulis hic quasi per transennam et obiter viderimus. In primis, thecam argenteam (vas Eucharistiae vulgo dicitur, id est, sanctifici crustuli sacrosanctique panificii) affabre et multo confectam opere ad sesquicubitum sese attollentem et non poenitendo pondere in Kynlos advexit. Alteram itidem thecam, eodem artificio et opere, paulo tantum minorem priore (hujus in meditullio divi Hieronymi ex argento effigies erecta est) in venerationem osseae particulae divi Hieronymi quam illic postea inclusit, importari curavit. Et, ad ministerium sacrificorum, quatuor argenteos calices quaquaversum deauratos, duas phialas, pollubrum magnum satis, et ad infundendam in malluvio aquam.guttum, thuribulum in quo thus adoletur; omnia haec argentea, sua opera, suis impensis, in suum monasterium devexit.

Atque in usum mensae suae pateras seu crateras quatuor argenteas (vulgo tassias dicunt) coemit, quarum uni accedit et argenteum operculum. Emit et sex cumanos ex argento calices, sive malis obbas aut siphunculos (plebei vocant goubbelettos) dicere; uni etiam horum additum est operculum. Emit quoque salinum argenteum, ac triginta quinque cochlearia.

Rursus, ad templi ornatum, tria candelabra ex aurichaleo incredibili opere confecta, magno aere redemit; quorum duo ad instar columnarum formata sculptarum proxime ad summam aram locavit; tertium vero, quod est in quinque dissectum brachia sive ramos (paschale id vocant vulgares) in faciem chori ad gradum ubi epistolam concinit subdiaconus erigi curavit. Emit et duo alia pensilia candelabra; quorum unum ad summi altaris fornicem, alterum in magno abbatis cubiculo, nunc etiam propendet. In turri autem campanarum tres magni ponderis nec minus sonoras campanas apposuit; harum nomina sunt, ut inscriptio satis edocet, Maria, Anna, et Hieronymus. Dedit et catarram sive vas perpulchrum ex aurichaleo in usum lustralis aquae et benedictae circumferendae cum aspersorio. Dedit et duo paria organorum musicalium; duas quoque sellas seu cathedras, quibus cantor et succentor chori diebus sermonum insiderent.

Non est praetereundum silentio quo pacto tabulam statuaria et pictoria arte deauratum in sacello Divae Virginis et Matris apud Kynlos collocarit. Ita melius intelligent posterius quam promptum sit benefacere, si quis animum intenderit suum; e diverso, qui ocium sectantur, cum nihil audeant magni, saltem optimos et ad honestissima quaeque intentos viros sua laude non fraudabunt. Consecravit igitur Deiparae Virgini tabulam omnibus numeris (ut videre est) commendatissimam. Et ejusdem operis minorem multo in sacello sui ambulacri tabellam ad usum privatae orationis constituit. Advexit quoque statuas tres admodum venustas; unam Servatoris, quam columnae turris campanarum ad summi altaris dextram adjecit; alteram divi Hieronymi, quam sinistrae columnae e regione Christi stantem admovit; tertiam vero divae Annae, in sacello proxime ad portam majorem templi, qua parte est in septentrionem prospectus, reposuit. Anno praeterea a verae pietatis initio millesimo quingentesimo vicesimo nono, in exhedra monachorum in templo (trito satis nomine chorum vocant), subsellia affabre sculpta cum hostio posuit, et utrinque sacratiorem templi partem cancellis ad arcendam plebem in adytum irrumpentem obfirmavit.

Memor etiam fragilitatis humanae, ut boni pastoris exemplum successoribus relinqueret, et non ad captandam gloriam, sepulchrum sibi ipsi, inter duas sacelli Divae Matris columnas, lapide quadrato in altum excitavit. Nec defuit illi quem in hac parte sequeretur author, vir optimus abbas Joannes Ellem, qui tabulam incomparabilem majoris arae in Kynlos suo aere adportavit; is etiam, constituto sibi sepulchro, in Divae Matris sacello ad austrum sepultus jacet.

In ornamentum vero sacrificorum dominus Thomas ex auro textili et florulento vestes sacras, transmissio ad id negotii in Flandriam domino Roberto Cumein, anno salutis humanae 1520, videlicet cappam unam, ac casulam, duos dalmaticas, in Kynlos apportavit. Emit et alias vestes purpureas ex villosa bysso, hoc est, casulam, tres dalmaticas, duas alias casulas byssinas ac villosas thalassico seu veneto colore, cum suis dalmaticis. Totidem casulas ex bysso palmatam unam et rubram, alteram candidam et undulatum cum suis ex dalmaticis; ex holoserico caeruleo casulam, cum duabus dalmaticis; quibus omnibus laterales fibrae aureis staminibus et opere phrygio Divorum imagines filis byssinis purpureis, coccineis, et hyacinthinis intertextas habent. Accedunt et singulis vestibus certae ac propriae albae, stolae (oraria vocat Hieronymus) et id genus reliqua in vestium complementum necessaria. Rursus casulam unam, cum duabus dalmaticis semisericis, (vorseticas, patria lingua solent dicere) nigris, cum albis, stolis, et aliis ad rem divinam pro mortuis faciendam, procuravit. Octo praeterea casulas, quarum usus est ad litandum in privatis altaribus. Addidit et mitram, seu tiaram rectius, gemmis ac margaritis non indecenter variegatam distinctamque. In cappis autem (quas vocant) praeter illam florulentam ex auro textili ejus paulo ante mentionem fecimus, septem alias aureis et hyacinthinis filis rite quaquaversum phrygiatas in suum monasterium advexit, unam ex villosa et bysso cyanei coloris, duas itidem villosas et byssinas nigricantes, totidem porraceas etiam ex bysso, ac duas ex bysso palmata et undulata. Proxime his accedunt duae nigrae ex semiserico, quarum usus in mortuorum funeribus et litationibus. Aene per incuriam statim inepte tractando ac perturbate deficerent, in loco pro foribus sacrarii aptissimo arcam ligneam quadrantis in morem, ubi nunc hujusmodi asservantur vestes, fabricari fecit. In similem usum, pro suis vestibus et tunicis, duos abacos (vulgo conservatoria nuncupantur) perpulchre sculptos, alterum in suo ambulacro, in cubiculo suo alterum composuit.

Nec minus accuratus fuit in ornanda ecclesia sua ab Ellone, cui parem tabulam pictoria et statuaria arte deauratam cum illa Beatae Matris et Virginis apud Kynlos, de qua paulo ante sumus locuti, contulit. Restituit quoque illic majus altare tabulato ubi et divae Annae statuam collocavit; paravitque nova in choro subsellia; et vestes ad rem sacrum faciendam tres, casulam videlicet ex bysso palmata, duas dalmaticas, cum albis et id genus reliquis, liberalis-sime coemptas, dedit. Posuit et in sacello apud Strathily non contemnendam Divae Virginis et Matris in sole statuum.

Ad usum praeterea suae familiae, cratem ferream (vulgo caninum dicunt) octingentorum pondo, duos cacabos ahencos ad cerevisiam conficiendam, vasa stannea multiplicium formarum ducenta ex Anglia, et alia multa in usum quotidianum, lectulos plumeos quinquaginta cum reliquis eorum appendicibus, et ad integendum lectos octo et viginti peristromata (vulgo arresbeddis) lectissima, duo pulvinaria nigra ex villosa bysso, cum quatuor et viginti aliis opere plumario, (Graeci dicunt a liciorum varietate multiplici polymitarium), paravit non parva pecunia sua monasterio.

In constituenda selectorum codicum bibliotheca, ad quam toto spiritu fertur Robertus abbas, non levem etiam operam praestitit. In primis invexit Vetus ac Novum Testamentum sex voluminibus cum receptis illis glossis distinctum, quatuor Vincentii volumina, tria Chronicorum Antonini, tria Epistolarum divi Hieronymi, Opera deinde Hieronymi quinque voluminibus, Opera Ambrosii duobus, Opera Chrysostomi quatuor, Gregorii uno, et altero Bernardi, Summam Aquinatis uno, Sententiarum commentarios Scoti duobus, Sententias Joannis Majoris duobus, Commentarios Aquinatis in Epistolas divi Pauli duobus, Augustinum de civitate Dei et Trinitate uno, totum jus pontificium cum glossulis, et alios complures sermonum libellos; quae omnia in nova bibliotheca et in usum studentium in monasterio asservantur. Curavit et duo volumina in membranis, missale videlicet unum, graduale alterum, apud Culross exscripta suo aere, ad monasterium adferri.

De annuo vero hujus monasterii censu, non est in proclivi dicere quantum aliorum abbatum negligentia decesserit, et quantum unius Thomae vigilantia acceverit. Res est major intricatiorque quam ut possit brevibus complecti. Hic tamen tabellam consignabimus eorum quae Thomas abbas in initio suae administrationis adinvenit, ut cum duplicata jam omnia audiverit lector, authoris prudentiam et labores agnoscat.

TABELLA EORUM QUAE, 1500, THOMAS ABBAS
IN CENSU A KYNLOS ADINVENTIT.

Primo, Summa annua firmæ (quam vocant) baroniae a Kynlos, fuit	Marc. Scot 114.
Summa annua burgi a Finderne	Marc. 20.
Summa annua baroniae a Strathily	Marc. 147.
Item, villae a Leithnocht	Marc. 6.
Item, villae a Frefeilde	Marc. 4.
Item, a Dundureus	Marc. 10.
Item, ab ecclesia Ellone	Marc. 252.
Item, ab ecclesia Awacht	Marc. 72.
In granis, e baronia a Kynlos	Celdras (ut vocant) 8, et bollas 2.
Item, ex Strathily	Celdras 7.
Item, e nassis (vernacula lingua ly yaris) salmonum	Lastas 2.
Item, ex annalibus Inverness et Foress	Marc. v. d. xl.
Item, e firmis et annuis in Elgyn	Marc. 2.

Tantulis ergo bonis egregium monasterium a Kynlos tunc oeconomorum et abbatum oscitantia perditum fuit; ubi suum munus exercere coepit Thomas abbas omnia in melius mutari, ac brevi temporis curriculo duplicatis fere omnibus (ut etiam nunc clarissime constat) infinitis exundare bonis visum est. Ita promptissimum est judicare quid distent (juxta parœmiam) acra lupinis. Sic prudentissimus paterfamilias multa congerit studiose quae ineptissimus quisque longe facilius inutiliter effundit. Sed jam prosequamur reliqua.

Sunt et salmonum piscationes in aquis ab Ithane, proxime ad illas aedes quas paulo ante commemoravimus recenter in Ellone structas, domino a Finlater addictae; eas Thomas abbas, grandi annumerata pecunia, in novemdecim annos futuros conduxit. Initium hujusee rei fuit anno 1532.

Eodem anno quo isthæ gerebantur, apud novum burgum a Setownem, domum lapideam in aliquot officinas distinctam ac locabilem, ad usum nautarum peregrinorum commeantium, magnis impensis, cum solario exstruxit. Et cum illa curarentur, tres etiam calices argenteos intus tantum deauratos ad peragenda sacrificia suo monasterio emptos tradidit.

In sequenti, vero, anno coquinam ad suam aulam amplissime exstructam in Kynlos adjecit, in qua ad utramque partem duo furnaria fornicata adposuit. Coquinae accedit unus atque alter furnus, pistrinum, et domus altera ad farinae custodiam; omnia cum solario ejusdem Thomae abbatis impensis decentissime exstructa.

Nuper etiam transegit de constituendo ponte super torrente fluentis et defluentis maris juxta portam monasterii. Parantur indies ad eam structuram lapides, et ante proximum Pascha (ut speratur) res finem adinveniet.

Sed longum forte est, quod damus; operae precium fuerit quae magis ad hominis excellentiam spectant paucis indicare. Sic virtus ipsa ignota multis jam caput exerere incipiet. Ac constabit facillime quam magnus erat futurus dominus Thomas, si ea cupiditas honorum qua plerique tenentur insedisset animo; immo, quanto maximus qui illa quae caeteri mirantur, contentus sua sorte, semper spreverit. Voluit Scotorum Rex, Jacobus illustrissimus ejus nominis quartus, dominum Thomam in primum sui instituti locum per Scotiae provinciam transcribere. Sed modestus et frugalis vir maluit exiguum et tranquillum sua opera exstructum locum possidere, quam denuo cum adversariis multis in amplissimo a Melross monasterio fluctuari. Eadem ratione, alterius amplissimi monasterii a Dribrocht aequam a Formano archipraesule et Scotiae legato datam conditionem, neglexit. Nec episcopatum Rossiae, toties ab amico praesule domino Roberto Cokburne oblatum, unquam (ut exitus postea docuit) magni fecit.

Usus est praeterea sui ordinis autoritate summa ad visitationem (quam vocant) per universam Scotiae provinciam. Atque ex officio saepiuscule monasteria a Deire et Culross in suis ceremoniis collapsa restituit. Imperante etiam Jacobo quarto, et autoritate ordinis qua in ea parte fungebatur, abbatem a Melross dominum Gulielmum Trumbull virum parum frugi, et in Regem, ut ferunt, clanculum seditiones molientem, propria dignitate exiit coegitque in monasterium a Cupro migrare.

In literarum studiis quoniam illi non licuit ut supra docuimus a multitudine et turba negociorum versari, quicquid accepit damni in uno atque altero monachorum sarcire curavit. In primis dominum Jacobum Pont, studiosum utpote hominem, Aberdonias in fratrum praedicatorum collegium formandum literisque divini-oribus imbuendum transmisit. Erat tum temporis in eo loco vir pius frater Joannes Adami, Dominicani ordinis in Scotia primas et theologiae scholasticae doctor insignis, cuius auditor nequaquam ineptus fuit dominus Jacobus. Ubi accepisset abbas illum proficere, non multo post alterum similiter monachum ad literas apposite natum, cui nomen est domino Waltero Hethon, eadem cura instituendum eo destinavit. Postquam comperit abbas utrunque in illis literis sufficienter promovisse, ut jam posset uterque domi studendo et docendo per se graviora indies cognoscere, ad monasterium ambos revocavit. Dominus Jacobus subinde, aliquot ex junioribus fratribus domi in diatribis non segniter scholasticis exercuit; domino autem Waltero cessit cantorisi chori provincia quam etiam nostro tempore retinet. Uterque bonus, et nostrorum (nisi fallit opinio) studiorum non fucatus admirator.

Sed jam ad dominum abbatem aequum est nos redire. In pietatis officiis nequaquam segnis fuit; saepe eleemosynam Dominicanae et Franciscanae familiae fratribus liberalissime erogavit. Ac multo benignior in summe calamitosos et infimae sortis homines.

In agnatos et affines, quos habuit frugales simul et bonos, adeo munificus fuit, ut cum magnorum sacerdotiorum episcopis non inique comparari queat. Potissimum in collocandis nuptui virginibus ut honestam cum nobiles viris transigerent vitam, impensissime semper laboravit, ac omnia felicissima transegit.

Inter omnes tandem domini Thomae abbatis conatus, ille potissimus semper videri poterit, quo virum cum literis tum civilium curarum [administratione] praecellentem Robertum Reid in successorem nominavit. Hujus Roberti nunc prudentia et vigilantia tanta est et domi et foris, quantum vix per universam Scotiam in altero offendas; nihil unquam, vel in religione non solum honestanda sed retinenda quoque, appositum magis esse dixeris. In reipublicae vero multiplicibus curis nihil unquam vigilantius aut etiam incorruptius atque expeditius videre poteris. Faxint Superi ut illa quam de homine omnes fere concepimus expectationem aliquando potiamur. Tunc copiose tantae rei authoris laudes annumerabimus, et Roberti abbatis dotes, in utroque homine maximas, soluta vel numerosa oratione pangemus, acriori itidem spiritu. Sic aequum est utrique meo Maecenati, quorum beneficio nostrae nunc respirant Musae, si non parem saltem candidi animi erga illos gratiam aliquando referre. Hoc vellet Optimus Maximus Jesus ut, utroque abbate salvo et nobis, ea quae nunc animo concepimus in lucem aliquando scripta proferre valeamus.

In praesentia forte aequum fuerit huic negotio finem imponere, quousque aliud contingat cognitu simillimum, vel etiam majus.

Haec igitur ferme sunt domini Thomae abbatis in utraque vita opera magis insignia quae nos extare cognovimus. Vivit adhuc, et spes est bona eum non pauca longe optima curaturum. Id Christus ut concedat una voce omnes, quibus intercessit cum homine familiaritas, jugiter deprecamur. Amen.

FINIS.

APPENDIX DE MORTE DOMINI THOMAE ABBATIS.

Ut res sunt mortalium fragiles, cupiebam tumultuario hoc rerum gestarum compendio domino meo seniori domino Thomae Crystallo abbati a Kynlos, Calendis Januariis, veluti strenae munusculo gratificari: ecce quatenus unquam non adest nostrum conatum avertit mors. Homo erat jam vergentis aetatis, et superiori aetate in aquam intercutem deciderat; sed opera medicorum sibi utcumque reddita tumores tantum pedum et crurium patiebatur. Ac spes erat eum diutius victurum et vitam paralyti finiturum. Verum aliter multo evenit. Quum hominem puderet illius tumoris, procuratum est ab amicis ut medicae artis peritioribus viris sese committeret. Suorum igitur hortatu virum perelebrem M. Hectorem Boethium ad se vocavit: qui eum perspexisset singula, nec ullam restituendae sanitatis spem agnosceret, ut aegroto tamen ac illius amicis aliqua ex parte morem gereret, paucula quaedam morbo aptissima tradidit observanda. Frustra, nimirum frustra; quippe sic irritatus morbus tumorem illum crurium ad superiores partes et ventrem promovit. Id quum rescisset medicus, foeculenta duriemque alvei clysteribus et suppositoriis educere tentavit. Nec itidem hoc pacto successit. Nam ea nocte, quae sequitur quartum Calendarum Januarii, hora ferme undecima in sua arce Strathilly, vitam morte vir optimus dominus Thomas commutavit.

Sed, ut rectius intelligat hominis pietatem quisquis ista leget, paucula hic quemadmodum sunt gesta literis consignabimus.

In primis, solícite egit ut populo sibi commisso in una atque altera baronia priusquam e vivis cederet, foret consultum. Multa de suo annuo censu per singulos in perpetuum dimisit, et aliis plerisque largitus est varia.

Deinde Pauli tertii Pontificis summi diploma (quo cavebatur ut exomolesi rite peracta, triduanoque jejunio, et sacrosancta synaxi suscepta, Christi fideles omnium peccatorum veniam consequerentur) religiosissime triduo quam moreretur adimplevit.

In mortis articulo, sacro primum ceromate delibutus, non semel pientissimi Jesu misericordiam imploravit, petiitque a suis familiaribus si quid acrius interdum in illos fecisset sibi, in Illius nomine qui pro nobis pependit in ligno, condonarent; remittebat ille vicissim non solum suorum familiarium sed omnium hominum adversum se noxam. Et frequenter divum Hieronymum, quem praecipuum habuit dum viveret inter Divos patronum, inclamabat, ut, detersa omnium vitiorum in hoc mundo contracta macula, se Domino Jesu conciliaret. Postremo, ubi destituisset cum sermo, infinities crucifixi typum osculabatur, et sublata manu se crucis signaculo identidem muniebat. Ac dum talia verae pietatis argumenta designat vir laudatissimus, animam Christo reddidit.

Et ut paucis rem totam complectamur: natus est anno Domini quadringentesimo septuagesimo octavo; egressus vero decimum octavum aetatis annum, sub domino abbate a Kynlos domino Guilielmo Galbreth, factus est Cisterciensis instituti candidatus; deinde, revoluta nempe anno, est regulam divi Benedicti professus, et serie quadam decenti paulatim in sacerdotii gradum proventus; insignitus nimirum sacerdotis caractere sub praesule Rossensi, ultima quadragenarii jejunii hebdomade; ac tertio Paschae die, proxime cum fuerat initiatus, suum primum sacrum peregit. Idque contigit sub novitiatu domini Davidis Spensi, cujus (etiam tum diaconus) in his quae ad caeremonias religionis spectant institutor dominus Thomas fuit. Post aliquot vero annos, justa videlicet de causa, a domino Guilielmo Culross declaratus est monasterii a Kynlos abbas: et a praesule Brechinensi cognomento Meldron in abbatem sub festum Joannis Baptistae inunctus, ad suum monas-terium rediit; rursus in celebritate assumptionis Beatae Mariae Virginis et Matris primum suae in abbatem promotionis sacrum magno nec minus religioso ornatu peregit. Ab eo vero tempore, in constituendo suo monasterio, in adversariorum contentione, in instaurandis per vetustatem ruinosis aedificiis, in ponendis et excitandis novis aedibus, in emendis cum ad usum suae familiae tum sacrificiorum vasis argenteis et sacris vestibus, in cogendis aliquot collapsis monachis in ordinem, et id genus aliis pene infinitis, totus fuit.

Ac quum videret ab aetate se in communem mortem properare; ut suis in longam consuleret aetatem laboribus, anno sexagesimo postquam natus erat, virum omnibus modis celebratissimum, et ecclesiae Moraviensis subdecanum, M. Robertum Reid, nunc Meaenatem meum, in futurum abbatem delegit. Post successoris electionem annos plus minus septem vixit. In summa, ab eo anno quo primum editus est in lucem dominus Thomas ad extremum vitae diem, etiam ipsius confessione, annos septem et sexaginta absolvit. Tertio autem Calendas Januarii delatus ad monasterium sub noctem in sepulchro a se constituto proxime ad summam aram tumulatus est.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE.

AMEN.

Tumulus Reverendi Domini Thomae Crystalli, Abbatis Monasterii a Kynlos bene meriti, per Joannem Ferrerium Pedemontanum.

Si posset pietas mortis cohibere furorem,
 Haud foret extinctus relligionis honos.
 Si recti officium posset consternere mortem,
 Viveret officiis officiosus homo.
 Si structura queat Parcarum vincere leges,
 Vicerit hic tetrae stamina iniqua Deae.
 Nulli relligio major; solennia Divum
 Tam sancte excoluit, munere, thure, prece.
 Intulit hic Tyrias vestes, atque aurea dona,
 Queis chorus ornatus prodeat ante Deum.
 Instaurat templum, supremi et culmina tecti
 Jamdudum pulchris texerat imbricibus.
 Arcem constituit, magna atque palatia : fixa est
 Ædes jam multis conspicienda locis.
 Sustulit et lites longo molimine natas,
 Ut referat liber libera jura suis.
 Restituit lapsos Μοναχοῦς, formavit et auxit
 Hinc Cerere, hinc Baccho, muneribusque piis.
 Largus in affines, multos celebrare Hymenaeos
 Edoctuit, largus munere, consilio.
 Quod mirere magis, post funera prospicit (ut se Mortalem novit) linquere posse parem.

Virtute insignem Robertum signat, et addit
 Imperio, huic cura est relligio, studium.
 Nullus post Reges, jacta et fundamina sacrae
 Ædis, in hunc statuit commoda plura locum.
 O nimium faciles Parcae, quae abrumpere vitam
 Audetis, cui par vivere posse diu est.
 Sed frustra audetis; coelum sic reddite, vitam
 Pro morte aeternam, dulciaque arva date.
 Vos etiam ô Superi, vestrum defendite Μουσῶν :
 Accipite hanc animam moenia in alta, choros.
 Dia Parens Virgo, extinctum ne sperne ministrum,
 Saepe tuis aris dona Sabaea tulit.
 Vos fratres, cumulate piis altaria donis :
 Dicite Iô Jesu, sic bene erit cineri.

Alter.

Chrystallae gentis laus maxima, maxima Kynlos
 Cura decusque simul, conditur hoc tumulo.
 Non tamen hic tumulus totum capit; altera terrae
 Pars cedit, coelique altera regna subiit :
 Sunt igitur tumulo lachrymae, bona verba, precesque ;
 Sic par est manes condere rite pios.

Obiit anno suae aetatis sexagesimo septimo, ea nocte quae sequitur quartum Calendarum Januarii, hora pene undecima, Strathily, 1535.

TO ΤΕΛΟΣ.

Hujus abbatis tempore dominus Joannes Górdonius, comitis
 Alexandri filius natu major, quorundam nebulonum impulsu, anno Domini 1515, die 27 mensis Decembris, irrumpebat sub vesperam in adyta Monasterii a Kynlos, ac scrinium cujusdam honestae matronae dominae Margaretae Mouat, in quo asservabantur aliquot scripturae cum nonnullis pecuniis, confregit. Suppilatis quoque scriniis, in Gallias profectus est. Sed numine ob scelus patratum agitatus, non potuit apud Gallos diutius vivere, Scotiam subinde cogitans. Ubi rediisset, nequivit alicubi conquiescere nisi in Kynlos: quo in loco gravatus morbo vitam morte commutavit duobus annis post scelus admissum, eodem mense, die vero quinto; exemplum sacrilegis praebens, quae poena eos maneat. Quotquot sunt eum comitati in effringenda ecclesia a Kynlos, paulo post mortui sunt omnes turpiter, uno excepto Jacobo Dumber a Tarbate, quem poenituit facti, et veniam petendo obtinuit.

Sub hoc abbate suscepti sunt in monachatum viri qui sequuntur:—

Primum, dominus Patricius Fothiringame, qui obiit nostro tempore 1532, mense Augusti, mane in divi Bernardi festo. Interfuit funeri Robertus abbas.

Dominus David Murray, qui e Scotia profectus adhuc vivere dicitur.

Dominus Jacobus Pont, aliquando supprior, nunc confessor, vir probus; de quo in vita Thomae abbatis plura scribimus.

Dominus Valterus Hethone, cantor chori: de hoc viro plura in vita Thomae abbatis.

Dominus Robertus Comynus, dudum guardianus, nunc granorum custos.

Dominus Joannes Person, nunc institutor novitiorum Belloci, sub Roberto abbate Kynlocensi suo, et Belloci priore.

Dominus Joannes Smyth, nuper supprior, jam monachorum confessor, simul et bursarius.

Dominus Servanus Browne, nunc piscationum custos.

Dominus Gulielmus Browne, nunc sacrista.

Recepit et adolescentulum alterum bene litteratum Jacobum Dekison, una cum domino Gulielmo Browne. Sed cum puer non posset monachus labores perferre, volens in novitiatu demissus est, qui eo anno apud patrem suum vitam morte commutavit.

Dominus Patricius Toud, laicus monachus, qui obiit A.D. 1637, die decimo septimo Maii, sub Roberto Abbate.

Dominus Thomas Masone, qui nuper post longam aegritudinem die Jovis decimo quarto Januarii, oleo infirmorum et sancto pomeridiana hora ferme tertia inunctus est. Ac die decimo octavo, hora pene quinta mane, ejusdem mensis, migravit ad Dominum. Egit annos plus minus triginta quatuor. Requiescat in pace. Amen. Mense Januarii 1535 calculo Romano. Fuit vir satis studiosus.

Dominus Richardus Sand, nunc oeconomus conventus.

Dominus Jacobus Portar. Is fuit ante monachatum sacerdos.

Dominus Thomas Haistie, nunc in Belloco supprior, sub abbate suo Roberto Reid.

Dominus Gulielmus Forsyth, nunc comes abbatis sui Roberti Reid.

Dominus Gulielmus Lyell, jucundus homo.

Dominus Adamus Riddall, nunc chori succentor.

Dominus Archibaldus Braidwod, nunc guardianus, seu cellarius potius, quondam Domini Thomae abbatis comes primarius.

Dominus David Spens jam sub Roberto abbate prior, vir adultae aetatis, 3 cal. Aprilis oleo infirmorum et sancto hora octava mane inunctus est, ac in crastinum, hora pene septima, 1538, migravit ad Dominum. Egit annos plus minus septuaginta quatuor, de quorum numero quinquaginta novem in monachatu complevit. Requiescat in pace. Fuit vir certe pius et humanus.

Item 1539, Dominus Joannes Person, vicesimo sexto Decembris, post longam et variam aegrotationem migravit ad Dominum.

ABBOT ROBERT REID.

De hoc viro qui vivit, et cum eo agimus familiariter, tantum consignabimus paucula quae contexendae historiae aliquando inservire possint. Primum nobili simul et honesto loco natus in Akynheide utrosque claros habuit parentes; Joannem Reid patrem, qui cum Jacobo ejus nominis quarto Scotorum Rege apud Floddun, viz., in Northumbria, occubuit; Bessetam Schanwelle matrem, germanam viz. abbatis a Cupro domini Joannis Schanwellii et Magistri Roberti Schanwellii nunc etiam vicarii a Kirkaldii. Educatus est apud avunculum magistrum Robertum, Archiepiscopi Divi Andreae officialem, in ipsa urbe Divi Andreae, ubi artium liberalium et magister in collegio Divi Salvatoris, sub collegii praeposito M. Hugone Spens theologo clarissimo, creatus est. Deinceps cum esset moribus spectatissimus electus est in successorem honesti viri subdecani Moraviae domini Gulielmi Winchester: post paululum vero temporis per mortem domini subdecani ita egit in eo munere ut duobus praesulibus Moraviae, hoc est magistro Jacobo Hapburn, et domino Roberto Schawe, fuit longe gratissimus, et sub his egit officialem (quam vocant) non inepte. Habebat dominus Robertus Schawe in animo hunc deligere in successorem suum, nisi mors immatura illius conatum abruptisset. Interea tamen multis nominibus satagebat rerum suarum dominus Thomas Chrystall ut in constituto vel potius restituto per se monasterio non oscitantem relinqueret successorem. Obtinuit itaque, quamvis aegre, ut M. Robertus Reid, quo de nunc agimus, hujus loci provinciam in se reciperet; id quod factum est sub anno domini 1526. Anno vero domini 1527 profectus est Robertus Reid Romam, pro diplomatibus monasterii a Kynlos, in pontificatu Clementis septimi, paulo post eam cladem quam Borbonius

Dux urbi intulit. Signatis tandem diplomatibus, sub initium anni 1528 urbem reliquit, Scotiam identidem cogitans. Tunc temporis nos, exacto pene triennio, Parisiis magisterium (quam dicunt) liberalium artium acti eramus, atque oblata conditione, cum esset in animo horum mores agnoscere, addidi me Mri. Roberti Reid comitatui, conciliatore viz. viro Scoto Roberto Richardino, qui exegesin in Divi Augustini regulam conscripsit. His itaque auspiciis in Scotiam veni; sed de nobis paulo inferius. Nunc ad M. Robertum Reid properandum est. Solvens Lutetia patronus jam noster paulo post pascha Dieppam venit, ubi, transmissa ad Reyam mari, Londinum profectus est, ac deinceps in Scotiam et in Kynlos. Sub autumnum, compositis cum predecessore suis rebus, ex Kynlos Edinburgum rediit, et illic apud minores fratres, domini Gavini Dumbar Aberdoniarum praesulis ministerio, in abbatem inunctus est. Post, rediens ad monasterium, ex more suo, conventu est exceptus, et in capitulum admissus, ut fit, omnium patrum erga se obedientiam suscepit. Deinde litem majorum oscitantia adversus Forenses pene extinctam de quadam possessione a Burgyne excitavit, ac etiam vicit, cum ipsis Forensibus; in qua obtinuit, recto iudicio, duas suo monasterio cymbas. Curavit etiam per literas regias pagum suum a Finderne in baroniam burgum (sic vulgo loquuntur) cooptari. Nuper quoque portionem piscationum unius cymbae quam occupabant Forenses, annumerata operanti quadam pecunia, redemit. Sub annum Domini 1530 accepit in commendam monasterium Belloci, in quo multa quotidie digna posteritate facit. Ibi hoc anno 1537 suscepit juvenes in monachatum quinque, quos adjecit duobus aliis paulo ante a se receptis; ac indices parat lapides ad templi ejus loci (quem vocant navem) construendum. Sub annum autem Domini 1533 missus est ab rege Jacobo ejus nominis quinto, una cum Aberdonarium praesule domino Gulielmo Stuart, legatus ad Henricum ejus nominis octavum Anglorum Regem, pro pace ineunda inter Scotos et Anglos; quod etiam obtinuit. Rursus solus ad eundem regem missus auspiciousissime munus suum peregit. Inde semel atque iterum ab Henrico rege multis vasis argenteis donatus ad suos rediit. Item bis legatus in Gallias ad Franciscum regem, ejus nominis primum, pro sui regis matrimonio, profectus est sub annum Domini 1535 primo, deinde sub annum 1536. Nunc et aliquot annos inter Jacobi quinti Scotorum Regis consiliarios non infimam partem tenet merittissime, cum ob juris utriusque peritiam tum vitae modestiam, qua plurimum valet. Habet etiam resignationem vicariae a Kirkaldy ab avunculo suo magistro Roberto Schanwelle, qui adhuc vivit. In monasterio autem a Kynlos parat quotidie multa ad novas viz. structuras, et hoc anno 1537 tres arcus in claustris angulis extruxit; nunc manum admovit novo columbari proxime ad monasterii moletrinum; identidem ad fornices magni cubiculi abbatis cum aulae suae instauratione. Instituit praeterea satis copiosam in omni disciplinarum genere bibliothecam, quam nos alio libello designavimus, et ne quid desit jam aggredietur domum elegantissimam quadrato lapide in quo libri asserventur. Hujus abbatis reliqua quae quotidie facit vel etiam facturus est, si vita suppetat, observabit et in commentarium mittet posteritas ut puto gratior. Suscepit hic abbas sub initio sui magistratus in monachatum dominum Thomam Broun, nunc superiorem; et cum eo alterum cui nomen est domino Jacobo Burt, juvenem ad literas aptum satis, si animum intenderit suum: hos duos meae curae traditos, quantum licuit per eorum in religione occupationes, ad bonas literas et universam philosophiam inflammare non destiti hos quinque annos totos. Suscepit et biennium abhinc optimum juvenem dominum Adamum Eldar, primum artium magistrum Parisiis creatum, et cum eo bonae indolis puerum dominum Joannem Capronium in humanioribus literis bene eruditum. Quantum uterque debeat nostris musis et rectis admonitionibus dicent (scio) melius nobis.

JOANNES FERRERIUS PEDEMONTANUS.

Nunc de nobis pauca dicamus, quemadmodum recepimus nos paulo ante facturos apud gentem ignotam, exemplo Hieronimi et aliorum illustrium scriptorum, qui suas etiam vitas literis consignarunt, non ad ostentationem, sed ut in cognitione historiae posteritati consulerent; ita Æneam fecisse legimus apud Virgilium, cum de se in hunc modum loquitur.

Sum pius Æneas victos qui ex hoste Penates Classe veho mecum.

Itaque, si quis forte requirat patriam nostram, velim intelligat esse Italiam, ex Augusti Caesaris descriptione, qui usque ad Alpium radices Italiam designavit; sin Italiae partem cupiat agnoscere quispiam, sciat esse Insubriam, quae et Gallia Comata olim dicta est. Ac in Insubria eam partem tenemus quam hodie Pedemontanam regionem dicunt. Oppidum autem est in Pedemontio quod suo nomine Cherium vocant, amplissimum et hominum frequentia et aedificiorum structura et divitiarum copia, unde majores nostri originem traxere. Proxime ad oppidum Cherii secundo lapide est aliud oppidum minus, quod suo nomine Rippa prope Cherium vocitatur, in quo lucem aetheriam primum nascentes vidimus sub annum Domini 1502, calculo Romano, in festo Dominicae Annuntiationis. Parentes habuimus ex veteri et nominata satis familia per universam Insubriam non contemnendos. Imprimis Martinum Ferrerium patrem et Catharinam Finellam matrem. Avus meus ex patre fuit Gulielmus Ferrerius, vir consularis et probus, qui annos 103 vixit. Proavus meus ex patre fuit Martinus, avi Gulielmi pater, in re militari strenuus dux et conestabulus (quem vocant) egregius. Abavus autem meus ex patre fuit Thomas Ferrerius, Martini proavi pater, juris utriusque doctor et vir consularis. Sed haec in presentia de genere nostro satis. Primam illam meam pueritiam exegi Rippae; deinde, Cherium a patre missus primum literarum cultum accepi. Illinc transmissus Taurinum militavi sub studiorum humaniorum professoribus Mro. Georgio Carraria, Joanne Bremio, et Dominico Macanico, viris in re literaria minime contemnendis. Anno autem Domini 1525, hoc est nostrae aetatis anno vicesimo tertio, veni Parisios primum, ubi pene triennium totum exegi sub M. Morando, natione Picardo, nunc doctore theologo in Collegio Lexoviensi sub Joanne Tarlasio primario; atque tunc oblata mihi occasione videndae Scotiae cum Mro. Roberto Reid, nunc abbate a Kynlos, sub annum 1528 in Britanniam transivi; et cum eo in aula Scotiae tres fere annos vixi. Sed cum viderem sic meorum fieri jacturam studiorum, petii vel ut mihi potestatem in Kynlos degendi faceret, vel abeundi potius. Ille, cum nollet me missum facere, non gravate permisit ut in Kynlos vitam transigerem. Itaque toto hoc quinquennio vel in instituentis monachis, vel in studio meo privato, vel in commentariis aliquot novis edendis fui. Nunc autem hoc anno 1537, quo haec scribo, Italiam identidem (sin nihil impediatur) cogito. Imprimis tamen ad posteritatis memoriam hic consignabimus praelectiones et proborum authorum enarrationes per nos factas in Kynlos toto hoc quinquennio; deinceps subscribemus libellorum per nos eodem tempore editorum titulos et nomina.

Obiit sub hoc abbate dominus Patricius laicus monachus 1537, die decimo septimo Maii, de quo supra, in his quæ sunt nobis de domino Thoma Chrystall conscripta, locuti sumus. Anno Domini 1538, die tricesimo Martii, obiit dominus David Spens prior a Kynlos, vir bonus et annis plenus. Vixit hic in religione annos quadraginta septem, decimum octavum attingens cum creatus est monachus. Laboravit hic vir cum senio tum morbo gravissimo et continuo a primo die Novembris 1537 usque ad ultimum Martii; ac Idibus Martii, in templo a Kynlosse, se sanctissimo corpore et sanguine Domini nostri Jesu Christi munivit; similiter est oleo infirmorum et sancto tertio calendas Aprilis delibutus; postera vero luce migravit ad Dominum.

Hoc anno 1538 extruxit amplissimam bibliothecam, testudinibus tamen munitam contra ignem, ubi primum fuerat deambulatorium Thomae Chrystall abbatis: ac templum a Kynlos per omnes suas partes plumbo contegit. Contra dominum a Fynlater, nomine Ogylvium, lite quam ante annos sexaginta ceperant abbates a Kynlos de quodam agro in baronia Strahily, nuper vicit. Cum vicecomite Moraviae nunc abbati res est de salmonum piscationibus, et victoriam in re propria et aequa jamjam praestolatur. Suscepit in monachatum duos juvenes, anno 1538, unum cui nomen est domini Davidis Laurok, et alterum cui domini Archimbaldi Bradi 1539, ambos in Maio. Anno 1538 idem dominus Robertus Reid abbas particulam quandam terrarum in Strahily, quam occupabat Alexander Ogylvius a Fynlater jam ante multos annos, post varias juris disceptationes coram dominis parlamenti et rege, tandem recuperavit. Deinde cum Alexandro Dumbar vicecomite Moraviae et Forensibus de aquis a Finderne ita egit, ut quatuor annos totos sibi et monasterio acquisiverit piscationes, ob errata illorum adversus servitutem quam debebant monasterio, ac postremo illos, ut novis conditionibus feudum piscationum a se acciperent, summo et recto jure coegit. Eodem quoque tempore Gulielmum Urquhart periclitantem in hereditate sua per eundem vicecomitem Moraviae ita juvit, ut sit vicecomes sua opinione frustratus, et Gulielmus suo jure, nova quadam per regias literas sasina, in integrum restitutus. Interea in suo monasterio locum ipsum optimis structuris ita exornavit ut post fundatores reges nullus unquam praedecessorum tanta et talia fecit. Primo columbare amplissimum et fortissimum in morem pyramidis construxit; deinde aedes totas, ubi solet diversari ipse abbas, a fundamentis excitavit, adhibitis in inferiori loco ubique fornicibus, magnifica et illustri structura. Atque ustrinum tale crexit quale non facile in Scotia reperias; et proxime ad ustrinum amplissimum domum posuit in qua brassicum paratur; et superiori loco duo horrea ampla valde, ubi grana ad usum monasterii servantur. Utque commodius cum lapides tum ligna e remotissimis locis ad structuras quas moliebatur importaret, longam navim paravit veluti biremem quae viginti quatuor remis ageretur. Anno 1540 aedificavit navem templi a Belloco magnifice ac imbricibus ex quereu paratis magno sumptu. Turrin praeterea campanarum quam decusserat tonitru eleganter restituit. Anno vero 1544 demolitus est illic aedes prioris vetustas simul et rimosas, in quarum locum crexit amplissimam et illustrem domum, cum sex in inferiore loco fornicibus.

Anno 1540, sub Jacobo, ejus nominis quinto, Scotorum rege, declaratus est et inunctus episcopus Orchadensis; ubi quotidie multa parat ad veteres restituendas structuras et novas item aedificandas. Dum ego haererem in Galliis, ad ornamentum suae domus a Kynlos adduxit e Dieppa virum bonum et tamen peritum plantandi et inserendi fructiferas arbores, nomine Gulielmum Lubias, statura procerum et pectore candidissimum; erga optima quaeque, quae multa in his hortis et circa locum, adde et universam Moraviam, effecit utilia valde atque spectatu dignissima; nihil enim est quod possis in preclaro et strenuo homine desiderare amplius nisi careret altero pede, quem ictu bombardae dum prope Massiliam sub suo rege Francisco, ejus nominis primo, in bello navali adversus Hispanos pugnat ardentissime, amisit; est etiam peritus chirurgiae, ut qui multos juverit in obligandis vulneribus toto hoc quinquennio per universam Moraviam.

Ego vero, cum multis precibus et literis ejusdem abbatis revocatus, tum ut mihi plus otii suppeteret in recolligendis meis studiis, sub annum Domini 1540 in festo Paschatis redii in Scotiam; ubi offendi dominum meum declaratum episcopum Orchardensem, a quo sum acceptus humanissime; atque ut ultro mihi reduci gratificaretur, nullo meo impulsu, sed sua sponte, decrevit mihi quotannis quadraginta libras monetae scoticae pro meis stipendiis, ac simul impensam mihi uni meo famulo et duobus equis; et ut hoc ipsum esset fixum sine fraude et dolo malo, amborum literas confecit mihi in hujusce rei testimonium publicas, quibus appendet sigillum commune a Kynlos, cum monachorum omnium subscriptionibus ut vocant manualibus. Eodem anno sum illum euntem ad Orchades comitatus, ut propius ea spectarem quae a veteribus de illis insulis consignata sunt literis. In reditu ab Orchardibus traduxit quinque juniores monachos Belloci ad Kynlos, quos mihi melioribus literis tradidit imbuendos, qui fere triennium apud me fuere, non omnino frustra; ac multo melius elli promovissent, nisi extincto rege omnia statim essent turbari coepta, ut neque illi justam operam navare literis, neque ego, multis curis distractus, commode eos instituere potuerim; quare eos dimisi ante tempus ut ad suum redirent monasterium; quorum nomina sunt quae sequuntur; dominus Thomas Tognius, dominus David Dason, dominus Joannes Crauford, dominus Jacobus Pop, dominus Gilbertus Gray. Et quia jam mihi non licet, per has turbas quae universam Scotiam occuparunt extincto Jacobo rege, otium meorum tueri studiorum, rursus decrevi primo quoque tempore in Gallias redire. Interea, dum haereo in Kynlos his annis exactis, ne nihil facerem, libellos aliquot qui sequuntur meis auditoribus quam planissime a me fieri potuit enarravi, viz. Secundum librum De copia Erasmi : Item, Orationem Ciceronis pro Q. Ligario : Item, primum librum Officiorum Ciceronis : Item, Dialecticam Trapesontii : Item, libros decem Ethicorum Aristotelis : Item, Topica Ciceronis : Item, Rhetoricen minorem Melanchthonis, cum schematibus : Item, Rhetoricen Melanchthonis majorem : Item, Sphaeram a Sacrobosco. Item, Bucolica Virgilii. Item, Georgica. Item, librum primum De copia Erasmi. Item, Arithmeticam nostram. Item, dialogum primum Physicorum Fabri. Item, Universam logicam Aristotelis, cum praedicabilibus Porphyrii. Item, libros quinque Physicorum Aristotelis. Item, libros duo Politicorum Aristotelis. Item, primi libri Sententiarum decem distinctiones. Item, Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos. Item, quinque primos libros Augustini De civitate Dei.

Anno 1541 una cum episcopo Aberdonensi missus est legatus ad Angliae regem de controversia quadam limitum utriusque regni, in quo nihil est confectum, sed ampliatur in aliud tempus negotium. Anno 1542 una cum domino ab Erskyne datus est arbiter a Jacobo rege Scotorum in rem praesentem de limitibus Scotiae cum Anglo. Adfuerunt utrinque multi; sed post longam disceptationem, cum non satis conveniret inter partes, ampliatur est negotium ad futurum conventum Anglorum Eboraci, id est vulgo York, et discessum est ab utraque parte. Deinceps una cum domino Erskyne itum est ad illud publicum concilium Anglorum, atque iterum productum est dum clam paratur ab Anglo exercitus in Scotiam; nec permiserunt qui erant in consessu illo Anglico legatos Scotos vel scribere in patriam, vel ad suos redire, ne forte suo regi narrarent quae per fraudem illic gerebantur, donec collectis copiis simul cum exercitu fines Scotiae ad quinque dies ipsi Angli occupavissent.

Sub annum 1538 dominus abbas accivit sibi pictorem An-dream Bairhum in arte sua egregium, sed hominem quidem tractatu difficilem et contentiosum, non minus animi impotentia laborantem quam corporis imbecillitate, ut qui utroque pede claudicaret. Eum tamen, quanta humanitate fieri potuit, toto triennio retinuit apud Kynlos, quo quidem tribus diversis tabulis pictura plane graphice depictis tria sacella in suo templo exornavit, viz., Magdalenes, Joannis Evangelistae et divi Thomae Cantuariensis. Depinxit quoque, sed pictura levioere quae nunc est per Scotiam receptissima, cubiculum et oratorium abbatis, simul cubiculum majus ante gradum quo itur ad abbatis cubiculum. Hoc anno 1544 in initio Augusti, cum dominus meus adornaret profectionem ad Orchades ex Kynlos per mare, cepi cum illo de rebus meis communicare pluribus verbis, presente nobili viro Alexandro Cummein domino ab Alter. Nam cum sperabam mox Gallicas naves ad nos venturas, in quibus res meas componere, et simul ipse navigare in Gallias; ac cum vererer per illius absentiam, ne quis forte, ut saepe fit, impudentius reclamaret, quasi res alienas et non meas hinc asportarem, volui dominum meum, praesente domino ab Alter, prius omnia oculis spectare et diligentius cognoscere quae essem facturus; quod et factum est nono Augusti, praesente et audiente domino ab Alter; mihiq; permisit herus meus, dum vidit ulla ratione me amplius retinere non posse, ut non solum quae ad me pertinerent, sed sua quoque meo arbitrato mihi sumerem [voluit], quod tamen facere recusavi, quin potius multa mea neglexi, ac tantum eos libros meos quos in secundo meo adventu ex Galliis mecum attuleram in Kynlos efferre optavi, neque illos quidem omnes. Cum tamen diligentissime curarem ne quis esset adeo improbus ut qui posset in rebus meis mihi calumniam struere, non potui tamen unius, in quem olim non pauca contulerim beneficia, effugere virulentiam. Sed illius conscientia viderit dum falsissime mentitur et qui sunt ejusmodi. Satis ego firmissimis ac sanctissimis testimoniis optimorum virorum causam munitam habeo : ne tamen desit forte talia de me suspicantibus nonnullis, quo tandem argumento adversus calumniantes me tueri possim, subjiciam hic quid parum grato homini talia de me blateranti per literas apud dominum Thomam Tognium monachum Belloci responderim; nam discedentibus ex Kynlos quinque monachis illius loci, qui fere triennium hic me legentem audiverant, non sum passus sine aliquot libellulis meis indonatos abire; ac tum forte extulerat hinc Adamus Eldar Vitas Plutarchi, quae ad me pertinebant; scripsi ad illum ut his meis auditoribus Plutareum meum quem ex me dono accepissent abeuntes, primo quoque tempore redderet; quod tamen recusavit facere dicens ne librum quidem unum me possidere qui non sit ex aere abbatis. Id cum sit per se falsissimum, ne alius forte ad hunc lapidem imprudenter impingat, non gravabor eam partem meae epistolae hic attexere qua Adami calumnias diluo; ea est quae sequitur:—

Quod scribis de domino Adamo Eldar non multum miror; putabam tamen per hosce dies quibus aquam potat et lac, eum minus desipere, sed pergit ille, ut video, semper sui similis. Argumentum quo se munit contra libros meos, similis est genii cum homine, hoc est, elumbe; non enim propterea fit ut libri sint alterius quod tale nomen praefixum habeant, quem ad modum et ta eum collegis tuis hoc fere triennio gerebas cucullam Cisterciensis ordinis, cum tamen diversae sis professionis; bona enim pars librorum habet nomen Thomae abbatis affixum per dominum Jacobum Pont, cum revera sint abbatis Roberti. Falsum enim est quod omnes sint redempti aere abbatis, cum antequam esset mihi de facie notus abbas complures habuerim Lutetiae libros, et plures intulerim in Scotiam primo meo adventu quam abbas ipse; ac cum versarer in aula non paucos emi meo aere Edinburgi; postremo toto quadriennio fere quot emerim Parisiis multi sunt testes in Kynlos qui viderunt quos in secundo adventu mecum advexerim, quod si recte supputes dimidia fere pars mea est meo redempta aere; nunquid non est meum aes quod habui ante cognitum abbatem? vel paravi postea meis sudoribus? Rectius sunt ista possessionis meae quam est quod Adamus divenditis caulibus sibi crediti horti adaptat in suos usus, sine facultate abbatis: ego vero nullius professionis sum praeterquam Christi, et quae mei labores mihi peperunt mea sunt; quicquid acquirit monachus acquirit monasterio non sibi. Quod frequentius in libris apposuerim nomen abbatis, hoc tribuendum est amori quo illum complector, quasi cupiam amicorum omnia esse communia. Sed rogo te qua fronte, quo vultu denique pergit quotidie ad altare in tam manifesto et tam amaro mendacio? Faxit Christus ut posthac sincerius de rebus nostris judicet. Interea tu per superiorem tuum Plutarchum, quem vobis hinc discedentibus dono dedi, optimo jure repetere curabis.

Haec invitus adjeci, optime lector, sed sic oportuit nomini meo consulere contra obtrectatrices et venenatas linguas; ut per meam absentiam non possum respondere meis maledicis, hoc saltem sit a me relictum de mea conscientia apud probos viros verissimum pro me testimonium bonum. Vale.

De reliquis vero hujus abbatis egregie dictis et factis in republica Scotica post mortem Regis Jacobi quinti illi mentionem facient quibus, de tantis malis praesentibus si quando emeruerint justitia et prior regni libertas, licebit, Diis hominibusque congratulantibus, veritatem ipsam literarum monumentis sine fuce commendare.

APPENDIX TO THE PREFACE. No. III.

LETTER TO ROBERT REID, BISHOP OF ORKNEY, PREFIXED TO HIS DISCOURSES, BY ADAM ELDER.

CHAPTER DISCOURSES BY ADAM ELDER,
MONK OF KINLOSS.

ADAMVS SENIOR SCOTVS,
 MONACHVS ORDINIS CISTERCIENSIS, Monasterij Kynlossensis, Reuerendo in Christo Patri ac Domino, Domino

ROBERTO REID Orchardum

Præsuli s.d.p.

DEDERAM ad Reuerentiam tuam ante sesquiannum, aut plus eo, binas literas, eodem ferè argumento conscriptas, antistes dignissime: breues quidem illas, & quasi tumultuarias: sed pro argumento longas, & concinnas satis: quæ reuerentiam tuam in primis certiore redderent de prospera & integra valetudine ingenui adolescentis, Galteri Reid, abbatis Kynlossensis nepotis tui: pariter & de eiusdem progressu incrementoque satis foelici in vtraque lingua, Latina videlicet & Græca: sed & linguarum earundem cognitione non contemnenda iam habita: asseueraueram eum trino etiam philosophiæ generi, rationali, morali, & naturali, non segniter aut defunctoriè, sed totis & corporis & ingenij neruis inuigilare. Subinde verò eundem, in disciplina morum atque vitæ honestate, suis maioribus, vitæ & morum probitate meritò laudatis, non dissimilem sese vbique & semper præbere. Tum denique de nonnullis rebus aliis, quæ tunc temporis apud nos gerebantur, reuerentiam tuam sedulò ammonueram. Quas literas equidem arbitror aut omnino periisse in tam longa terræ & maris peregrinatione: aut certè ab improbo aliquo interceptas in tuas manus minimè peruenisse: vt sunt parum sinceræ fidei in reddendis literis alienis hominum plerique, in quorum manus aliena scripta fortuito inciderint. Quibusquidem literis, inter alia, etiam rogaueram tuam reuerentiam (iam verò præbuerant mihi eam fiduciam tam familiaribus scriptis dignitatem tuam interpellandi, ista tua in omnium hominum negotiis honestioribus mira, non soli mihi, sed & omnibus nota facilitas, officiosa sedulitas, atque sponte sua, sine fastu, occurrens quædam promptitudo) transmitterentur Lutetiam ad me conciones aliquot capitulares, vt vocant, à me adhuc adolescente, horis quibus per præscriptas religionis obseruationes licuit, partim ex sacris literis, partim verò ex prælectionibus meis diurnis hinc inde exercitij causa excerptæ, triualique sermone meo congestæ, & in monasteriorum tuorum Kynlos atque Belli locicapitulis, diebus ab ordine nostro constitutis, vt fit, pronunciatae: dum eorundem monasteriorum fratribus adolescentioribus erudiendis, & literarum studiis in eisdem cœnobiis promouendis, iussu tuo præessem. Sed quæ fortè in museolo meo apud Kynlos, tanquam res non adeo magni momenti, nescio quo in angulo delitescens relictæ essent, dum Lutetiam, eidem nepoti tuo παιδαγωγός, te imperante properarem. Statueram autem tum, quum ad te scriberem, conciones illas his quas non ita pridem Lutetiæ eram commentatus adiungere: iunctas verò prælo subdere: si quicquam fortasse vtilitatis, quantumlibet exiguum, ex hisce studiorum meorum primitiis emanare lectori, aut fructus accrescere posset. Verum, posteaquam annum vnum, aut eo amplius, ad literas meas in eo negotiolo responsum expectassem: tandem, præter omnem spem meam, allata est quasi pars tertia mearum omnium concionum, reuerentia tua nec imperante, nec sciente: & ea, profectò, tam mutila, disrupta, blattisque crosa atque exesa, vt vix tandem recognorim schædas illas aliquando meas fuisse. Nihilo tamen minus, cœpi cuiusdam veteris amici, inter primos probi, & minimè mendacis censuram attentare, depromens vnâ atque alterâ paginam manu mea recens transcriptam, an ipse censeret dignas quæ prælo submitterentur. Qui pagellas ipsas oblatas, iterum ac tertio lectione percurrens, respondet non omnino indignas quæ typis æneis excuderentur, vel in hoc mandentur prælo (inquit) vt nouitij vestri (sic enim fratres nostros adolescentiores appellabat ille) conciunculis huiuscemodi leuisculis & velitaribus excogitandis & componendis ingenium suum memoriâque exerceant, siquando per obseruationes regulares & grauiora literarum studia eis liceat: vel vt sint veluti semina quædam huius tui argumenti, quò te (me aspectans) doctioribus post occasio detur easdem fusius tractandi, & ad iustam voluminis magnitudinem pro rei dignitate amplificandi. Ego verò censorem consultoremque meum haudquaquam mihi adblandiri persentiens, sed seriò loqui expertus: ex omnibus quas habui homilias aliquot contractiores (non quidem eodem temporum ordine, quo a me primùm congestæ sunt & pronunciatae: quasdam enim conscripsi ac pronunciaui vix dum ordinem nostrum professus) singulis diebus, quibus in ordine nostro homilia capitularis dari solet (Natiuitati autem dominicæ consultò duas adscripsi : totidem adscripturus Resurrectioni, si licuisset paulò diutius Lutetiæ commorari) singulis inquam diebus homilias singulas donans, submittere prælo studui, & easdem nomini tuo, dignissime præsul, nuncupauit atque dedicaui. At non certe tibi, vt cuius nomini, iam illustrissimo atque clarissimo, splendoris quicquam ex huiuscemodi scriptiunculis accedere posse existimem : sed verius, vt cui memet totum semel, secundum Deum, & omnia mea etiam minima, me certissimè debere sciam. Accipe itaque, antistes dignissime, qua soles fronte hilari, & ea mentis serenitate qua ipsam offero, isthanc strenulam meam litterariam, ineuntis huius anni felix (ita velit Deus Optimus Maximus, superque omnes) ac faustum auspiciam : munusculum, & si (non ignoro) dignitate tua haudquaquam dignum, tamen obseruantia meæ erga reuerentiam tuam & grati animi quaecunque indicium atque testimonium. Vt autem ad magna non sufficio : ita quod possum, id tantillum præsto libenter atque offero : maiora certè modò daturus, si voluntati par esset virium facultas. Christus Dominus & seruator tuam reuerentiam, atque Ecclesiam vniuersam Orchadensem, tueatur a malo, & omnigena benedictione felicitet. Lutetiæ, ex Schola Regali Burgundiana, Calendis Ianuariis. 1558.

Si vis mellifluos Sophiæ libare sapes,
 Et cupis ætherei regna beata poli :
 Si laudare voles cælestia numina diuùm,
 Et Xenophontæo vis simul ore loqui :
 Quisquis non vanis vitam traducere rebus
 Optas : sed sacris instituisse modis :
 Huc ades, hic non sunt puerorum nœniæ : at omni
 Tersa labore senis verba videre potes.
 Hæc & Aristotelis superant & scripta Platonis,
 Hunc ergo debes consuluisse librum.

Matth. 25.

VERERER ex hoc loco de laudibus Beati Bernardi patris nostri verbis pluribus iam disserere, fratres, si suspicarer verborum splendorem pluris apud vos fieri, quàm ipsam rei veritatem verbis nudis, eisque breuibus, explicatam : præsertim quum norim plerosque huius honesti cœtus viros, qui me & ingenio & doctrina longo interuallo superant, antehac de eiusdem laudibus, frequentius, prudenter, copiose & ornatè verba fecisse : atque insigniter adeò & splendide, vt nihil eorum prætermiserint, quæ ad locupletandam concionem honestandamque conducere posse videantur. Nihil tamen minus, quia id, quicquid est officij a patribus meis, quibus refragari sine dispendio famæ meæ non potui, in humeros meos impositum esse conspicio : vestra omnium solita humanitate ac benevolentia fretus in eo, quod habeo mox depromam, viduam illam pauperulam Euangelicam duo minuta offerentem imitatus. Interea mihi persuasum habens, vos ea quæ ex tenuitate & penuria nostra afferentur (tanta est in vobis spes mea) non minus grato animo accepturos, quàm ingentes illas eorum diuitias ac thesauros concionandi magnificos accepistis qui ante me in eodem negotio versati sunt, & de eodem sæpius dixerunt. Ipsi verò ex eo quod eis abundabat larga manu effuderunt. Nos etiam nunc quod habemus, Deo

Matth. 25.

SENTIRE videor equidem nunc, fratres, timorem omnem, qui in initio animum meum perculerat, mihi penitus ademptum esse : idque omnium veſtrûm ſilentio, ac beneuolò conſpectu fauorem indicante, factum eſſe intelligo. Proſpiciens interea latum campum, in quo exſpatiari dicendo poſſum, & ita amplum vt quamuis periti aliquot ante me dixerint, minime tamen dicendi materia aut verba ſint mihi cito adeò defectura. Interim tamen mecum decreui multa & varia breuitatis cauſa prorsus prætermittere, quæ non parum ſplendoris diui Bernardi laudibus viderentur allatura, & auribus veſtris quoque forſitan placitura, etiam ſi nullis verborum lenociniis ornarentur, aut phalerarum concinnitate veſtrentur, ſed vocibus nudis & ab omni elegantioris phraseos cura anxia ſemotis denarrarentur. Non enim libet Bernardi parentes, & ea quæ eius natalem præceſſerunt, in præſentiarum commemorare : neque Burgundiæ, natalis eius ſoli, claritatem, nobilitatem, antiquitatem auribus veſtris ingerere. Quum tamen habeat Burgundia nobilitatem antiquiſſimam, & antiquitatem nobiliſſimam, nimirum regiam, vt i varij non vulgariſ aut aſpernande authoritatis ſcriptores literis teſtatum reliquerunt atque prodiderunt. Nec etiam mihi eſt animus modò decantare magnifica diui Bernardi maiorum, auorum, aut parentum ſtemmata, eorumve feraciſſimæ ditionis amplitudinem, diuitiarum copiam, & pleraque alia in memoriam reuocare. Sed illis omnibus omiſſis, potius eius eximias aliquot animi virtutes nunc commemorare pauculis, & quasi obiter perstringere constitui, quæ verius censi debent ipsius Bernardi esse (nam ei diuina gratia tributæ) quàm ea omnia, quæ maiorum aut parentum opera fuerunt ei comparata : miram scilicet ingenij dexteritatem, morum suauitatem, mansuetudinem, religionem denique & vitæ puritatem. Quæ, quàm breuissime quum perstrinxero, post nonnulla suscepto argumento non adeò dissona, finem dicendi faciam. In Bernardo igitur adhuc puerulo, præter quòd tam fœlicis indolis fuerit vt artes liberales sit magna ex parte in pueritia assecutus, relicebat eximium quoddam diuinæ virtutis indicium, ita vt nemini iam esset obscurum, eum Spiritu sancto esse plenum, diuinitusque diuinis mancipandum. Vbi verò e pueris excessit, factus iam adolescens aspectu decorus, & ætate paulo grandior, corpore robustior, mente quoque senior ; aorum suorum stemmata nihili faciens, parentes, quantumuis maiorum fascibus & hac mundana vita claros illustresque ; ditionis paternæ amplitudinem, diuitias, mundum denique, & ea quæ in ipso sunt omnia fugiens, Cistertium locum sacræ religioni pridem consecratum, viginti duos plus minus annos natus, sese recepit, Christi iugo suavi collum suum submissurus. Eò etiam plurimos, eius virtutis & vitæ integritatis amore & admiratione accensos, pertrahens, & ad exemplum sui quasi cogens. Vbi cum illis tam piè, mansuetè ac religiose vixit, vt paucis pòst diebus Claram-vallem missus sit, dignus vtique abbas & pastor multarum animarum non sine numine creatus. Quod munus, vix cuiquam credibile est, quanta prudentia iuuenis, quanta cura & solitudine die noctuque administrarit, maturè intelligens de grege sibi commisso iudici summo aliquando reddendam esse rationem. Et proinde huius rationis reddendæ semper memor, terrore illius comminationis diuinæ sæpius est percussus, qua magis expedire per Euangelistam dicitur vt collo mola asinaria suspendatur, & in profundum maris demergatur, vnum ex pusillis scandalizanti. Sæpe illud quoque conterritus secum tacitus cogitabat, quid in extremo iudicij die fiet homini, totum gregem, quantum in se est, deperdenti, si viro vnum pusillum scandalizanti tam graue supplicium ac sæuerum decernatur. Quamquidem sententiam vtinam ante oculos ponerent plurimi huius nostri temporis pastores, nimium desides atque segnes : & qui pastorem functionem temerè nimis accedunt. Profectò non tam frigide oues suas tam longo intervallo toties subsequerentur, sed ardentius sinceriusque suis præessent ouibus, easque frequentius anteirent, simul & negotium Euangelicum castius agerent, verbis vitæque prædicarent, & Bernardum ore ac moribus propius referrent. Bernardus vtique minime sub modio reconditus, sed lucerna lucens & ardens in domo Dei, non passus est scrutarios & bonorum temporalium proxinetas, sacræ religionis & disciplinæ ecclesiasticæ prophanatores, non per ostium ingredientiæ, sed aliunde in ouile perrumpentes pedem ponere, verum vt decuit, abactos eos profligans, omni ingressu strenuè prohibebat. Siquidem honestatis ecclesiasticæ & religionis tuendæ gratia, nec ipsi summo in terris pastori, pontifici Romano Eugenio tertio, pepercit, quem multis verbis, hisque peracerbis, obiurgauit pro symonia, pro turpi quæstu & auaritia, inter alia vitiorum genera, e Romana curia non extirpatis. Sed vt increpationes eius in Eugenium Papam omittamus, quem laborem non subiit Bernardus etiam inter varia alia Ecclesiæ negocia grauiæ & variè vrgentia, vt multiplicem hæresim tunc temporis exortam, & malignas vocum sensuumque nouitates prorsus euelleret ac dissiparet? quam diligentiam non adhibuit vt Petri Abailardi sectam perniciosam funditus extingueret? In quod negocium tam strenuè incubuit vt ipsi Abailardo, eiusque errorum sectoribus cunctis, perpetuum silentium imposuerit. At verò Bernardo nostro, seruo Domini bono & fideli, supra multa constituto, id est, æternum gaudium ingresso, confestim inuenti sunt nonnulli, & hac nostra ætate etiamnum inueniuntur Bernardo valde dissimiles, quippe qui prædicant verbis, moribus, & vita tota, non quæ ad Christi gloriam, & veram sacræ religionis honestatem facere agnoscuntur: sed quæ conducere potius videntur ad venanda sacerdotia ampliora, ad illaqueandas dignitates, ad irretiendos episcopatus, & alia his non multum dissimilia. Bernardus verò Paulum apostolum imitatus, vocationem suam ob oculos suos semper habens, minime ad quæstum suum vitam aut mores instituit, aut quæstus gratia prædicauit, sed pectore sincero verbum veritatis tanquam ex Deo profectum tradidit in Christi gloriam. Non tamen isthæc a me dicta existimetis velim, fratres, vt quemquam acerbius taxem, aut acrius perstringam; tantum abest vt de omnibus loquar. Non enim inficias ierim permultos animarum rectores etiam hoc nostro æno re-periri, qui a veterum patrum & maiorum suorum præceptis institutisque & rectitudine vitæ, honestate denique morum haudquaquam desciscunt, sed suo munere legitime funguntur. Sed hæc pauca, quòd ægrè feram quorundam vitam totam, ac linguas quas deceret ex officio docere regnum Dei, seruire & immergi, pene dixerim, regno mundi : simulque quòd orbi Christiano exoptarem multos Bernardos pastores dari. Arbitror sanè quòd quemadmodum Abailardus, & plerique alij Bernardi vitæ integritate, morum suavitate, doctrinæ sanctitate, aliisque virtutibus propriam hæresim (quo vitio nullum serpere latius hoc nostro sæculo videmus) & inquinamenta alia respuerint, atque conculcarint : ita quoque facili negotio effici posse, si multi, inquam, essent Bernardi, vt permulti malè affecti, multorum Bernardorum moribus candidis & vita incontaminata allecti atque incitati, ab eorum erroribus & vitiis aliis renocarentur, & sese ad frugem reciperent meliorem, qui corruptis & deprauatis moribus nostris exacerbati, quotidie in peius labuntur atque deuoluuntur. Qui tamen malè de rebus humanis iudicantes minime sunt excusandi. Quanquam enim quotidiana ista vulnera dolentius sint deploranda, quòd videamus complurium ecclesiasticorum vitam ac mores malè audire, multúmque nocere Ecclesiæ, & frequentibus scandalis eius decorem candoremque deformare, non tamen idcirco ab Ecclesia, quæ semper dilecta Christi sponsa indiuidua fuit, est, & erit, debemus deficere, sed potius eam quisque certatim & pro viribus propugnare. Nam cuiusdam, penè dixerim, dementia est, nos, in quos fines sæculorum deuenerunt, statum rerum aliquem aut politiam absque morbidis prorsus vitiis statuere. Quod omnium ætatum exempla, multo plura quàm ipse vellem ostendunt, dum legimus, & etiam nunc oculis intuemur, inter pleraque alia non parum dolenda, parentes plerosque liberos suos in cunis adhuc vagientes, ecclesiis bene dotatis & curæ pastorali impudenter, nimis per fauorem principum & magnatum, præficere, et eos ipsos parentes ecclesiarum prouentus amplissimos, in equis, canibus, scurris & aliis non adèò dissimilibus, nepotum more obliquirare. Voce interim plusquam stentoria conclamitantes ecclesiarum & monasteriorum vberes prouentus in hospites & pauperum subuentionem cedere debere, eorum subinde filiis, egregiis videlicet animarum pastori- bus, ore butyro litis (pueri enim sunt) pulte lactea contentis. Quæ omnia, quandoquidem propter peccata & scelera nostra obtigisse videamus (nihil verisimilius mihi omnia reuoluenti coniiicere possum) quid aliud quàm ea deflere possumus? simul & orare, quo nobis exsuscitet ac tandem concedat pastorum princeps, & princeps regum terræ, Christus Dominus, pastores aliquos integros & spectabiles, qui his vitiorum portentis sermone, moribus & vita fortiter reclamant; sacram religionem, ac dignitatem ecclesiasticam vniuersam in formam meliorem redigant; hominum malè affectorum mentes castigent, & autoritate reprimant; hæreticorum & scismaticorum sacram religionem, atque adeò totum christianismum, ludicris scriptis ludificantium sectas longè à finibus nostris ablegent atque arceant; solos animarum pastores rectoresque dignitati pastoralis idoneos constituent, pastores bonos & fideles, suis ouibus pabulum dantes, verbis & exemplo in tempore suo. Dum autem viueret Bernardus noster nihil summi pontifices, nec ecclesiarum prælati alij, absque eius consilio definire in Ecclesiæ Christi causis volebant. Nihil reges, principes, magnates (ad quorum omnium etiam discordias tollendas, & negotia ardua conficienda, adiuuante Dei gratia, quàm aptissimus natura fuit, & talem sese semper præbuit) contra matris Ecclesiæ decreta & sacros canones temerè attentare ausi sunt, zelum Bernardi semper reformidantes. Quæ vera esse omnia, certissime sciet quisquis eius vitam fidelissimè mandatam literis, & scripta eius propria, gestaque (extant autem) diligentius perpenderit. Qui profectò si modo superuieret, non irruerent tam insolenti superbia in vineam Domini tot sacræ religionis osores, ne dicam dissipatores, non tam sæuirent impunè in matris Ecclesiæ præcepta, & canones sacros tot heretici, tot scismatici, tot pseudochristiani. Quid? vultis me paucis rerum perstringere summam? Non inuaderent gregem Domini tot lupi rapaces. Et proinde nihil vtilius Christi Ecclesiæ vniuersus Christianæ ditionis orbis hoc nostro tempore parum felici haberet. Verùm quid ego pluribus verbis querar? Nec enim possum, nec volo aliud modo dicere, nisi quod plerisque dici solet: naturam coruis & cornicibus rapto viuentibus vitam diuturniorem dedisse, quorum nihil interest salutis hominum: hominibus verò, quorum maximè interest salutem hominum curare, vitam quidem sed perbreuem concessisse. Inter rectores verò animarum, dum memini, te nunc nomino, ROBERTE pastor vigilantissime, quamuis iam in præsulatu tuo procul à nobis abes, gregi tuo inuigilans, & strenuè sedulòque adimplens (si quisquam alius) ministerium à Domino Deo tibi commissum (panem verbi Dei intelligo) vt fidelis dispensator : talenta tibi concredita ad Dominum cum lucro in fine reportes. Vt autem reuerentiam tuam ex hoc suggesto nominem (alioqui maior, quàm qui a me ex hoc loco nominari debeas) eo facilius sum adductus, quo te ab his vitiis atque inquinamentis, quæ paulò ante commemorauit, prorsus abhorre, & alienum magis ac immunem esse mecum agnorunt, qui te intime nouerunt omnes. Et quo maiorem adhibes diligentiam in euellendis & propulsandis ab ouibus, a summo pastore tibi concreditis, vitiorum (si quæ fortè succrescant) spinis : simul & serendis, aptè radicandis, alendis & promouendis omnium generum virtutibus vigilantior te præstas. Etenim pastor minimè segnis diligentissime procuras, vti decet seruum Domini bonum & fidelem, ne ouibus tuis vsquam desint iusta pabula ac alimenta. Idque præstas verbis & exemplo, hoc nostro æuo inuentu raro, nempe doctrina, moribus & vita tota, cum magna non solius animi tui, sed & ouium tuarum, eorum videlicet qui tuæ curæ pastoralis subditi sunt, lætitia atque voluptate, non iam tibi sed ouibus tuis viuens. Quod profecto est verè episcopum agere, & quàm maximè tibi viuere. Cæterum, ne forte arbitreris, vel quisquam alius, me velle tibi iam hisce verbis ex hoc suggesto sacris concionibus consecrato adblandiri, si quando huius concionis meæ rumor ad notitiam tuam aut illius fortè peruenerit, scias velim me multos habere in hac re eiusdem mecum sententiæ viros, eosque spectatæ fidei, & testes idoneos satis, si res in controuersiam veniret (tibi autem testis est sufficiens, & satis gloriæ sola mens conscia recti : nec testimonium aliud, nec gloriæ requiris). Nullum siquidem in hoc toto cœtu adesse video, qui adactus iuramento, non eisdem verbis meis (ita sanctissime deierare me posse arbitror) in primis subscribere velit. Deinde nec tuorum quenquam suspicor, Præsul dignissime, tam amentem, insolenterque vesanum, qui vel tecum domi versantur & operum tuorum familiariter spectatores fiunt, vel etiam qui foris perpetuò tecum degunt, qui mihi in hac causa refragari possit. Nec aliquem alium denique (modo probus sit sanique iudicij) qui aut velit, aut (conscientia propria reclamante) audeat. Vt non tam planè quam verè, verissime tamen de te scripsisse videatur, non contemnendi iudicij, aut eruditionis triualis quidam quum inquit :

*Quid tentem angusto perstringere carmine laudes,
 Quas nulla eloquij vis celebrare queat ?
 Clarus es eloquio, calo dignissime Præsul,
 Antiqua generis nobilitate riges.
 Commissumque gregem pascis, releuasque iacentem,
 Exemplo ducens ad meliora tuo.
 Ac velut exoriens terris sol discutit umbras,
 Illustras radiis pectora caeca tuis.
 Hortaris tardos, obiurgas, corripis omnes,
 In mala præcipites quos vetus error agit.
 Pauperibus tua tecta patent, tua prompta voluntas,
 Atque bonis semper dextera larga tua est.
 Nemo lupos melius sacris ab ouilibus arceat,
 Ne Christi lanient diripiantque gregem.—ANT. BARDOL.*

Cæterum scio te exoptare virtutes tuas laudesque omnes occultari potius, & tua solius conscientia latere, quàm vllius præconiis promulgari : alioqui dignæ quæ inclytis literarum monumentis consecrentur, ac in exemplum posteris quasi scopus vitæ rectoris proponantur. Ideoque, ne panegyricum absentis potius videar, fratres, quàm concionem afferre capitularem, hic rei huius finem faciam. Te etiam paucis nunc compellabo, non absentem, vt patrum tuum, sed præsentem, & iam me cupidè studiosèque spectantem, Galtere Abba reuerende. Et inter compellandum te dicerem, ætate quidem iuuenem esse, sed moribus & vita non item. Literarum quoque tam Græcarum quàm Latinarum, præter alias tuas dotes egregias, peritia insignem, si non metuerem adulator existimari, viderique velle te coram & in os laudare, & parasiti instar verbis titillantibus aures tibi demulcere. Itaque quia illa in apertum ex hoc loco proferre non decet eum, qui te à primordio adolescentiæ tuæ summo suo studio ad ea ipsa instigauit, stimulos meos tibi additos libens supprimo, malens virtutes tuas cunctas, immensis laboribus tuis vigiliisque vix credibilibus integrè ascribi, quàm earum partem vel minimam vllis submonitionibus meis imputari. Nunc autem aliud (quod mox audies) nstitui. Quanquam sum tibi in Christo filius, subditusque (Galtere Abba reuerende) & proinde minoris authoritatis ab aliquibus fortasse iudicor, quam qui te abbatem meum ex hoc loco officij tui admonere de-beam. Spero tamen te, si bene te noui, non ægrè laturum, si ego & præ-ceptoris tui non omnino, vti reor, pessimi iam olim καὶ τοῦ παιδαγωγῶ pariter officio defunctus, tui iam muneris & honestatis te commonefaciam, quem cognitum, & fidei meæ semel commissum sanctissime semper amaui, quem semper mitius foui, quem pari loco semper habui, quo patres filios habere solent, aut si quid filiis patribus charius esse potest, ob-ganniente nequiter tenebrionum ac veteratorum quorumdam improba vafrieie, quæ non semel nec simpliciter insidiata est simplicitati tuæ. Et quæ memet quoque, (nulla vnquam à me quod sciam laecessita iniuria) insidiosa calliditate, & ea multiplici, sæpius insectari minime erubuit. Quo fructu tuo expertus nosti. Quo merito meo nouit scrutator cordium Deus. Cæterum nihil præmij (ne suspiceris me hisce verbis in-gratitudinis te arguere velle) aut muneris a te exigere, aut dicendo ex-torquere iam est animus, pro beneficiolis, si quæ fortè in te alias con-tulerim. Non enim ingratitude vllius, aut volo, aut meritò possum te in-cusare. Sed propositum est mihi modo paucis te ad quædam eorum cohortari, quæ sæpius tibi persuadere, nullis testibus adhibitis, totis ingenij viribus toties sum conatus. Ea verò quæ sint tandem accipe, ac mecum in memoriam redi. In primis igitur non debet te latere, Abba, quàm arduum & graue onus tibi ipsi imposueris, quum multarum animarum curam sponte tua susceperis: quarum omnium extremo die, æqui-ssimo iudici Deo rationem reddere non leuiter, sed exactissime, cogeris: haud dubiè additæ & tuæ ipsius animæ. Nec etiam ignorare potes quàm sit animæ tuæ periculosum talenta tibi tradita ad Dominum sine lucro reportare (propositum tamen modo mihi non est multa in hoc inculcare, vtpote de verbo Dei seminando, ne concio longitudine sua vergat in fastidium. Nam hæc ipsa, & similia, alias & opportunè magis). Quæ quum ita sint: ad exemplum aliquod eximium, tanquam ad scopum rectiorem atque speculum lucidum te totum, vitamque tuam dirigere, atque actiones tuas omnes conformare oportet, vt bene tibi sit in primis: deinde vt animabus curæ tuæ concreditæ bene præesse scias. Quum autem hominem cupientem artis cuiuscunque aut disciplinæ peri-tiam quasi perfectam tenere, peritum artis illius, aut disciplinæ tanquam exemplar aliquod egregium pro viribus imitari oporteat: quanto magis necessarium credendum est homini religioso & abbati vitam moresque ita instituere, vt bonum quemque & religiosum imitetur, & viri huius vestigijs perpetuò insistere nitatur? Hoc idem tibi, abba, faciendum iam, si me audis, plane censeo. Verum tu fortasse, anceps animi, subinde ex me sciscitaris quem potissimum hominum archetypum primariumque tibi proponam imitandum. Longe ambages certè, sed summa sequar fastigia rerum. Benedictum haud dubiè aut Bernardum patres nostros si potes in primis. Sed quia scio me non tantæ esse eloquentiæ vt tibi persuadere id valeam, quod Bernardus ipse, quantumuis facundus, dum adhuc viueret, multis tuæ sortis persuadere nequiuit: proponam tibi non Benedictum, non Bernardum, non Antonium, non Hylarionem, nec quenquam ex grege veterum patrum mortuorum, sed viuum aliquem ostendam, eumque non longè abs te semotum, non autem ab Ægypto, Cypro, Alexandriae per mare ac terras euocandum (rogo vos, fratres, ne aegrè patiamini si in his longius progrediar, & plusculis verbis iam agam: de quibus profectò dum memini, iam tacitus pretercurrere non possum) hominem, inquam, adhuc viuum ostendam, Patrem Reuerendum ROBERTVM EPISCOPVM ORCHADENSEM non raro tecum sermones commiscentem & communicando admonentem. Eius vestigijs insistas velim, eum moribus & vita tota exprimere te exopto, eum archetypum & vitæ tuæ normam die ac nocte ob oculos proponere suadeo. Quem si imitatus semper fueris, in primis, nihil vnquam inconsulte, mihi crede, nihil tumultuanter, nihil minus considerate, sed omnia moderate ages. Dicta ac facta tua cuncta, modestiam quandam & constantiam, eamque maturam, semper sapient. Nosti enim nobiscum, abba, quod omnes nos tecum cognoscimus, quàm nusquam præceps sit patruus tuus, quàm nusquam temerarius, neque faciens, neque dicens (tanta est eius integritas atque comitas) nisi summa cum laude & dignitate. Vides quanta prudentia, quanta sedulitate, quanta cura operam semper impendit extirpandis radicibus & euertendis vitijs, si quæ fortasse apud ouilia sibi concredita suppullulent. Quantam diligentiam adhibet homo natus ad virtutem, seminandis, propagandis, atque prouehendis vbique virtutibus, vt omittam interim ea quæ multo maioris negotij sunt, quàm quæ concioni capitulari à me inseri atque coaptari aut valeant, aut debeant : qua æquitate, fide, integritate, religione, quantum ratione prouideri potest, totius Reipublicæ Scoticanæ incolumitati semper consultit. Qui & in hoc a rege illustrissimo Iacobo, huius nominis quinto, adhuc pubescente, a negotiis suis priuatis, ad publica regni munia obeunda atque tractanda, inter alios illustres, & iurisprudentiæ maximè eruditos, probatissimæ denique fidei viros, multo antequàm tu in hunc mundum nascerere, euocatus, non certè volens, aut quicquam tale apud regem aut regni proceres ambiens. Nec tamen adolescenti generosissimo eidemque regi nobilissimo multum reluctans aut onus illud respuens Reipublicæ Scoticanæ causa, quam priuatis commodis anteponendam semper duxit ; et tam multis regni negotiis, eisque transigi difficillimis, partim in ipso regno Scotiæ, partim verò apud exterarum nationes varias pro votis omnium in hanc vsque ætatem defungens, nec vnquam, aut domi, aut foris, vel in rebus minutissimis, humani generis fœdera ledere est visus : nec minima conscientiæ labecula detentus : nimirum nihil perperam aut contra æquum ac bonum vel sola cogitatione vnquam admittens. Præterea tibi perspectum est quàm sagaciter operam nauat auertere, dissipare, ac prorsus extinguere opinioniones reprobatas, dissectasque ab Ecclesia Christi sectas, & quæstionum inutilium labyrinthos, quos hisce turbulentis exulceratisque temporibus grassari vndique videmus. Quàm non crumpere novitates illas licentius, euagari longius, plus roboris sumere, altius radices agere sinit (neque opus est modo tibi recensere his longe maiora, nempe templa in laudem diuorum, partim à fundamentis per eum erecta, partim verò structuris & tabellis magnificis augustiora facta. Non enim iacent in tenebris abdita hæc, sed conspicua sunt & in luce omnibus exposita.) Nosti insuper quàm libenter, quàmque modeste secedere soleat, quum licet per grauiam amicorum & aliorum aures eius pulsantium negotia, & occupationes alias plurimas, quæ aut rarissimè aut nunquam ei desunt, ad literarum sacrarum lectionem, diuturna secum mediatione quàm suavis est Dominus degustans, & pectus suum bibliothecam Christi efficiens, vt ouibus suis diuini verbi pabulum bonus pastor debite subministret, nullum vel breue tempusculum in vanum præterlabi permittens : tantum abest vt in otio, aut fabulis quod superest temporis complurium more transigere velit. Quàm frequentes verò & suauis sint eius deliciæ, preces, Euangelia, psalmi, cantica, & alij sermones Dei, iamdudum exploratum habes. Videt autem vir prudens & integer, diligenterque considerat sibi contigisse huius mundi honores, diuitias, dignitates, & alia plurima temporalia : sed his omnibus, mortis & rationis reddendæ summo iudici semper memor, non fruitur tanquam dominus a mundo, sed tanquam minister & bonus dispensator, a Deo acceptis. Non enim honoribus (quæ rara auis est) superbit aut intumescit, diuitiis affluentibus animum non apponit, felicitibus rerum successibus minime insolescit, dignitatibus & donis aliis temporaneis non excæcatur, nulli prorsus voluptatum generi vnquam seruit : sed ea omnia decenter & modestè contemnendo aliis impartit, dicens cum Iobo : Nudi venimus in hunc mundum, nudi discedemus. Multi autem multos iam annos sunt experti, & singulis fere horis nonnulli experiuntur, quàm paterna cura & sollicitudine ipse, quasi egenorum & desolatorum pater, non solo consilio & verbis solari & confirmare solet desertos ac desolatos, sed quàm benignè rebus etiam & auxilio adiuuare consuevit, rectissime iudicans beneficium illud egregiè repositum in diem illum retributionis, quod in alterius calamitatibus humaniter & benignè ipse modo confert atque erogat. Id, quid est aliud, Abba quàm verè monachum & religiosum esse ? quin potius in medio mundo positum, mundo, & his quæ in eo sunt, verè abrenuntiare ? An non is dignus & aptus cuius vestigiis perpetuò insistas, cuius vitam ac mores semper imiteris ? Non enim est necesse iam tibi enumerare alia plurima charitatis opera in quibus exercetur eius beneficentia, veluti est pauperum, inedia simul & annis oppressorum, corporali alimonia pia subleuatio : puellarum, quibus tenuiores sunt fortunæ quàm vt possint exsoluere dotem, honesta in matrimonium collocatio : generosorum pectorum adolescentulorum complurium in studio literario munifica enutritio : vehementis illius amoris & ardoris literariæ negotiationis, quos iam inde ab initio & ætate adhuc tenella cœpit, tenax retentio, magnæ liberalitatis in bonarum literarum amatores & earum professores exhibitio. Et huiusmodi multa quæ dinumerare longum esset. Hæc autem sunt in quæ oculos tuos in primis defigas optarem. Hæc quæ vellem te noctu dieque cogitare, animo voluere, totis viribus imitari. Hæc enim sunt quæ te decent. Hæc tibi, tuique similibus qui pastorem functionem, quæ cælestis & diuina est, subiistis, necessaria comprobantur. Sed vnum hoc iam tandem memoriam meam subiit, quod omnium primum dixisse me oportuit. Patrum tuum diuitias reliquas, quantumlibet multas, non tanti facere, quanti adamatas bibliothecas (quarum vnam Kynlossensem, quo te melioribus literarum disciplinis, quum vacat, oblectes, manibus tuis nuper commisit) exquisitissimis quibusque libris abunde instructas. Non autem castella, non palatia, licet episcopo etiam magnificentissimo digna: non aedificia alia varia, & variis in locis magnificè satis per eum erecta atque decenter exornata: non aurum, non argentum, non agros, non equos, non vestes, non lapides pretiosos. Prorsus nihil denique optimis libris vnquam præponit. Qui, quanto plura, eaque optima cuncti generis meliorum literarum volumina, nullis parcens sumptibus, huc quotidie diligenter congerit: tanto pauciora semper se habere, & palam coram doctis dicere solet & estimat. Scio equidem ex gestu corporis tui, & tuorum oculorum motibus, quid apud temetipsum iam tacita cogitatione reuoluisti. Etsi non potes omnia patri tui benefacta, a me modo connumerata, pro voto tuo & aliorum in omnibus adæquare, eò quòd non sit fortasse tibi tanta rerum opulentia atque copia: at saltem illud diligentissime procura, & pro facultatibus age, ne illius magnificentia, aut vlla eius virtus alia, inertia tua atque socordia obfuscata ab hominibus merito censeatur: sed condecoretur potius. Imitare idcirco, Abba, si me audis, patri tui, pro facultatibus à Deo tibi concreditis, in primis eius munificentiam, deinde summam eius prudentiam, mansuetudinem, patientiam, sed ante omnia eius castimoniam atque vitæ puritatem. Nihil horum te prætereat quæ lex tua præscribit, in animabus regendis atque saluandis curæ tuæ commissis. Æstima ante omnia rectum melioris vitæ progressum a teipso verbis & exemplo semper incipere debere: et tunc te filiis in Christo subditis tibi rite & decenter dominari posse, si tibi ipsi prius scias ritè & decenter imperare, hoc est, parem verbis vitam agere, persuasum habens te his modis tibi in primis optimè consulere, gregi quoque tuo bene ritèque præesse. Nam ea demum institutio bene rectèque viuendi digna est, cui fides adhibeatur, & cui incunctanter etiam pareatur, quum instituentis atque docentis vita tota congruit sermoni. Abbas vocari viderique gaudes. Da operam diligentissime vt verè is sis qui videri vis & vocari gaudes. Procul absit quantum in te est omnis fucus. Etiam atque etiam cogita atque considera cui provinciae praefectus sis, & in quam excelsum honoris gradum ascenderis, vt huic omni ratione satisfacere studeas. Rationes omnes tecum ineas, quibus abbatis nomen, famam, laudemque sustinere, tueri & retinere possis. Vt existimes te animarum custodem, patrem multorum, non tyrannum. Recogita te dicta & facta tua omnia ad Rempublicam sacri ordinis tui & religionis semper referre debere, non autem ad priuatam cupiditatem tuam vllam aut libidinem. In summa meditare, & pro viribus enitere contendeque vt magnifica illa patrum tui omnis probitatis viri de te expectatio, quam inde ab initio cepit, perpetuò floreat vigeatque, vt nos cuncti te rectorem tanquam ducem dignam veneremur, insectemur, atque obsequamur : quò isthaec domus tibi, tanquam rerum diuinarum experientissimo moderatori concredita, crescat, augeatur, & continuè illustretur. Quae honestate, innocentia, integritate, etsi non anteferenda ; certè nulli in regno Scotiae hactenus postponenda venit. Si autem quae dixi (quanquam sunt & alia in patruo tuo argumenta non pauca, quae te ad eum imitandum, etiam me tacente, adhortari, admonereque possunt & debent) si ea, inquam, quae modò dixi nihili pendas, quod equidem spero non futurum, non solum te gregemque tuum in maximum periculum coniicies ; verumetiam nomini tuo perpetui dedecoris & ignominiae notam, ac maculam nullo seculo eluendam, haud dubiè inures penitus atque imprimes. Addito & hoc : praecelaram illam patrum tui famam, ac probitatem partim a suis maioribus acceptam, partim verò propriis virtutibus non modice adauctam, qui te domui huic honestae religiosaeque familiae, nostro (tantus est non solum in patrum tuum, sed etiam in eius nepotes, aut familiaritate aliqua ei coniunctos, propter eum noster & omnium amor) & amicorum multorum rogatu, praefici passus est, non modicè improbitate tua dehonestabis, atque adeò quantum in te est, valde ingratus, denigrabis. Patrum tuum imitandum tibi proposui, Abba, non quòd Benedicto, Bernardo, aut cuiquam ex cohorte veterum Patrum, qui iam in caelis aeternam requiem adepti beata—foelicitate perenniter perfruentur, praefendum impudenter & temerariè dicam. Aut quòd eum ipsum vndequaue perfectum denique censeam (hoc autem solus nouit scrutans corda & renes Deus) sed potius vt hominem timoratum & perquam prudentem tibi que iam cognitum & perspectum, nec procul abs te seiunctum : vt que quem tibi nepoti suo, gregi quoque tuo optime consultum maxime cupere certissime sciam. Et ne ceruicibus tuis onus aliquod viribus impar imponere videar. Sed hic longior fortasse sum quàm tempus ipsum postulat. Itaque finis esto, vbi verbum vnum addidero, quod vtique breue erit. Si autem ea que modo dixi præstiteris, Abba (præstabis certè modo volueris & conatus fueris, non enim deest tibi corporis robur, aut incolumitas, laus superis : nec etiam est tibi paruum ingenium, nec incultum, nec turpiter hirtum) nos filios in Christo tuos habebis non solum vigilantes (omnium autem nomine loquor) morigeros & obediens : sed tuorum etiam laborum ac vigiliarum memores, dum viuimus in laudem Christi pastoris summi, pro te orantes, decantare non desinemus :

Ergo pia ob studia & magnos durosque labores,

Ille Deus pacis det tibi pace frui.

Concedatque tuis succedant omnia votis :

Et bona successus adiuet aura tuos.

ANT. BARDOL.

Hæc autem omnia, vt post huius vitæ pericula exantlatosque labores patrocinate patre nostro Bernardo, a pastorum principe Christo, Domino, cum cæteris eius ouibus a dextris collocatis, læti pariter audiamus : Euge serui boni & fideles, venite, percipite regnum quod vobis a Patre paratum est a constitutione mundi, gratia ac misericordia Domini nostri Iesu Christi, cui gloria & imperium in secula seculorum.

INDIGNVM sanè videri posset, & reipsa insignis cuiusdam incogitantiae esset, fratres, caeteras anni festiuitates, tanto concionis capitularis apparatu certatim à nobis celebrari : & hodiernae diei celebritatem, inter caeteras praecipuam, non perinde concione pro viribus nostris celebri coonestari : velint nolint sceleratissimi Ecclesiae catholicae desertores quidam, qui hoc nostro aëo, inter alia, quae sceleratè suis scriptis moliuntur, blasphemias indesinenter euomunt, non solum in diuorum laudes, quae in domo Dei ritè canendo quotidie fiunt : sed etiam horrenda impietate, in sacrosanctae Eucharistiae (quam heresiarcha Lutherus placentam consecratam, & missae sacrificium, idolatriam alicubi appellat) mysterium & eius maiestatem cunctis fidelibus venerandam abominaciones pessimas effutiunt despuuntque : dum pios, & verè Christianos, hodie hymnis & psalmis laudes Deo concinentes inuiti audiunt, & amara maledicentia more suo irrident. Verùm dum tacitus mecum rem ipsam omnem considero, & eius dignitatem atque excellentiam intueor, intelligere videor nulli hominum tantam esse sapientiam, nulli tantam dicendi copiam, quae posset solennitatem hodiernam digno satis verborum apparatu exornare. Sed ego iam memor sententiae illius qui nec fallere nec falli nouit : quoniam si quis sapientiam desiderat, eam à Domino Deo postulet, & dabitur ei : et proinde eiusdem sententia fretus susceptum negocium exequi adnitar. Rogemus itaque, fratres, sapientiam Patris Christum Dominum, ac eius matrem illibatam, quo mihi adsit in hoc negocio, Spiritus sancti gratia, eulogium angelicum offerentes : Aue gratia plena.

Venite, exultemus Domino: iubilemus

Psal. 94.

DIV MULTUMQUE laborarunt prophanarum historiarum veterum & fabularum scriptores varij : eum, in peruestigandis & commemorandis perfectis amicis, tum in laudandis & tantum non in cælum euehendis, inter cæteros, Pylade & Oreste duobus amicis, amore mutuo coniunctissimis : quòd quum eorum alter, ob facinus quoddam insigne, damnatus esset capite, alter verò sponte sua asseuerauerit se idem ipsum crimen perpetrasse, vt amicum suum iam morti addictum morte sua liberaret. Nec multum absimile videre est de Pythia & Damone, duobus amicis amicissimis ; siquidem hoc animo inter se fuisse ferunt ; quum eorum alteri diem necis Dionysius tyrannus destinauisset, & is qui iam neci addictus erat paucos sibi dies commendandorum suorum causa postulauisset, alter vas factus est eius sistendi : vt si ille non reuertisset moriendum esset ipsi. Mira est hæc, fateor, & rarò inuenta amicitia : & eò magis probanda quo rarior est huiusemodi amicorum numerus. Verum sileat iam suos Pylades & Orestes, Pythias & Damones, cæterosque consimilis farine amicos prophana quæuis historia, aut verius poëtarum fabula :

Priscaque discedant (inquit ille) veterum mendacia vatum,

Nec muneris habeat fabula vana locum.

Siquidem vnus est non vni aut alteri tantum sed vniuerso hominum generi, verus semper amicus, Christus Dominus verè suspiciendus, amicè amplexandus, verè omnium ore & corde decantendus : qui vera & amica voce vltro clamitare minimè cessat, Venite ad me omnes pariter qui laboratis, & quocunque onere onerati estis, & ego reficiam vos. Nam quum summus Dominus & Deus esset, eò tamen clementiæ per amorem ardentissimum & veram amicitiam deuenit, vt, veluti suæ deitatis & immensæ celsitudinis oblitus, semetipsum exinanierit, formam serui accipiens, & homo in virginis matris vtero factus, non modo supplicium exquisitum, quum innocens esset & criminis expers, sed & mortem ignominiosam sciens & volens subierit, & mortem æternam, pœnasque acerbas toti humano generi iure inobedienciæ debitas, in proprio corpore exsoluerit. Quæ quum ita sint : equis vnquam inuentus hactenus est, aut posthac quis inuenietur, in veri amoris ardore cum amico eo conferendus? Certe nullus. Proinde quis tam saxeus, hæc perpendens, qui tanto salutari suo non exultet, non iubilet, non applaudat? Quis tam ingratus, & tanti amoris, adde & illud, tanti beneficij accepti immemor esse queat, vt non intimis præcordiis & pectore toto amet, non veneretur, non obuiis vlnis amplectetur, non psalterio & cithara modulatè decantet amicum eum, cuius studio, labore, cura, diligentia, tam graui periculo, nempe mortis perpetuæ eruitur, expeditur, liberatur? nisi si fortè reprobis quispiam Lutheranus, Zuinglianus, aut deploratæ mentis Calvinicus, pridem ore familiæ ascriptus, talis reperitur. Iure igitur nos, tanti amoris iugiter memores, inuicem adhortari atque exstimulare possumus & debemus, semper amico nostro Christo Iesu ore & corde occinentes, & impigrè, quantulæcunque seruitutis nostræ obsequium, psalmum læti offerentes : Venite, exultemus Domino, iubilemus Deo salutari nostro Iesu Christo, qui succensus igne amoris generis nostri tradidit semetipsum pro nobis, in ara crucis, oblationem & hostiam Deo Patri, in odorem suauitatis. Equis porrò in tantum sui obliuisci potest, vt amicum eum non exaltet, non summè diligit, non laudibus celebret, cuius benignitate sit extra aleam paupertatis constitutus? Nos verò omnes, quum in extremam pauperiem delapsi essemus, amici summi Christi Domini benignitate omni gratia diuites facti sumus, Apostolo attestante, qui ait : Gratias ago Deo meo, quòd in illo diuites facti estis in omnibus, in omni verbo, & in omni scientia, ita vt nihil vobis desit in vlla gratia. Sed quem putas tam effrontem & sui negligentem inueniri posse, præter istos nostri temporis Ecclesiæ catholicæ impugnatore impuissimos, & Christianæ religionis disciplinæque irrisores dementatos, qui si quando lethali vulnere percussus sit, eum amicum non amore & quidem ingenti prosequatur, non benedicat, non exosculetur, à quo curatum se & pristinae sanitati redditum persensisset? At certè omnes nos, quum saepe vulnerati grauius & saucij lethaliter sumus, amator nostri Christus diligentissime nos curat, & studiosissime saluti restituit, vulneribus nostris vinum & oleum infundens: quod ex parabola illius compertum habemus ab Ierusalem in Iericho descendentis, & in latrones incidentis, qui eum vulneratum spoliatumque, & tantum non animam efflantem, in itinere reliquerunt. Iure igitur optimo in voce exultationis & confessionis decantare tenemur: Venite, exultemus Domino, iubilemus Deo salutari nostro. Quis denique tam petulanter improbus aut amens credi potest qui, si quando in abyssum inciderit, non tota mente, pariter & voce, laudet & intonet amicum eum, cuius beneficio continuo resurgere, & ex imo (dum dico imum intelligo vitia & peccatum) emergere, eripi, & saluari possit? At nullus mortalium tam immunis ab omni labe peccati inuenitur, qui non quotidie in abyssum cadit, quum sacrarum literarum testimoniis septies in die cadet etiam iustus: et nemo mundus a sordibus, ne infans quidem, cuius est vnius diei vita super terram. Proinde si dixerimus nos peccatum non habere, nosmetipsos seducimus & veritas in nobis non est. Verum summus ille amicus noster & amator Christus, ex hoc mundo transiturus, amicam manum suam nobis porrigens, reliquit nobis pignus amoris immensi, nempe corpus suum & sanguinem, remedium longe efficacissimum, nolens mortem peccatorum, sed vt conuertantur & æternum vivant: vt si fortè in peccata quantumcumqueuis grauia delapsi fuerimus, eadem confitentes, & pœnitentia ducti, lacrimarum aqua abluentes, corpusque & sanguinem suum dignè sumentes, continuo resurgamus. Venite igitur, & exultemus Domino, & alacres psallamus Deo salutari nostro: Hæc est dies, quam fecit Dominus: exultemus & letemur in ea, quæ hodiernæ festiuitati ab Ecclesia catholica ritè consecrata esse cognoscitur. Hoc enim sacramentum, id est, corpus & sanguis Christi, sub panis & vini speciebus contentum, cui hæc dies, vt iam dixi, sacer est, nos amico nostro & amatori Christo, per immensum eius in nos amorem atque clementiam, incorporat, atque, vt ita dicam, inuiserat. Hoc sacramentum Christum nobis caput adiungit, cui etiam nos membra admirabili modo arctissime astringit. In hoc denique sacramento est fons & origo omnis gratiæ & bonitatis, etiamsi Lutherus impius dicere non erubuerit festum corporis Christi inuentum esse satanæ. Neque hoc solum dicere ausum est impurum os Luderis, sed Ludius Luderus, quum ludendo in odium Pontificis Romani indulgentias iam damnasset, & purgatorium sustulisset, liberum arbitrium exsufflasset, ecclesiasticam hierarchiam exturbasset, merita omnia denegasset : tandem os in cælum posuit, & sanctos in cælo esse negauit, & eorum merita & intercessionem nullius esse momenti procaciter asseruit. Sed & infandis blasphemis matrem Christi (pestilentissimam pestem Lutherum ad hoc ipsum in hunc mundum orcus excacasse videtur) lacessiuit, iniuriis innumeris affecit. Et quum peccator in ausibus nephariis à filiis Belial laudaretur, diaboli ministerio iam totus mancipatus, pudorem omnem exiit, frontem perfricuit, nec Deum amplius timuit, nec homines reueritus est, Ecclesiæ sacramenta sacrosancta contaminauit, quorum aliquot damnauit, & vt terræ stercus reiecit atque conculcauit. Sed nec his contentus satanæ satelles, verum aduersus Deum deorum quoque Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum loquutus est iniqua, nempe quòd in cruce desperarit. Tandem vt omnem Dei cultum externum exploderet (plenus omni dolo & fallacia ad subuertendum vias Domini rectas) omnes Dei laudes abrogaret, omnem piorum deuotionem extingueret, primum missas priuatas (vt eò vnde egressa est referat sese concio nostra) in despectum deduxit atque damnauit : tandem & solennes abominabiles fecit, postremò eò impietatis atque vesaniæ deuenit, vt pertinaciter negarit Christum in hostia adorandum, quum a sacerdote consecratur & in altari immolatur. At, omissis modo reliquis omnibus, in quo tandem quæso te Luthere, vosque Apostatæ dementati & execrabiles Zuingliani, atque Calvinici stupidi, maius sue charitatis argumentum euidentiusque summi amoris & dilectionis potuit Christus nobis indignis seruulis demonstrare, quàm in hoc sacratissimo sacramento, in quo sua ipsius præsentia corporali nobis amantissimè prouidit, clarissime protestando illud : Deliciæ meæ esse cum filiis hominum : & fidelissime præstando id quod Apostolis suis pollicendo prædixerat : Si quis diligit me, sermonem meum seruabit, & Pater meus diliget eum, & ad eum veniemus, & mansionem apud eum faciemus? in nullo certe. Iam verò sacrificiis vmbratilibus abrogatis, verum vnicumque sacrificium regali sacerdotio administrandum ab eo institutum est, etiam si vos, ô insensati hæretici, nimio furore aduersus Dominum, & aduersus Christum eius succensi, crepetis medij. Nemp̄e dedicatum est sacerdotium sacerdotiorum, sacrificium sacrificiorum, sacramentum omnium sacramentorum longè augustissimum ab ipso & ex ipso sacerdote sacerdotum, pontificum pontifice: qui idem est Deus Deorum, Rex regum, & Dominus dominantium. Qui & secundum multitudinem miserationum suarum misertus nostri, nolens nos dimittere ieiunos, ne deficeremus in hac via, verum corpus suum supra reliqua eius dona pretiosa, quæ immensa sua magnitudine & infinita numero sunt, pretiosissimum, nobis comedendum, & sanguinem bibendum, liberalissimè sub speciebus panis & vini tribuit, vt inde fiat in nobis fons aquæ salientis in vitam æternam. Qui manducat, inquit, meam carnem, & bibit meum sanguinem, habebit vitam æternam. In hoc certe adimpletum cognoscitur, quod olim à Christo Domino, seruatore nostro, discipulis suis, & in discipulis, Christianis omnibus dictum esse verè perhibetur: Ecce, ego vobiscum sum omnibus diebus, vsque ad consummationem seculi: dum in augustissimo eucharistiæ sacramento, sub panis & vini speciebus, ipse idem verè est, & nobis datur, qui nobiscum fuit in via, atque etiam ipse idem qui iam est & in gloria. Quid ad hanc diuinæ bonitatis benignitatem beneficentiamque accedere potuit? quid huic amori, amicitiae, atque beneuolentiae eius erga nos addi debuit? quid locupletius, excellentius, aut diuinius hominibus præstari queat? nihil sanè. Nam omnem largitatis plenitudinem transcendens, modos omnes dilectionis excedens, in hoc sacramento semetipsum exhibet in donum, & veluti prodiga quadam liberalitate ac libera prodigalitate impulsus, donator ipse efficitur datum optimum & donum perfectum. Certè si pateretur modo temporis breuitas possem viros plures trecentis, sanctitate, doctrina, & miraculis insigniter claros huc adducere, Lutherum subdolum, cum vniuersa cohorte sua maligna, in causa sacrosanctæ eucharistiæ prostratos ac prorsus debellaturos. Sed sufficit vnus Christus, Deus verus & verus homo, in cuius ore non est inuentus dolus, qui dolosam illam turbam mox percutiet, & spiritu oris sui interficiet impios. Ait enim: Ego sum panis viuus, qui de cælo descendi. Si quis manducauerit ex hoc pane viuat in æternum. Et panis quem ego dabo caro mea est pro mundi vita. Quid appositè magis aut clarius dici potest, Luthere insane? tuque Caluine, omnium quos terra Gallica vnquam habuit, nebuloso impudentissime? An non sufficiunt ista Christi verba, si quid vobis esset frontis, ad omnia vestra tela imbellia retundenda? Sed omissis Lutheranis, Zuinglianis, Caluinicis, cæterisque huius farinae monstris impudentissimis, Christum in sacrosancta eucharistia veneremur: et diem eius venerationi designatum, cum multa gratiarum actione, in hymnis & psalmis obseruemus, quantumlibet reclamet atque allatret satanæ synagoga, satanicè satanæ dedicata. Et cum Bernardo, patre nostro, dicamus, Discite, Christiane, quantum debeas diligere Christum, qui dedit nobis carnem suam in cibum, sanguinem in potum, animam in pretium, aquam lateris in lauacrum. Quæ omnia quum vera sint & catholicæ fidei vel maximè consona, caueamus diligentissimè ne nostrum quisquam indignè aliquando hunc panem manducet & sanguinem bibat: nam, Apostolo teste, qui manducat & bibit indignè, iudicium sibi manducat & bibit, non diiudicans corpus Domini. Et proinde vnumquemque diligenter admonet dicens: Probet seipsum homo, & sic de pane illo edat, & de calice bibat. Verùm apud se cogitabit fortè quis, neminem hominum inueniri posse, qui sese vsqueadeò dignè præparare valeat, vt vsquequaque dignus, imò, vt vsquam idoneus sit corpus Christi, cibum tam pretiosum, manducare, & sanguinem eius bibere. At is, quicumque sit, si tamen quisquam talis sit, apud se vicissim consideret, homini facienti quod in se est, Deum elementissimum gratiam suam nullo tempore denegare. Nihil enim tam cupit quàm nostris necessitatibus succurrere, & infirmitatibus mederi. Faciamus itaque strenuè quod in nobis est, fratres, hoc est euellamus, si quæ ruga, si quæ sordes, si quæ macula inhæsit. Si quid inuisum Deo cognoscimus, amputemus, et per pœnitentiam & puram confessionem abluamur & expiemur. Et sic ad sacrosanctum illud sacramentum intrepidi & nihil hæsitantes accedamus. Interim, Deum cunctipotentem obnixè rogantes vt, quemadmodum nobis corpus suum ad edendum & sanguinem ad bibendum, in hac via, ne in ea deficiamus, impartit: ita quoque nos, hac mortali vita defunctos, in sua penuaria cælestia deducat, vt cum beatis æterna & immortalis vita fruituri in secula seculorum fœlices delectemur, exultantes Domino, applaudentes Deo salutari nostro Iesu Christo, cui cum Patre & Spiritu sancto sit omnis honor & gloria.
